Do you know what the signal 1-4-3 which issues forth from Minot Light House means? Lee Anne Ciciotte does. Issac A. Dunham was the first Minot lighthouse keeper in 1849. The first Minot had funny, spider legs.

You did a fantastic job, kids!

A BELL'S NOT A BELL 'TIL YOU FIX IT-and Theo King works diligently to get the St. Stephan bells back in order as quickly as possible. (Derr photo)

Editorial

Tightening up

Saturday morning merchants arrived at their stores to find signs missing, flower pots overturned, flower boxes vandalized, trash containers ripped off their polls.

The now vacant Cohasset Motors has bullet holes through the windows. The owner of the Old Cohasset News Store on So. Main Street is getting not a little flack because he has not repaired past vandal damages...but then it's so difficult to keep abreast of new repairs.

It is quite likely flowerboxes will quietly start disappearing from village storefronts forever...if something isn't done.

There is presently a bill before the legislature which would make the police log public on a daily basis, to all. Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr. already provides the press access to the police report. For various reasons we do not publish the names of persons involved in vandalism, street fights, or minors found in the possession of alcohol. Neither do we follow-up on sentencings at Quincy Court.

Cohasset Police are tightening up on the rules for minors. Those who used to get away with a warning are now finding themselves in Quincy Court Monday morning. But when too much pressure is put on the courts by local communities...the judge starts handing out sentences like cookies.

Bells getting some noted repairs

By Peter Barnicle

The bells of St. Stephen's Carillon are silent.

They will be for a month or more while a team of experts refurbish the entire set of 51 bells which have hung in the Gothic tower of the Church overlooking Cohasset Common for more than half a century.

The Sunday afternoon carillon concerts have been a summer feature for many years. Visitors from all over sit in their cars parked around the Common to listen. Others bring deck chairs or just sit on the grass to enjoy the pristine tones of the great melodious bells booming from the tower. Many residents of the town don't even have to leave their patios to enjoy the music.

Exposure to the weather over the past 50 years has caused some deterioration to the framework and the bells weighing more than 64,000 pounds, according to Earl Chamberlain, the carilloneur.

"About a year ago it was brought to our attention that some work should be done to strengthen the fastenings of the bells," he said. "It was decided to have a complete overhaul."

Chamberlain, retired organist and choir master at the church, now devotes his time to carilloning and teaching others the intricacies of the huge musical instrument.

The Cincinnati-based firm of J.I. Vardin Company, "Bell Ringers of America since 1842" was retained to do the work which will cost an estimated $25,000. A three-man team headed by Theo King of Cincinnati is now engaged in painting and scraping the framework holding the bells.

"All the bolts will be replaced with new stainless steel bolts," King said. "The transmission wires will all be new and we are grinding and reshaping the clappers."

The bells are all stationary, only the clappers move when the carilloneur sounds a note from the console located in a room must below the belfry. The clapper for the 11,780 pound "bourdon" bell weighs more than 200 pounds and requires the efforts of at least two men to maneuver it.

King, who has been working on carillons and steeple clocks for 27 years, considers the Cohasset carillon one of the finest he has seen.

"The bells are bronze, an alloy of 80 percent copper and 20 percent tin — a formula which makes a pure virgin bell," he said.

When the work is nearing completion the crew will be joined by Richard M. Watson, a carilloneur with the firm, who will check out the bells. Watson was a guest carilloneur at St. Stephen's last summer.

Guest carilloneurs from various parts of the United States and Europe have given concerts here over the years and others have been invited for the upcoming concerts during July and August.

The carillon was the gift of Mrs. Hugh Bancroft and was given in memory of her mother, Mrs. Jessie M. Barron, wife of the financier Charles W. Barron, who died in 1918.

The bells were cast at the foundry of Gillet and Johnston in Croydon, England, and were installed in the tower in June, 1924. The original carillon consisted of 23 bells. In 1925 Mrs. Bancroft added 20 bells and a few years later eight more bells were hung. They range in size from 12-pounders to the huge 11,000 pound bourden, one of the last to be installed.

Edward Gammoms was the first carilloneur at St. Stephens and he was succeeded by Chamberlain.

"We have a number of students who come here to play," Chamberlain said. "Most of them are adept at the organ. The method of using hands and feet is somewhat similar."

To assure that the town is not disturbed by discordant notes of beginners a practice clavier, or console, is set up in the church hall to permit practice in privacy.

President Calvin Coolidge was one of the first distinguished visitors to hear a concert by the carillon. He visited Barron, who was one of his financial advisors, in the summer of 1925. Cal listened politely, but Vermont farm boy that he was, he was more interested in Barron's herd of Guernsey and Ayrshire cattle up the hill at Oakes Farm.

Cohasset native builds college in Maine

It's a neat trick if you can pull it off. Doug Stover of Beechwood Street is a full-time student and part-time staff at Unity College, Unity, Maine where he expects to receive a special degree in architecture/landscape design in the next year or so.

There's been some talk about offering Doug a permanent Unity College staff job when he graduates, which isn't surprising. Because by the time he graduates he will have designed and supervised construction of a good portion of this small, progressive school which grabs up real talent when it sees it.

"When they asked me to design an amphitheater for the college I didn't even know what an amphitheater was," Doug said. But that didn't phase the young student, whose biggest claim to fame at that point had been a postcard drawing of the administration building.

He credits Tom Lucas, an art teacher at CHS, with having started him on his way with some art courses "and a little drafting."

The amphitheater is comprised of two dressing rooms, an acoustics baffler and is set in a beautiful woods at Unity. When we said it reminded us of the nativity, Doug admitted the drawings were done during Christmas and he had been in fact inspired by the season.

Shortly after Doug submitted the amphitheater plans to the board of college trustees, he had decided to leave college, at least temporarily. "I told them I couldn't afford it anymore."

They responded by offering him the job of supervising the construction of the amphitheater and tacking on a few more projects: a landscape master plan of the school, the design of a new girls' dormitory.

Of course they had already noted the successes of his other student plans: a rock climbing wall, a ropes course he designed for a school in Maine. In addition, he's the only student in his field at Unity. It helps to be unique, Doug agreed.

This summer Doug will work for the National Park Service restoring the Adams site in Quincy. He'll be responsible for elevation maps, slope design, drainage and cesspools. Nights and weekends he will work on his design consultant work for Unity.

He said his dream is to land a landscape architect job with the National Park Service, but it worries him a tad that he'll have to take a Civil Service exam.

Not to worry, Doug.

CHS art at Paul Pratt Library

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library is showing a collection of art by Cohasset High School students. Our Thomas Lucas of the art department selected a variety of art from the show including pen and ink, linoleum prints, watercolor and tempera.

The art will remain in the Children's Room of the Library until June 1. Carolyn Horne, exhibits coordinator of the Friends of the Library, arranged the show.

Senator McKinnon names priorities for water testing

Senator Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) announced today that he strongly supports efforts to expand the scope of water quality testing for the suspected carcinogen tetrachloroethylene. The chemical has been found in the water supplies of numerous communities in Massachusetts where vinyl lined asbestos cement pipe has been used.

"I am concerned," said Senator McKinnon. "I think we have an obligation to assure that our tap water is pure, clean and safe. This is basic to life in a community."

Senator McKinnon stated, "It is my understanding that Senator Amick, Co-Chairman of the Water Quality Commission, will seek funds to pay for more testing. I heartily back her request and will vigorously support her efforts."

The Senator said that there are two immediate priorities. The first is the identification of all areas where the vinyl lined asbestos cement pipe is in use. The next effort should be to expand testing of water quality in the affected communities.

Federal EPA regulations for tetrachloroethylene have not yet been established, and more testing is underway to determine the chemical's possible health hazards.

☐Dan Campbell has been installed as the "new" president of Ye Olde Goats. Good luck with that respectably raucous group of fellows!

☐Judy and Rob Kasameyer of Pond Street became the parents of a second son, John Thomas, on March 22 at St. Margaret's Hospital, Boston. First son, Michael, is a big, "almost" two. Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Harold Kennedy of Dover, New Jersey and Mr. and Mrs. William Kasameyer of Warwick, Rhode Island. Cheers to the whole family!

(Judy makes the third "formerly of New Jersey" in Around Town in three weeks! Who will be next?)

☐Douglas Yeager, a Cohasset High School student with two months to go to graduation, has been accepted at Westfield State College where he will enroll in the computer science program.

Douglas lives with Marilyn and Bill Adams and their active clan (Abagail, Willie and Christopher), who say this is the biggest news they've had in a long time. He is a "terrific" hockey player and received the "Mr. Enthusiasm" award this year from the Boosters Club.

☐The Mariner loves a contest so since we are between our own (we've got a great grown-up one coming soon), we'd like to share this one with you younger folks (7-12th grade): complete the sentence, "I love my Mom because . . . . . "; originality an neatness count, and winners' Moms will receive a gift certificate from Hallmark merchandise from Noble's Camera Shop, Route 3A. Entry blanks and details at Noble's. (Mother's Day is May 11; May 12 is the day the winners are announced).

☐Birthdays that fall during school vacation or summer recess are fun because birthdays always are), but the celebrator misses the traditional in-school party.

Marie Pratt, whose son Philip is a first grader in Faith Bowker's class, decided it was time to do something special for a teacher who does alot for her students and others (most notably this year, the Khlee family) and who has a "vacation" birthday. Marie and other class mothers, Jan Pyle, Dede Rousseau, Mrs. Idoine, and Mrs. Figueiredo treated Faith, Philip and Melissa Rousseau to a surprise party on Friday afternoon.

Faith was completely taken by surprise, but she never lost her composure long enough to say how old she'd be on Sunday, April 20. Philip and Melissa, however, didn't mind saying they'd be seven on Monday and Sunday, respectively.

Other vacation birthdays (that we know of) from Mrs. Manna's third grade class: Amy Hobbs, Troy Hasse, and Felecia Bartow. Hope you all had fun.

☐Navy Photographer's Mate Airman Robert Sullivan, son of Jack Sullivan of Jerusalem Road and Marie Sullivan of Abington, is a crew member aboard the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz currently on deployment in the Indian Ocean. The Nimitz has been in the Indian Ocean since late January as part of the U.S. 7th Fleet, maintaining a continuous presence there. It's homeport is Norfolk, Virginia.

Bob is a 1976 graduate of Weymouth Vocational Technical High School, Weymouth. He joined the Navy in May 1978.

☐Navy Lt. j.g. Theodore Macklin, Jr., son of Theodore and Marie Macklin of Atlantic Avenue, recently completed the Navy's 20-week Basic Underwater Demolition Team Course at the Naval Amphibious Base, Coronado, California.

Preparation for duty as a Navy "frogman" includes extensive instruction on amphibious reconnaissance techniques, the use of demolitions, physical conditioning and under water breathing apparatus (SCUBA) diving.

Macklin is a 1971 graduate of Cohasset High School and an 1976 graduate of Holy Cross College, Worcester, with a Bachelor of Arts degree. He joined the Navy in May 1976.

THOROUGHLY MODERN AND UPDATED-Roberta Raffa is "Violet" in My Sister Eileen at the Town hall Thursday, Friday and Saturday. (Derr)

☐Wally Young of Hammond Road has completed and passed a course in the operation of wastewater treatment plants. Young is a CETA employee who works for the water and sewer departments.

☐Deer Hill student Timothy Campbell has been accepted for enrollment at Ted Williams Baseball Camp in Lakeville. He will spend the last two weeks of August, throwing, pitching, stealing bases. Timothy is the son of David and Louise Campbell.

☐Mary Jane Benson, Mandi Bubier, Amercy Burnham, Heather Hawker, Lauren Haynes, James Patterson and Susan Shockman were on the honors list during the third quarter at Derby Academy.

Karen and Laura Pompeo received second honors. Good work, kids!

☐Congratulations to the three Cohasset Riding Club members who won blue ribbons at the County 4-H Visual Present Day and will be presenting their projects to the State this Saturday.

Winners were Julie Hoogeveen, who presented a new theory on laminitus; and Julie Chambers and Lori Marshall, who jointly presented a talk on the history and characteristics of thoroughbreds.

Cohasset on the rim of a dormant volcano

By Karin Bartow

School Superintendent John Maloney, who departs his job in June, favored the Steering Committee with his view of the "Future Direction of Cohasset's Public Schools" at their monthly meeting held last week.

After five years at the helm, his look into the future was honest, thorough, and not all favorable. To sum it up: the future of Cohasset's schools depend alot on the people who live in this town.

While he didn't offer any economic forecasts, Maloney said that if we should be faced with a severe and prolonged recession, it will hurt the schools not only in the budget. (President Carter has just recognized that our country is in a period of recession . . .)

His experiences over the past half-decade lead him to doubt that our youngsters can adjust to adversity. If families are forced to adjust to an adverse economy, kids are going to need help and the psychology department would need to be strengthened, at the expense of other basic subject areas. Alcoholism and child abuse are unattractive side effects that could hit the community.

Barring the lack of capacity to generate tax funds to support the schools, Maloney pronounced Cohasset "a well managed town with the ability to provide good education." Whether or not there is the WILL among residents to do so, is a large question in his mind. One-hundred-thousand a year, or $1.00 on the tax base, would satisfy an educational system that is improving and excelling each year.

Cohasset sits upon the rim of a dormant volcano, or as Maloney puts it, "seeds of destruction" are already there and only need sowing. He cautions us to watch out for apathy, lack of a community school system and lack of good relationships between the school committee, superintendent and principals — any one could lead to the explosion.

A good relationship must immediately be bolstered between the new superintendent and school committee.

Looking at the academic programs, sports and other curriculum, Maloney summarized where we stand and what recommendations he would make for the future.

Language arts is a strong suit. Skill development, reading and writing (both hand-writing and creative writing) are all excellent programs. Maloney described the importance of the stepping system for learning to read and cautioned that it should never overlap too much. Children should only repeat to make sure they know what they've learned and then move on.

He will recommend that this summer a committee review the math program, K-8, including IMS (Individual Math System) to see if we could be doing better.

He warned that we may be challenged in the future to eliminate the math lab at the secondary level. This program, which uses two aides, has been very successful and has prevented a lotof youngsters from repeating math subjects. He also strongly favors the retention of a science lab as well as the full-time teacher in the reading lab.

Maloney recommends that English (in all of it's manifestations) and mathematics (at least through calculus) be kept at maximum strength and the whole area of computerization be addressed as our youngsters must be better prepared to live in a technological society. He would like to see two subjects added to bolster the last category, typing (one full year) and mechanical drawing (for spatial relationships training).

A second course in chemistry and physics are suggested new subjects, too. Maloney questions whether a school committee that has repeatedly denounced small class sizes of ten would ever approve this. He feels that their addition would constitute an improvement in the overall system, even if there were only six or eight youngsters in the class.

The strongest area of science is biology; we have a good physics curriculum, and chemistry is continuing to improve. Social science subjects are under continual review; geography has been added at the elementary level. Maloney would like to continue to emphasize map work. New subject areas of science are earth science (including geology), life science, and physiology (to be added in the fall).

Maloney underscored the importance of replacing supplies on a systematic basis. Again he tapped the community for support and a willingness to maintain their schools by seeing that this is done.

For those 20 percent of students who do not go on to college, he would like to see even stronger business programs with the possible addition of speed-writing.

Adaptive physical education involved a new way of looking at youngsters: their physical development, coordination and motor skills can be important indicators of learning difficulties. Early detection of problems and their correction has helped many children and reduces the need for remedial help later on.

Maloney feels Helen Pratt's and Mary Benbow's work in this field at the elementary level is extremely

Need for home care services growing

South Shore Home Care Services, Inc., 430 South Main Street, Cohasset, recently hosted a legislators' breakfast on Friday, March 28th, at the Tufts Library in Weymouth. The purpose of the breakfast was to provide the opportunity for South Shore Home Care Board and Advisory Council members to discuss the agency's programs and service with the legislators, as well as to solicit their support on some issues coming before the legislature this session.

Legislators who attended or sent representatives were Senators Paul Harold, Allan McKinnon, and Anna Buckley and Representatives Elizabeth Metayer, Mary Jeannette Murray, Andrew Card, Robert A. Cerasoli, Michael Morrissey, and Philip Johnston.

Ruth Spencer of Hingham, President of South Shore Home Care, welcomed everyone and briefly outlined the purpose of the organization: to assist older people in avoiding unnecessary institutionalization by insuring adequate services in the community.

Mrs. Spencer introduced Ann Gosline of Greater Boston Legal Services, Quincy, and Ann Hill, Director of the Milton Visiting Nurse and Social Service League, who spoke on the need for Adult Protective Services Legislation.

There is currently no legislation that protects elderly people from abuse and neglect. Ms. Hill and Ms. Gosline urged the passage of a comprehensive Protective Services Bill which would require mandatory reporting of suspected abuse and/or neglect by police, firemen, nurses, social workers, and all professionals who deal with the elderly. The legislation must contain sound legal procedures as well as insure that services are available to assist victims on an immediate basis.

Edythe Donkin of Scituate, Treasurer of South Shore Home Care presented the financial picture of home care services for this year. She explained that the need for the services is growing all the time. In July of 1979, South Shore Care was serving 842 low income older people, and by February, 1980, that figure had grown to 1.049 clients. Mrs. Donkin urged the legislators to vote for the passage of a $4 million deficiency budget filed by Governor King so that the services could continue to grow.

important and should be maintained. "Even if there is a 25 percent decline in enrollment at Osgood," Maloney says, "they should remain there working in this new field.

Maloney strongly advocates the continued expenditures on athletic and inter-mural after school programs because it is "one of the best ways of keeping youngsters in wholesome, body developing programs after school." In a community that already has a combination of alcohol and drug use among some of it's youngsters, he feels there would be a resurgence of their use if these programs were not available. He said that with a dire prediction: "If we didn't have (athletics and intermural sports) I think Cohasset could make national headlines with drug and alcohol problems."

He also "doesn't understand some people's attitudes against strengthening good programs in music, art and drama where the youngsters build important self-esteem." Here again, Maloney suggests that these programs need community support.

Maloney has always supported a comprehensive health education program, K-12, and predicts that before this decade is out, we'll have a psychiatric/social worker in the school system.

Maloney will undoubtedly leave his current reading of the Cohasset school system, with predictions and recommendations for the future, with his successor. The message to those representatives of the communications councils who attended the steering committee meeting was clear: community-wide involvement and participation is essential now, for continued good schools in Cohasset as well as improved schools in the future.

Route for Ride-A-Bike!

The Cohasset Teachers Association will sponsor the ninth annual RIDE-A-BIKE from 1 p.m. to 4 p.m. in Cohasset, Mass. This is a state wide effort to raise funds to help the 160,000 retarded citizens through the work of the Massachusetts Association for Retarded Citizens and its local affiliates.

Individuals of all ages are welcome to participate either by riding, sponsoring a rider or helping man checkpoints on the day of the ride.

Riders solicit sponsors from within the community who pledge the cyclists a predetermined amount of money per mile. After the ride, the contributions are collected by the participants from their sponsors.

BIKE ROUTE

Recreation Dept. activities for May 1

ADULT TENNIS LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registration for adult, outdoor tennis lessons, to be held at varying times on Monday evenings, beginning Monday May 5.

Classes will be offered for beginners/advanced beginners, intermediates, and advanced players. Beginner classes will be from 6:30-7:30 p.m., intermediate from 7:30-8:30 p.m., and advanced from 8:30-9:30 p.m., at the Muliken Field Tennis Courts.

Lessons will be six weeks in duration and cost $10 person.

Teaching, will be professional tennis instructor, Ms. Diana Breed, a graduate of Smith College, and Head Pro at Massachusetts Tennis Clubs.

SUMMER TENNIS

The recreation department has one position for youth tennis instructor open for the Summer 1980 program. Applications will be accepted immediately for this position. Applicants must have demonstrated teaching experience, preferably with children and youth and must be over age 18.

If qualified and interested contact the Recreation Office at 383-6791, 1st floor, Cohassset Town Hall, immediately.

FLORAL ARRANGEMENT

The recreation department will accept, via phone, registration for a 10 week, 1½ hours per week, program in floral arrangement.

Course outline will include basis principals of design, such as: dimension, diversity, longevity and balance. Lessons will include oriental flower arranging, (Ikebana), combining proper flowers and foliage, colors, etc. etc.

The course will be taught by Ms. Melinda Freda, who has recently conducted lectures for Bloomingdales and will soon appear on the "Good Day" T.V. show.

Registration fee for 10 week program is $10 per person. There will be an additional minimal cost for materials. Classes will be held in the Town Hall Auditorium. Other information available upon registration.

YOUTH JOB OPPORTUNITY PROGRAM

During the past few months the Recreation Department through its Job Opportunity Program, has placed approximately 30 Cohasset youth on part-time, intermittent jobs.

In a continuing effort to place youth on jobs of all types, the department is asking any business or individuals who have a need for part-time workers to call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 to file their worker requests.

Once a job is filed with the department, you will be given names of individuals who have applied for jobs that fall under the guidelines of your request. From these names you may select any individual(s) whom you feel will best suit your needs. All compensations will be worked out between the employer and employee.

Likewise, Cohasset youths seeking some form of part-time employment may also call the Recreation Office for a job application. Upon completion of the application you will be placed on file as a candidate for possible job referral.

A SCENE FROM EILEEN-Arnold Nickerson certainly relishes his role. See Eileen this week at Town Hall!

Village shop talk

By Larry Fone

. At its April meeting the Cohasset Village & Harbor Association discussed shoplifting, and vandalism in the Cohasset shopping area.

Protests have been made about lack of police visibility, but evidently there is not enough manpower and little inclination to stop or at least slow down senseless destruction of property.

However, the association is offering a $50 reward for information regarding those people involved. Tuesday the association's board of directors and merchants met to discuss in depth summer promotions planned.

It's good to welcome two new shops to Cohasset: Kupferman's Jewelry & Sculpture on So. Main Street (unfortunately, some vandals in town broke their new plexiglas sign last Friday night)

Congratulations to the Wee Spinnaker Shop on its direct mail pieces, well done . . . and its new shops in Kennebunkport, Maine and Nantucket Island. Proves that a good idea with wanted merchandise can succeed. Its expansion provides work for many people, especially in cottage craft specialities.

I'm sure any of you readers may have a special item that fits this product category.

New at the David Sharpe Gallery — hand-blown glass sculpture, the pieces are individually signed by artists from Finland, Germany, Italy and throughout the U.S. Most of the pieces retail for under $100.

Fresh fish has been added to the marketing menu at Farmers' Pride on 3-A. A new antique sideboard purchased recently adds a bit of antique class to the shop, frequented by residents throughout the South Shore. Fresh vegetables, home made breads, baked lasagne, seafood casseroles are always freshly in abundance.

Sea Heather Antiques is back this spring, but at a new location, across from Kimball's By-The-Sea. Sea Heather is owned and operated by five Cohasset ladies who will also offer superb decorating ideas fo those of us on a budget! This shop has everything from baskets, pictures to a country work table. And expected soon are the popular wreaths and floral arrangements done so well by the talented five.

Understand the Greenhouse Restaurant & Hugo's Lighthouse both have new menus — lunch and dinner. Hope shortly to have them posted at Cookworks.

I'm following with great interest the transformation of the Strawberry Parfait. Just all kinds of construction and renovation happening. More news on that after I talk with the owners, maybe Cohasset will have its own Bailey's.

Don't forget the Lothrop flea market May 24. You folks cleaning out your attics and cellars should take your castaway treasurers to the Lothrop House. There is plenty of room in the new barn for storage.

Til next week — enjoy this beautiful spring!

In memory of Mychelle

By Gail Smart

I sit in fourth period study hall and stare at the chair that was once occupied by a special girl. Mychelle Lynn Lessner died in a car accident on April 9, 1980. It doesn't seem fair that a pretty, friendly, and warm-hearted sixteen year old girl should have to die so young.

We are lucky to have known a person as wonderful and as unique as Mychelle Lessner. A total individual, Mychelle rejected the popular preppie look and stayed with her bright California style. Her warmth and charm overflowed in her flashing smile, round sparkling eyes, and her joyous manner. Like the shining California sun, Mychelle embraced life, and lived each day to the fullest. She is an example of all of us.

We should not remember how she died. It should not matter if there were 80 feet of skid marks, or if the car was totaled. We should always remember Mychelle's bright and beautiful face and personality. Good memories of Mychelle will linger with me and many other people forever, and whenever I see the sun shine, I know she is watching over us.

THE COHASSET LAMPLIGHT

Cohasset High School

Are you competent?

By Jane Higgins

Can you answer these questions correctly? These are just a few examples from the Basic Skills Competency Program of testing which has been mandated for implementation in the upcoming 1980-81 school year by the state of Massachusetts.

If you were unable to complete this sampling satisfactorily, however, there is no problem: successful completion of the competency test is not a requirement for graduation.

The program is not meant to harm a student; on the contrary, it has been developed to insure that he has mastered the basic skills he will need in order to function as a capable adult in society.

The questions on the test deal with situations a student is likely to encounter in the years ahead. The reading test includes a medicine label, a car advertisement, and a passage from the Yellow Pages, which the student is required to read and understand.

The mathematics section is mainly concerned with the student's ability to apply the simple operations to real-life circumstances: the cost of a sale item, the number of hours indicated by a time card, the value of a check, or how to read data charts.

The precise details of the BSC program have been left to the discretion of the individual school system. To work out the program in Cohasset, Stephen Hart, Director of Testing, has selected a committee composed of a diverse set of representatives from the educational program: school committee members, principals, guidance counselors, teachers, students, and parents.

The members of the board met formally last June to outline the future proceedings, which were to be conducted by three sub-committees, each representing a school; it had already been decided that the testing would be administered to students in grades two, five, and eight.

Assembling again in October, the committee members were informed that Cohasset had adopted the standardized state test. The committee (reconvened) in February to determine the "passing scores" which define what has been termed "the minimally competent student." The liberty granted to each school system in setting their own standards has culminated in political complications between them.

For example, another town using the state test may determine that the numerical level of basic competency is lower than that which has been designated by Cohasset; because its standards are lower, their results may be more impressive than those of Cohasset students. A certain amount of pride is involved.

Yet, it is more important to focus on the test's effect on the student. After all, it is for the benefit of the student that this program has been adopted.

For the students who have failed to meet the proposed level of competency, the school will assign remedial work in his weak areas. But what effect does this test have on the more intelligent student? Upon seeing these very basic test items, his own standards are automatically lowered.

Hence, the program of competency testing has its good, as well as its bad, aspects. However, with the passing of a little time and experience, these problems will eventually work themselves out.

CHS happenings

By Cathy O'Brien

Tuesday, April 15 the Cohasset High Varisty Softball team once again suited to play a game,only to have the game once again cancelled. The problem according to Miss Watson, the team coach, started when league umpires refused to officiate a game in which a boy (David Turner) was pitching.

The umpires argued that if any league player was hurt while David pitched, the officials would be liable and could possibly be sued. Therefore, they wanted David, according to boys rules, to pitch from 46 feet instead of 40 feet. (As added safety factor.)

In an effort to resolve this problem, coach Watson contacted Delaware headquarters, where the girls softball rules were originally composed. However, this process was slow, and meanwhile the team was denied rights to play softball. Also, while the senior high games hung in the balance both junior high girls softball and the girl's tennis team also could not play because transportation is only provided for the three teams jointly.

In further attempts to resolve the situation a meeting of the M.I.A.A. was held on April 18th. The M.I.A.A. decided that males in a female league must pitch from 46 feet, while the female pitchers could remain at 40 feet. Miss Watson was not happy with this decision, claiming reverse discrimination against boys in the female league. Therefore, School Supt. Dr. Maloney spoke to the National Board of Education concerning the issue. This Board agreed that the extra pitching footage was a case of reverse discrimination and overruled the M.I.A.A. decision.

Cohasset High Varsity Softball is now free to play games once again, and according to right fielder Gina Frio, "It's about time."

Library Friends generous with gifts

The Friends of the Cohasset Library voted this week to deplete their treasury as the fiscal year ends, and to make the following gifts to the Paul Pratt Memorial Library:

—a new pass to the Children's Museum, $300;

—a new pass to the Museum of Transportation, $60;

Renew passes to the Museum of Science, $300; the New England Aquarium, $300; and the Boston Museum of Fine Arts, $35.

Each pass may be borrowed free of charge by Cohasset residents. Each pass admits a family. Reservations for the passes may be made by calling the library, 383-1348.

The passes to the Museum of Science, the Aquarium and the Museum of Fine Arts were borrowed 398 times in 1979. Librarian Richard Hayes told the Friends that many people have requested the library also offer the passes to the Children's Museum and the Museum of Transportation.

Other gifts voted by the Friends were $200 to support the library summer reading program for children, and $250 for the book fund.

Officers of the Friends are: Pat Gwinn, president; Lucia Woods, vice-president; Sue Barunas, secretary; June Hubbard, treasurer. Other members of the board are: Shirley Marten, Karen Crehan, Eleanor Waal, Carolyn Horne, Ursula Connors, Elizabeth Kuhn, Ruth Treanor, Karin Bartow, and Donna McGee.

A drive to renew the current membership of 200, and to recruit new members, will get underway in May. Those wishing to support the work of the Friends may pick up a membership blank at the library.

Four-town Unitarian service Sunday

Unitarian Universalists from four South Shore communities will be joining together on Sunday, April 27 at the First Parish Meeting House on the Cohasset Common for a service of worship in recognition of the 200th anniversary of the birth of William Ellery Channing.

Channing is honored as the pre-eminent spokesperson for American Unitarianism during its beginning early in the 19th century New England.

The service will begin at 10:30 a.m. and will bring together the congregations and church schools of the Old Ship Church in Hingham, the First Parish in Norwell, the First Parish in Scituate and the First Parish in Coahsset. The choirs of the four churches will combine for the singing of the morning anthems and the ministers of the churches will present selected readings from Channing's writings.

Born in Newport, Rhode Island, in 1780, Channing was the minister of the Federal Street Church in Boston, now the Arlington Street Church, for 39 years.

Channing became internationally respected for the eloquence of his preaching and his courageous social stands on such issues as world peace, slavery, social justice and religious toleration. He was a founding member of the American Unitarian Association which was formed in 1825 and is best known for a sermon he preached in 1819 in Baltimore, Maryland, in which he set forth the distinctive characteristics of Unitarianism as belief in the unity of God, the dignity of human nature, respect for reason and the free expression of ideas and religion as practiced through service to humanity.

The public is cordially invited to join in this special anniversary service. A coffee hour will follow the service at the Unitarian Parish House in Cohasset.

Art Center camera course

Peter Anderson, the resident expert in photography, will be conducting a two session Field Trip for the South Shore Art Center and photographers of all degrees of proficiency are encouraged to join Advance registration is extremely important in order to determine how many cars will be needed. Call the Art Center at 383-9548 for fees and further information.

Obituaries

Kathleen Kelly

Kathleen Marie Kelly, 17, daughter of Helen (Clune) and Leo Kelly of Windy Hill, died April 19 as a result of injuries received in an automobile accident.

She was the sister of the late Leo M. Kelly, Jr., formerly of Quincy.

She leaves two brothers: Daniel J. of Quincy, John V. of Cohasset; and a sister, Maureen Kelly of Manomet. Also her grandmother, Mrs. Rose Kelly of Jamaica Plain and grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Dennis P. and Agnes (Mulligan) Clune of Hyde Park.

The funeral was from the Sparrell Funeral Home, followed by a Mass of Christian Burial in St. Anthony's Church. Interment will be in Woodside Cemetery.

CCC Showcase trip

The Cohasset Community Center is pleased to announce that they will be sponsoring a trip to the Decorator Showcase. The date set is May 7, from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. This year's selection by the Junior League of Boston is the I. Tucker Burr estate in Milton. The home was built in 1893 and is currently owned by the Capucian Fathers.

Forty-four decorators from the Boston area, including eight from the South Shore, will decorate the home containing six bathrooms to show off their talents.

The Community Center trip includes the entrance to the Showcase and the bus trip. Participants are welcome to browse through the boutique or dine at the Pineapple Cafe at their leisure. Call the Center daily 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. for information or reservations (383-0088).

Frank Jason member of Life Boat Crew

Frank Eugene Jason, 86, the last surviving member of the Humane Society Life Boat Crew, died unexpectedly April 17 at his home in Cohasset.

He was a lifelong resident of Cohasset and served on the Humane Society Life Boat Crew until its abandonment in 1936. The Humane Society Life Boat Crew was formed in 1807 to serve ships in distress on the South Shore coastline.

He was a caretaker at the Bellarmine House in Cohasset for the past 34 years. He was former member of the Cohasset Special Police for 28 years, and was a member of St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset.

He was the husband of the late Helen Agnus (Sullivan) Jason. He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Thomas Healy of Cohasset; a brother William H. Jason of Cohasset; a sister Mrs. Martin Grassie of Scituate; four grandchildren, Maureen Healy, Kathleen Healy and Robert Healy all of Cohasset, and Susan Healy of California.

A funeral Mass was celebrated Monday in St. Anthony's Church, Cohasset. Burial was in the Woodside Cemetery, Cohasset.

DENTAL HEALTH IS POOR BECAUSE OF NEGLECT

Over 15% of the adult population don't have a single tooth in their mouths except those on dental plates they wear. More than 60% don't visit their dentist during an entire year. When asked, they admit they need dental aid.

Even more important is the neglect of children's teeth. There are from 3-8 cavities in the mouths of the age group from 4-8 years old.

M: st teams decimated

Skippers suffering from 'Florida Syndrome'

By Rob Tis

Spring's in the air and school vacation is at hand and many Cohassetites are taking their annual trek southward to find the sun and lay on the golden beaches.

How, you ask, does this affect CHS sports? Many coaches and athletes seem to sense a loss of spirit and team pride.

The tennis team suffered a great loss to migration this week. Doubles player Andy Poettenger missed three matches this week while soaking up the sun in the land of Oranges. Then Coach Mika received word that singles player Ron White was headed for Bermuda while his brother Gerry (no. one singles player) was headed for Colorado. The last straw was when it was discovered Joe Whelan was headed for Philadelphia. Lucky for the Skippers that the Friday game was against Abington who is constantly in the cellar of the league. Some Skipper regulars and substitutes shared the win.

Unfortunately, things did not turn out the same for the baseball team which suffered a tough 4-3 loss on Friday that might have been affected by the loss of hard-hitting Bruce Maynard and Mark Froio, both on their way to Daytona Beach.

Track Coach Davis, who is famous for holding extremely inconvenient practices over vacation, took this year's annual migration glumly. Coach Davis is irritated by the lack of spirit on his team as well as the impromptu vacations taken by a few of his team members, namely: Bill Taylor to Florida; Todd Lanford, parts unknown. And then the 10th Grade research paper put sophomores Chris McNabb and Jamie Replo 'e behind the typewriters instead of in the field. The absence of Keith Ross and Gordon Rickets was also mind-boggling. But Skippers did manage to squeak by with a 85-60 win. Coach Davis is extremely irritated, however, and is considering not coming back.

How do some of the players feel about the loss of spirit? Mild-mannered tennis player Peter Drago stressed: "It's only a game. If I had a chance to go to Florida I wouldn't twice about my team, nobody should."

The bulk o CHS athletes seem to agree with Pete, whether it's the vacation at hand or spring or whatever.

TENNIS

Last Thursday the boys faced a tough Duxbury team, which yielded a 5-0 loss to the toughest team in the SSL this year. Friday they faced Abington, missing their no. 1 and no. 2 singles players and one doubles team but as it turned out a combination of senior skip day and a band concert only left three Abington netters to make the journey to Cohasset. Pete Drago and Kevin Crough made the transition from doubles to singles — both winning in straight sets and demolished any of Abington's smallest hopes. Imagine what Duxbury would do to Abington?

The girls did manage to score one match against Duxbury in the 4-1 loss. Janet England came up ahead after three sets. Sue Dalrymple and Karen Murphy both split sets but came up short as did the doubles team of Mia Graham and Joy Pratt.

The Skippers were forced to make its first doubles team singles players due to the absence of Lauren O'Connor and Chrissy Ralph.

TRACK

Track dominated a meek Holbrook squad 111-34. Phil Tye was the undisputed star as he took first place in the 100-yard dash, 220, and the long jump. Gordon Ricketts had a first in the 440 as well as a third in the pole vault. Mike Ellis took a first in the mile and a second in the high jump. As usual, Scott Benbow dominated the two mile. Bill Taylor won the high jump and the discus, and Bill Putty took the first honors in the triple jump.

Like the boys, the girls had NO problems with Holbrook, cruising to a 73-79 win sparked by Indra Turner winning the hurdles and the long jump. Karen Eckberg raced to first place in the 100. Diane Gunville raced away from the pack and captured the victory in 69.1 seconds. Mary Jo Mahoney captured the mile in a brisk 6.09 seconds. Tina Berman and Steffanie Keaive leaped to a tie in the high jump deadlocking at 4-5. Patty Walsh threw her javelin 79-11 to breeze to victory while both relay teams, 440 and mile, zipped to wins clinching the victory for Cohasset.

Thursday, both teams faced Abington. The girls had a tough loss, 84-34 with some bright spots, including Karen Eckberg who has yet to lose the 100 yard dash this year. India Turner took first place honors in the low hurdles but from there on it was downhill.

The boys pulled out a close one, 85-60, with victories being scored by Greg Raffa in the 100, Phil Tye in the 270 and 880. Scott Benbow took the two mile, Pat Duffy in the hurdles and long jump, and Bill Duffy in the high hurdles and triple jump.

SOFTBALL

Thursday, David Turner pitched two-hit ball as the Skippers got their first run in the second on a suicide squeeze by Heidi Brown. In the third Turner singled, stole second, then third and was knocked home by Captain Jodi Sandblom. Lance Norris then singled in Sandblom and was singled in himself by Heather Fairchild. From here the Skippers rolled to an easy 10-3 softball win.

Friday, Skippers broke loose killing Abington 17-5. Karen Froio and Dave Turner each had a single, double and triple — resulting in seven RBI's. Sarah Froio had two hits and two RBI's as everyone on the Skippers' club pitched in for this victory.

BASEBALL

Duxbury demolished Cohasset Thursday 16-1. The Skippers never seems to be able to muster a threat bigger than Duxbury's two extra base hits and nine singles. Friday, they suffered a heartbreaking defeat to Abington, 4-3. The Skippers stayed a comeback in the sixth with three runs, two driven in by Matt Brown's RBI single, but the rally fell one short.

Finally...

Two quiz winners

After a three-week drought, we finally have a winner in the Mariner Trivia Quiz. Not only that, we have two.

Barbara Conte, secretary at the Deer Hill School, and Joe Hoffman of Pond Street both win Mariner T-shirts.

And the answers:

1. The guys who were on the '70 B's that are on the '80 B's are Wayne Cashman, Gerry Cheevers, Don Marcotte, Ricky Smith and Gary (throw your body in front of every slapshot) Doak.

2. Jake Rupert paid Harry Frazee 125 thousand clams and gave him a $350,000 loan for Babe Ruth's contract.

3. Jacques Plante invented the goalie mask.

Congratulations, you two. Wear those T-shirts in good health.

This week's quiz:

1. Only one team in the the National League since its inception has never moved. What team is that? (hint — E.B. starred for them for years).

2. There have been lots of brother combinations in baseball, the DiMaggio boys, the Boyer boys, the Aspromonty kids, the Alou brothers. Which of all the brother combinations in the history of baseball have hit the most home runs combined?

Enough already! Spring training is over

That's it for me. Spring training's over. This body's as taut, and toned as it's going to be for quite a spell. I'm not certain any one can discern what athletic shape I'm in. In fact, there are some who'd say I'd added a bit to my poundage repertoire.

But beneath this delicate white business blouse ripples a muscle-bound body. And I owe it all to relentless self-discipline, Bob Backus gym, and strangers in dressing rooms who chuckled when they saw me trying on bathing suits.

Now that's neither fair nor apt. What happened is that a group of us who are growing better as opposed to older decided we'd give up bad habits and adopt good ones. We called ourselves the Backus Bunnies and we teased our mates for a graduation ceremony in mid April accompanied by appropriate gifts.

PATCHES

We started training March 16, a Sunday. We had our pictures taken in leotards and body suits prior to the first day working out. We were nervous about the prospect and believed we were the only women on the South Shore to sign up for a month's gym duty.

We were wrong. Inside the women's gym was every shape and size body yet created. The uniform ranged from the ballet dancer's figure-fitting suit to the standard gray sweat/warm up suits. They were attacking the machines and equipment with gusto, lifting, bending, straining, pulling, doing everything to meet the goal of looking and feeling better.

My group came in what amounted to small, medium and large sizes, a too generous hip here, a bountiful bulge there. Each one believing herself in desperate need of help.

But unfortunately we had trouble being dead serious about our instructions. Women growing in years don't necessarily give up girlish vulnerability to giggling in self-conscious situations. Consequently directions about 'working out' amused us more than intended and we feared we'd be hurled out of the gym our first day.

Not so, though we'd have wished it several strained muscles later. We sauna-ed, swam, hot tubed with people we'd never seen before in situations that sometimes felt like an intimacy established only with optometrists and dentists.

Our gang refused to go into the Nautilus room after the first time. One of our 'Bunnies' told a horror story about a woman being literally wound up in one of the machines and unable to get out. She was left there stranded with her thighs in her face and instead of help from her co-exercising friend, she got abandoned because the friend was beside herself with laughter.

We also avoided matching muscles with the males in the Nautilus section. They are 100 per cent earnest in there. The women's gym has a few young amazons who even have their own custom lifting belts. But for the most part, we wheeze together, each one non judgmental of the other. Of course there are the standouts in any crowd. A few memorable ones from our body building period were the shapely young girl from Florida who believed in a lot of nudity; the older woman from Duxbury who swam miles every day and doesn't appreciate people who dog paddle in her lane; and the high school girls who make excellent companions what they're not asked to exercise with their own mothers.

In fact, there was a time I believed my muscle development was surpassing weight loss. It was because I followed the wrong regimen of exercise. That corrected, I ran headlong into the best collection of Easter candy I've ever seen. It's not easy to stay with cottage cheese when there's a solid white chocolate Easter Bunny around that was won in an egg hunting contest. And the spring training ran awry in favor of holiday observations.

But make no mistake about it, my fat is firmer. I've met interesting people and I've never been that wet before during March and April. Hundreds of people are getting in shape. Not one of them laughed at me and the other bunnies. The drop out percentage of my graduating spring training class was nearly 85 per cent before the month was up.

But we're better for it. You'll know us this summer at the beach. We have chlorine-faded bathing suits. Our back muscles ripple when we pick up our sandwiches. And nobody kicks sand in our faces.

Things have a tendency to pile up when you're constantly on the go. Racing from home, to work, to the market, you may well wonder when you can get off the merry-go-round long enough to do a little entertaining. "Serendipity" to the rescue! Jan Fossella and Sue Sack are two young matrons living side-by-side in Marshfield and in the throes of raising young children. In the role of "hidden hostess", they've found their little niche in life and are doing one of the things they love best — creating gourmet dishes for clients who care less for cooking, but love to entertain. Serendipity is a door-to-door service, with Jan and Sue preparing dishes such as chicken kiev, turkey Orloff, hot or cold hors 'oeuvres, souffles, hot breads and vegetables and desserts with a flair. The girls prepare the food in their own homes and deliver it either hot or ready to go in the oven. Here is one of their many hors 'douvres, great for a crowd, as it serves about 40. Small slices are called for, as it is very rich.

MUENSTER PIE

1 lb. sliced salami
1½ lb. muenster cheese slices
12 medium eggs, beaten
Pastry enough to make two crusts

Line two-qt. casserole with half of pastry. Alternate layers of cheese and salami, beginning and ending with cheese. Poor beaten eggs over all and top with remaining crust. Bake at 350 degrees for 1½ hours. Can be frozen, or stored for several days.

When day is done and you pause long enough to do a little reading, it's refreshing to read a book such as the one Sylvia Gentile loaned me, "The Growling Gourmet" is a delightful book about celebrities, their dogs and recipes their lucky pets are served in silver bowls, with paw bowls, silver candelabra and damask floor clothes. Sylvia and her husband have three dogs who dine very well, but none of us provide our pets with such fare as Doris Day's homemade soups, Mrs. William F. Buckley Jr.'s Foo Fish, Charo's Paella with shrimp, scallops, etc, Clint Eastwood's Sidney, who drinks bottled water so he won't get cancer. Vince Edwards' St. Bernard is on stronger stuff — a tablespoon of brandy in his hash. Henry Fonda's pride and joy HsaTsu Stew, made of five ponds of hamburger and vegetables, all baked in a casserole and stored in containers in the freezer for each day's meal. Talk about your dog's life! Zsa Zsa Gabor's lhasa apso sleeps on satin, travels in a Rolls Royce and has a penchant for roast chicken with mushrooms and little carrots.

Probably feeling slightly underprivileged, our Irish Setter takes up her position by the table each night, as we guiltily try out a recipe from "Gourmet" magazine called

FIVE-SPICE CHICKEN WINGS

In a heavy saucepan combine 4 scallions chopped, 1/2 c. each of soy sauce and medium-dry sherry, 1/4 c. firmly packed dark brown sugar and 2 tsp. Chinese five-spice powder and 1 tsp. Oriental sesame oil (both available at Oriental markets) and bring the liquid to a boil over moderate heat. Add 4 lbs. chicken wings, wing tips removed and simmer then, covered, turning them several times for 25 to 30 min., or until tender. Serve with rice. Serves 4 to 6.

Gourmet Groups have the best of two worlds: lots of delectable food and only one dish prepared by each guest. Joanne and Paul Arseneau played host to Roseann and Brian Concannon, Susan and Bill Graham, Suzanne and David McQueeney and Barbara Caulfield. At the Dan Balconis, the guests included Sandy and Glenn Dobecki, Bev and Daryl Rinehart and Kathy and Jim Lyng. It was Mexican fare that night, with such treats as Mexican beer, flan, tortilla soup, stuffed tortillas, guacomole dip and chiles rellenos.

Angler's Corner — By LINDY BLAISDELL

CO-HO

The Division of Marine Fisheries celebrated its 10th anniversary of involvement with the Co-Ho Salmon by releasing 11,000 smolts into Indian Head Pond. The stocking allows a longer imprint time. Stream imprint time is important if fish are to return to their place of birth.

Biologists found if the young salmon are stocked below the dam they go to sea to fast and may return to the Jones River, South River, Merrimack or some other stream.

Ken Rebeck, Co-Ho project leader, expects this year's return to be the best ever. Ken hopes for some near 20 pounds. This fall's returning salmon will be the result of 46,000 smolt released last year.

Last fall over 400 salmon returned. Several (estimated at 30 to 60) were harvested by sport fishermen at the mouth of the North River. Ken credits lack of bluefish to the successful return.

TROUT

Trout fishing should be in full swing by the time you read this. The following is a list of stocked trout waters in Plymouth County.

Hanover — Third Herring Brook

Hanson — Shumatuscacant River, Indian Head River, Poor Meadow Brook.

Hingham — Plymouth River, Weir River

Kingston — Furnace Brook, Jones River

Marshfield — South River

Mattapoisett — Mattapoisett River

Pembroke — Herring Brook

Plymouth — Beaver Dam Brook, Long Pond, Town Brook, Little Pond, Eel River, Fearings Pond, Russell Pond, Sawmill Pond, Big Sandy Pond, Fresh Pond and Lout Pond is a fish for fun — all trout must be released.

Plympton — Barrows Brook, Winnetuxet River

Rochester — Doggets Brook, Mary's Pond

Scituate — Bound Brook

Wareham — Agawam River

The Mass. Sportsfishing Award Program again will play host to 19 species. Affidavit forms can be picked up at the Angler's Den, Cherry's Bait, or M & M Sporting Goods in Plymouth; Bra-Way Sport Shop in Braintree or Mike's Bait Shop and Shirley's Bait and Tackle both in Kingston.

You can also receive an affidavit with a listing of fish and minimum weight requirements by writing: Mass. Division of Fisheries & Wildlife, Field Hdqtrs., Westboro, MA 01581.

SALT WATER

Cod are showing up. Worms, clams, from shore or big silver jigs from a boat seem to do the trick. Hull Gut is the hot spot. A few are being caught off Gernert and Plymouth Beaches.

Flounder are coming out of the mud. We saw several good catches coming from Boston Harbor. Quincy Bay was slow. Those lucky anglers that did get some were chumming. A can of cat or dog food punctured and lowered over the edge of the boat worked for some.

Musings....

By John Cutler

☐"This organization (the UN) is created to prevent you from going to hell. It isn't created to take you to heaven." — Henry Cabot Lodge.

☐A politician is a person who has risen from obscurity to something worse.

☐Obesity is getting widespread.

☐Can you spot three words that are misspelled in the following: The lilies are not desiccated, nor are they anointed, nor are they inoculated, said the harassed tsar. (Answer below.)

☐You can judge the character of others by how they treat those who can do nothing for them.

☐When Robert E. Lee reproved a boor for telling an off-color story, the man said, "But there are no ladies present." "No," Lee said, "but there are gentlemen."

(Answer to quiz. None of the words is misspelled.)

☐If you knew what you were so anxious about, you wouldn't be so anxious.

☐The meek shall inherit the earth. The rest of us will escape to the stars.

☐Charlotte Ford wrote a book on etiquette soon after one by Amy Vanderbilt. Does she think she can improve on Amy's manners?

South Shore Safety League commends Robert Noonan

(ED.'S NOTE: The following letter was sent to Robert Noonan of Spring Street from the South Shore Safety Officers' League in praise of his efforts to save Ms. Kathleen Kelly from a flaming car. Noonan was successful in rescuing Ms. Kelly, but she expired from internal injuries last week.)

Dear Mr. Noonan;

This is an open letter being sent to you on behalf of the South Shore Safety Officers League.

Letters

At the monthly meeting of the League, held at Needham, on April 16, 1980, it was voted unanimously to commend you for your recent action in saving life at the scene of a serious motor vehicle accident which occured in Cohasset on April 8, 1980.

Your response, in a critical situation, without regard to your own safety, demonstrates valor beyond the call of duty. Such conduct, we find, is exemplary.

I would like, at this time, to extend my personal thanks and the warmest regards of the membership of the South Shore Safety Officers League for a job well done.

Respectfully,
Andras J. Nyari
President
S.S.S.O.L.

Summary of Findings - Recommendations

Study Description

During the past six months the Cohasset Harbor Study Committee has been developing a Master Plan for the improvement of Cohasset Harbor. Anderson-Nichols of Boston has provided technical planning assistance to the Committee.

The Master Plan has been funded through a grant from the Massachusetts Coastal Zone Management Program and an appropriation by the Cohasset Town Meeting.

The Cohasset Harbor Master Plan generally covers a twenty-year planning period. An implementation schedule for the first five years is an important element of the Plan. This implementation schedule should be reviewed each year and then extended for the subsequent five-year period. In this way, the Plan becomes a dynamic instrument which can be revised to meet the changing needs of the fishermen, recreational boaters and all who use the harbor facilities.

The Master Plan reflects considerable public input which was facilitated by several harbor planning workshops. The Harbor Study Committee has reviewed the diverse comments and feels that this plan carries out the major goals and objectives which were put forth.

This summary document is backed up by a series of detailed memoranda which have been incorporated into a loose leaf binder. Copies are available for review at the Paul Pratt Library and the Selectmen's Office.

Harbor Uses

General

Cohasset Harbor is used for a variety of activities. The dominant summertime use is for recreational boating. The dominant winter use is by commercial fishermen. Over 440 recreational boats are moored or docked in the harbor.

In addition, some 53 commercial fishing boats and approximately 375 small craft, skiffs, and dingies are found in the harbor.

Cohasset Harbor is small in comparison to other harbors of the Commonwealth. The small water area available at low tide, coupled with a constrained land-base for support facilities, creates a situation with many competing demands for the use of a limited resource.

Commercial lobstermen and recreational boaters currently share mooring and docking areas. Parking is limited. Access to the only public boat launching ramp is severely constrained. These are some of the problems which residents and visitors wrestle with each year. For the most part, the issues are not new.

Waterfront Use

There are over 8700 feet of water frontage in Cohasset Harbor. Twenty percent of the harbor water frontage is in Town ownership, and fifty percent is in private residential ownership. The balance is in commercial use.

Land-based commercial activities around the harbor include Hugo's Lighthouse Restaurant, Kimball's Motor Inn, Gaffey's Yacht Sales, Mill River Marine Railways, and Hagerty's Cohasset Colonials. The Old Salt House, located at First Wharf, will soon have a ship store and fuel facilities.

Gaffey's Yacht Sales is the only land-based commercial operation dependent on a waterfront location. Hagerty's, once a manufacturer of racing boats, now manufactures reproduction colonial furniture. Hugo's Lighthouse and Kimball's Motor Inn, although associated with the waterfront (Hugo's has a float for visitor tie-up), attribute much of their business to other activities within the Town, such as the South Shore Music Circus.

Recreational Boating

Recreational boating is the dominant summertime activity of Cohasset Harbor. Over 440 sailboats and powerboats are kept in the harbor; of these, 335 are on moorings; 87 are kept tied to floats at the Cohasset Yacht Club; and 21 are kept at the Sailing Club. These boats range in size from 14'-57' with total linear footage of 8740'. Roughly half of these boats are inboard and outboard powerboats, and half are sailboats.

In addition, several hundred rowing dingies and skiffs are tied up to the Town floats or floats at the Sailing and Yacht Clubs.

Cohasset has produced many respected championship racers. To maintain this tradition, the harbor maintains a racing fleet with mooring space earmarked for 48 boats of various classes.

The Cohasset Yacht Club members operate out of their clubhouse, located at the end of Howard Gleason Road. The Yacht Club was founded in 1892 and currently has 250 members.

The Cohasset Sailing Club is a non-profit institution, organized to provide sailing opportunities for all Cohasset residents. The Sailing Club operates out of a newly-constructed clubhouse located on Town-owned Government Island.

The Sailing Club has a Junior Training Program which has seen over 3000 persons enroll during the Club's 20 years of operation.

Other Recreational Activities

The Town of Cohasset does not operate any active recreational program in the harbor area. The junior programs at the Sailing and Yacht Clubs, therefore, represent the major organized active recreational activities on the water.

Goals and Objectives

The recommendations in this Plan are based on the set of goals and objectives which are listed below. These goals and objectives were developed with direct input by Cohasset residents and it should be noted that no weighting has been given to the specific goals and objectives; the value and relative importance of each will change over time.

- Maximize mooring/docking area utilization.
- Maximize recreational opportunities in harbor.
- Provide adequate public access to, and parking for harbor activities.
- Develop centralized water and shoreside commercial fishing facilities.
- Maintain existing "scale" of harbor development.
- Continue harbor maintenance dredging.
- Resolve administrative problems associated with Town/Country line.
- Increase public awareness of, and information on, historic aspects of the harbor.
- Protect natural characteristics of harbor, i.e., salt marshes, watershed-floodplain areas, and salinity.
- Provide better harbor security.
- Provide adequate storm protection.
- Reduce pollution to harbor from boats.
- Provide better services for visiting boats.
- Provide better intersection visibility.

Recommended Actions

Cohasset Harbor is constrained by a limited water area. Existing land use, streets, geology, and protected wetlands severely restrict opportunities for expanding the water area. An additional constraint is the complex flow of currents resulting from tidal movements to and from Bailey's Creek and the Gulf.

The land area surrounding the harbor suitable for waterfront activities is in short supply, too. Residential areas ring the streets bordering the harbor and preclude any major opportunities for expansion.

As a consequence of the resource limitations cited above, any plan for Cohasset Harbor must be very efficient in its use of land and water areas.

During the development of the Master Plan, several options for harbor improvements were discussed which, for various reasons, were not included in the final plan. Two of these options were development of marina facilities in Whale Meadow and at the eastern end of Bailey's Creek. Based on current law, specifically the Wetlands Protection Program (c.131, s.40) and the Coastal Wetlands Restrictions Program (c. 130, s.105), this type of activity in these regulated wetland areas is prohibited. The list of recommended actions, therefore, represents activities that are viable under current rules and regulations and are consistent with the adopted goals and objectives.

The Cohasset Harbor Master Plan shown above illustrates a number of recommendations to improve the harbor over a period of years. These proposals are described in the Policy Planning Chart below.

Policies Planning Chart

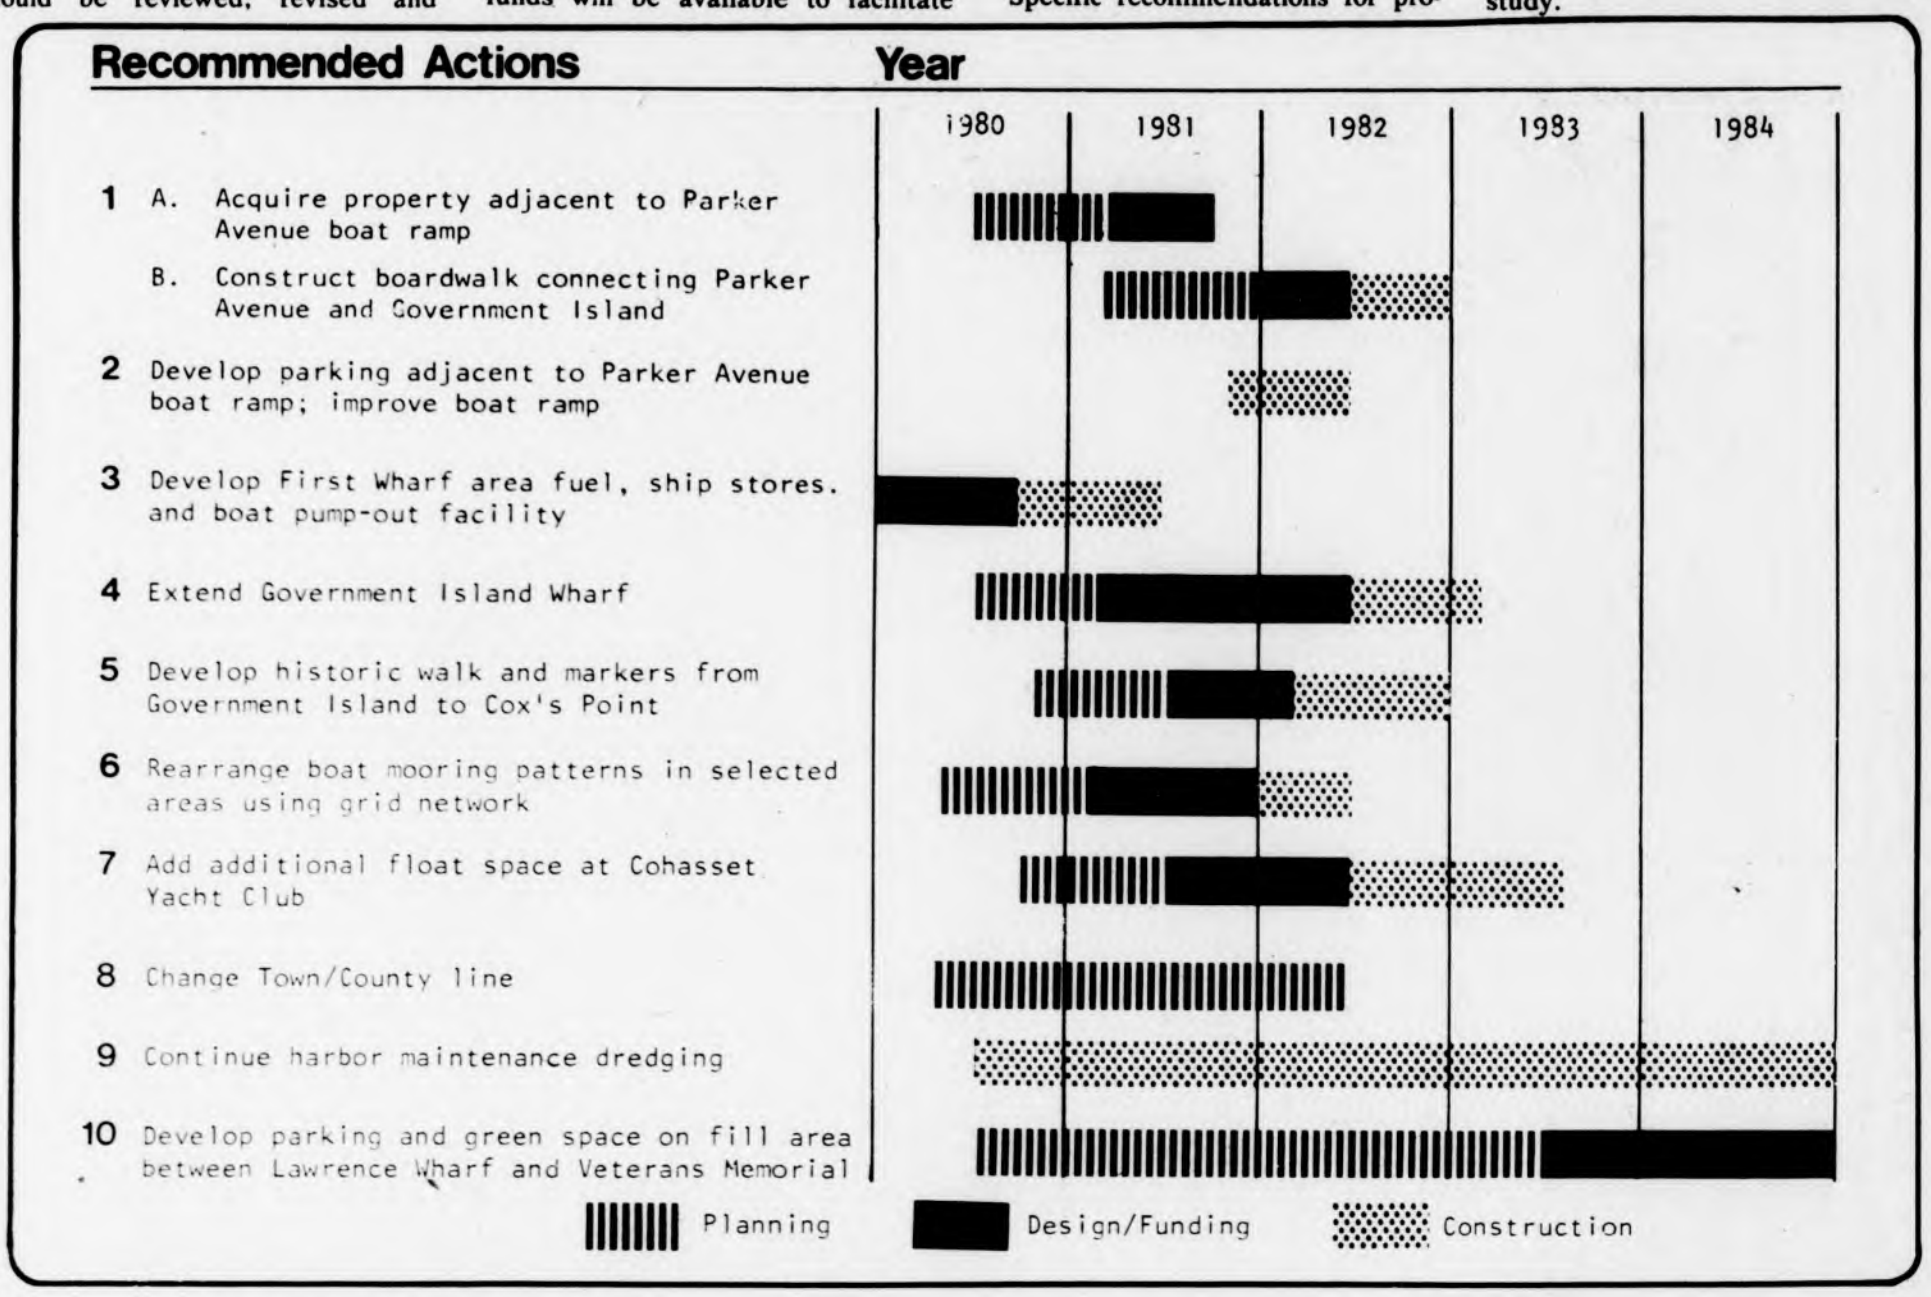
RECOMMENDED ACTION	GOAL/OBJECTIVE ADDRESSED	ESTIMATED COSTS	POTENTIAL SOURCE OF REVENUE	ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACTS
1. a. Acquire property adjacent to Parker Avenue boat ramp. b. Construct boardwalk connecting Parker Ave. and Government Island.	Provide adequate public access to, and parking for, harbor activities.	Land acquisition = $100,000 Design/Construction = $15,000	U.S. Interior Dept. - Heritage Conservation & Recreation Service 70-30 funding. Mass. Public Access Board 100% funding Town Purchase - Eminent Domain requires 2/3 vote of Town.	No direct impacts. Construction of walkway in wetlands area Limited impacts.
2. Develop parking adjacent to Parker Avenue boat ramp, improve boat ramp.	Provide adequate public access to, and parking for, harbor activities.	Design/Construction = $60,000	Mass. Public Access Board 100% funding	Limited impacts - area currently dirt parking area. Close proximity to restricted saltmarsh. Increased traffic on Parker Avenue.
3. Develop First Wharf area, fuel, ship stores, and boat pump-out facility.	Maximize recreational opportunities. Reduce pollution to harbor. Provide better services for boats.	Pump-out = $25,000	Private Funding	Increased boat traffic. Potential hazard from oil & gas from pumps. Odor associated with pump-out facility.
4. Extend Government Island Wharf.	Maximize docking use. Develop centralized shoreside commercial fishing facilities.	Design/Construction = $350,000	U.S. Commerce Dept. - Coastal Energy Impact Program.	Loss of bottom area with new piles. Increased turbidity during construction. Limited impacts.
5. Develop historic walk and markers from Government Island to Cox's Point. Phase 1-Markers. Phase 2-Walkway.	Increase public awareness of, & information on, historic aspects of harbor.	Phase 1 = $1,000 Phase 2 = $15,000	Private/Town Funding	Beneficial educational impacts.
6. Rearrange boat mooring patterns in selected areas using grid network.	Maximize mooring area utilization.	Costs dependant on design	Private funds for new mooring equipment	Increase in boat density. Greater demand for parking facilities.
7. Add additional float space at Cohasset Yacht Club.	Maximize mooring/docking area utilization. Maximize recreational opportunities in harbor.	Variable cost, dependent on size of addition. Approximate cost-$2,500 per boat slip.	Private funding	Net increase of about 45 boat mooring/docking spaces.
8. Change Town/County line.	Resolve administrative problems associated with location of Town/County line	Limited study, administrative and legal costs.	Towns of Scituate and Cohasset Metropolitan Area Planning Council	No direct impacts
9. Continue harbor maintenance dredging	Maintain adequate dredging activity to keep harbor navigable	Costs are variable. State and Federal matching funds available.	Local Funds U.S. Army Corps of Engineers 100% funding. Mass. Division of Waterways 75-25 funding	Requires adequate location for dredge material disposal.
10. Develop parking & green space on fill area between Lawrence Wharf & Veterans Memorial. a. Fill area and provide parking, green space. b. Add floats off fill area.	Provide adequate public access to, and parking for, harbor activities. Maximize docking area.	Design/Construction: Fill & Parking = $506,000 Floats = $194,000	U.S. Interior Dept. - Heritage Conservation & Recreation Service 70-30 funding Mass. Public Access Board 100% funding U.S. Commerce Dept. Coastal Energy Impact Program.	Fill in wetland area. Siltation and erosion during construction. Increased traffic & noise. Change scale of harbor. Net increase of about 30 boat mooring/docking spaces.
11. a. Construct new access road to Government Island Exit only to Border Street at bridge. b. Extend Government Island parking area.	Provide adequate public access to, and parking for, harbor activities.	Design/Construction = $30,000 Design/Construction = $18,000	Development costs may be offset by additional revenues from boats. see above	Relieve traffic on Parker Avenue. Area is in close proximity to wetlands area. Some loss of vegetation, forest cover.
12. Construct new boat ramp in Bailey's Creek.	Maximize recreational opportunities in harbor.	Design/Construction = $25,000	see above	May involve small amount of filling. Increased traffic, noise, activity in wetland area.
13. Develop parking area & float space on fill area in front of Hagerty property. Dead end Parker Avenue.	Provide adequate public access to, and parking for harbor activities. Maximize docking area.	Design/Construction = $354,000	see above	Fill in wetland area between low & high water area. Traffic & congestion on waterfront localized. Air, noise pollution impacts.
14. Construct shoreside dry storage facility for boats on Hagerty property	Maximize recreational opportunities.	Design/Construction = $954,000	see above Private development opportunity	See above. Business relocation necessary.
15. Raise breakwater	Provide adequate storm protection	Construction = $175,000	U.S. Army Corps of Engineers	Increase storm protection.
16. Increase police surveillance of harbor: add harbor night patrol.	Improve security of harbor.	May be absorbed through existing service. Added cost if new patrol required.	Town funding	None

Implementation Program

A five-year implementation program and schedule has been prepared for high priority Harbor Master Plan recommendations. This schedule should be reviewed, revised and extended on a annual basis.

The implementation plan assumes a combination of local, State, or Federal funds will be available to facilitate project financing. In some cases, it may be possible to amortize development costs through user fee charges.

Specific recommendations for project implementation are contained in memoranda included in the loose leaf binder developed for the Harbor Study Committee during the course of the study.



Harbor Uses (con't)

Other active recreational uses of the harbor incluce rowing, canoeing, fishing from docks and boats, and, to a limited degree, shellfishing.

Swimming is allowed from boats or from shore. The most popular swimming area is north of the breakwater off Bassing Beach.

Needs

The general demand f. r recreational boating is higher now than in the past. This is attributed to many factors — most notably a general increase in leisure time and greater disposable income.

There are individual exceptions to the rule, but the most identifiable trend for boating is that more people want to place more boats in the water — including Cohasset Harbor. This demand shows no signs of reversing, although characteristics of the types of boats people purchase do change.

Trends for Cohasset Harbor show a slight shift away from the use of gasoline-powered boats to sailboats. The total harbor fleet, however, is still roughly split 50-50 between powerboats and sailboats.

The current waiting list for a recreational boat mooring contains 169 names. Powerboats account for 77 of these and sailboats 92. The average boat length is 25 feet, with a range of from 12 to 60 feet. There is currently as long as an eleven-year wait for a mooring in Cohasset Harbor.

The needs of recreational boaters in Cohasset Harbor are both diverse and highly individualized. This is due to the variety of boat types, owner preferences, and reasons for boat ownership. Several areas of concern arise repeatedly in discussions with boat owners and recreationists. The needs expressed most often are:

additional mooring space,
fuel facilities,
better parking,
develop marina-day sailing facilities and provide better security.

Commercial Fishing

Lobstering is the primary water-based commercial activity in Cohasset Harbor. This activity is seasonal for half of the commercial fleet, with the remaining half using the harbor area year-round. In the winter months, lobster boats moor near the Yacht Club, an area which rarely freezes over. The Coast Guard's 65-foot tugboat keeps the entrance channel and mouth of the harbor from icing over during the winter months, although severe cold spells have resulted in the harbor being frozen for as long as ten days.

Other commercial activities include gillnetting, tuna fishing and mossing.

Lobstering

Massachusetts fishery statistics show that the coastal lobster fishery of Massachusetts continues to be the most economically important fishery conducted within the territorial waters of the Commonwealth. The 5.7 million pounds of lobsters, landed in 1977, represents a 35.7 percent increase over the 4.2 million pounds of lobsters landed in 1972. The total value of catches has increased in the same period from $10.6 million to $26.3 million.

The Harbor Master has furnished data showing that there are 43 lobster boats based on the harbor. These range in size from 14 to 43 feet. Some have drafts in excess of 5 1/2 feet. The commercial boats have a total gross value of approximately $360,000. The average commercial catch for the harbor ranges from 150 to 250 tons per year, having a gross value of $600,000 to $1,000,000 per year.

Of the 43 lobster boats moored in the harbor, 20 are engaged in full-time year-round lobstering. These boats range in size from 20 to 45 feet in length. An additional 20 boats possess a $100 commercial fishing license but do not operate on a full-time basis. Three boats operate under student licenses.

The lobstermen currently use both the Government Island Wharf and the Town dock in the Cove for loading bait and unloading catches. There are no fuel or Town-owned dockside boat repair facilities in the harbor to service the commercial fleet. Mill River Marina does haul boats and make repairs.

The lobster industry provides a range of benefits and some problems to the Town. Problems occur mostly from the traffic congestion and other conflicts generated by operating businesses and recreational activities within a confined area. Benefits, beside income to the Town through tax revenues and fees, appear in several ways, wtih the major benefit being a local source of employment. In addition, the lobster industry adds to the historic and cultural setting of the harbor and is a drawing card for tourists and patrons at the shoreside restaurant and businesses.

Other Commercial Fishing Activities

In addition to lobstering, several fishermen gillnet in the winter months — January to mid-march — to supplement their income. This is the period when the size of catches and days available for lobstering are limited. No boats utilize long-line type of fishing.

Bluefish tuna, with a current 1980 ex-vessel price of $2/lb, has stimulated interest in this market. Three to four tuna boats operate out of the harbor on a seasonal basis.. Catches are sold dockside to a Boston merchant who packs the tuna in ice and ships it directly to Japan.

Local students operate 10 to 12 boats to collect Irish Moss off coastal rocks and ledges. The moss boats operate from about June 15 to Labor Day. A local dealer brings a truck, equipped with a scale, to the Parker Avenue boat ramp where the mossers unload and sell their harvest.

This practice has, in the past, led to traffic problems and congestion at the Parker Avenue ramp. This is due to conflicts between pleasure boats wanting to haul at the same time the moss boats unload.

Commercial Fishing Trends

Offshore lobstering continues to be the dominant commercial fishing activity of Cohasset Harbor. Although fishery statistics indicate that the catch of lobsters has not declined for the harbor in recent years, it reportedly now takes 400 lobster pots to catch the same amount that 200 pots could catch 10 years ago. Ninety percent of the lobstermen now use the trawl techniques rather than single pots on a market buoy.

Lobster boats used by commercial fishermen are longer than they were a decade ago. The average lobster boat was around 25 feet 10 years ago as compared to an average length of 35 feet today.

Long-term trends will most likely show a continuation of the lobstering industry as it has in the past. The harbor fleet has developed to the maximum size existing facilities can accommodate. The full-time fleet of 15-20 boats have remained steady for some time. The major commercial increase has come from part-time fishermen. Current economic pressures, such as the high cost of fuel, may force some part-time fishermen to stop lobstering; however, different economic pressures tend to stimulate more interest in the extra and supplementary income which lobstering can provide on a part-time basis. The net result is a steady increase in demand for additional commercial mooring space and shore-side facilities.

Gillnetting, as a supplement to lobstering, will continue, possibly increasing in the future.

Commercial Fishing Needs

A list of the needs, as expressed by commercial fishermen, includes the following:

Fixed pier accessible at all tides; centralized docking/loading facilities,
fuel facilities,
mooring space for larger/additional boats, and cold storage for bait.

PLAY BALL! — There was plenty of action at the Little League field Saturday as the league kicked off opening day with a parade and exhibition games. Liam Stanford, left, watches his team, the Braves, from the top of the dugout, while Peter Corbett, center, serves one up. DEQE: No more 'Don't drink the water'

Residents of Lantern Lane, Fair Oaks Lane and Cedar Acres Lane can start drinking water from the tap again.

Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt released test findings from the Department of Quality Engineering (DEQE) Monday which show no trace of the chemical tetrachloroethylene (a possible cancer-producing agent) in pipe slices taken from various locations on the aforementioned Lanes.

Pratt said the tests don't prove that the chemical lining wasn't in fact used in the pipes, it just proves there is no problem with the chemical.

He further explained the difficulty in making the determination at the onset was that water pipes in the Lanes in question were being laid at a time when the manufacturing companies were changing over to a clear-lined pipe (1968-70). From 1970 on, however, Cohasset has opted for the use of ductile iron pipes which are cement-lines.

At this point in time, approximately 25 per cent of the town's piping is asbestos-cement pipe. In addition, Pratt said the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) has run tests on asbestos and has found no residue from the transite pipe.

Yes, Virginia...Mr. Creamer has a mother

By Karin Bartow

Nobody tells it like it is, like kids. Mrs. Mae Creamer of Dorchester, whose son John is the principal of the Joseph Osgood School, celebrated her 83rd birthday on May 1st. She received a treasure of poems, pictures, thoughts and wishes from the children of the Osgood School who know her son rather well.

The children's sincere and uninhibited birthday greetings to their principal's mother (it came as a surprise to some that THEIR principal has a mother!) undoubtedly delighted her, amused her, moved her and, perhaps, there was even a revelation or two.

Their optimism was totally unabashed: "Happy Birthday on your 83rd birthday; hope you make it to one hundred!"

They told her what sort of a job her son is doing. "Your son is a good . . . great . . . fine . . . nice

Kitten corral

Neat thing about kittens — they don't require a variance, a corral, a barn . . . they fertilize flowers and are potty-trained at birth! Just about everyone in town has kittens, and they are wonderful. Jan Ditmar has kittens (her orders are quickly being filled). Dick Barrows has kittens . . . he needs parents. Mary Jeanette Murray has wild kittens. Tanna Kasperowicz has two grey seersuckers left.

Fairman decision

Dr. Michael Bliss, sole determining member of the board of health, opted for the Fairmans of Jerusalem Road to keep their jumping pony Hope on the premises last week under the following conditions:

The Fairmans must reduce the size of the corral so that the westerly boundary corral is 50 feet from the westerly lot line and the easterly boundary is 50 feet from the easterly lot line.

Also, the Fairmans must install a mail wire mesh fencing over the lower portion of the corral fence 48 feet from the ground and must install in a six foot stockade fence from the southwesterly corner of the barn to the southerly lot line.

In addition, the Fairmans must install a corral gate lock, board up and seal a first floor westerly window of the barn and install an electrical fly killer in the corral area.

Details missing

In spite of an article which stated the contrary this week in a local daily, Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said Monday he doubted selectmen would be in a position to make a final decision Tuesday, (May 6) on whether to reinstate Randolph Feola, Jr. on the police force or take any other action.

"I was shocked to see the article in tonight's (last Monday's) paper," Clark said. "I certainly want to get the decision over with as much as anybody. We may discuss further details of the case in closed session this week, but there are still some details we're missing."

Merchants

Members of the Village & Harbor Association were scheduled to meet with selectmen Tuesday to discuss the shortage of manpower on the police department and discuss the possibility of the town's hiring clerical help in the department — which the association feels would free needed manpower on the streets.

At a meeting of the association last week merchants said they were pleased with the police department's recent activity in the village, but realized the force was short-handed.

Sweet Lily Pond

Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt always provides a nice, cool picture of water and paper cups for residents and reporters attending water commission-meetings. Water is the commissioners' product and we thought they did it in the style of Ocean Spray Cranberry Co., which provides cups of cranberry juice at its main plant.

However, when a member of the press commented Monday about the sweetness of the water at the Lily Pond level and its bitterness once if flows through the town's 94-year old pipes, Pratt confessed the water in the pitcher is from Wompatuck State Park.

Honor Society

Twenty-two new members were recently inducted into the National Honor Society at Cohasset High School. Yoanna Zotos, president of the society, said students must have a high grade point average and be active in school and community work to be eligible for membership.

The new members are juniors Karen Lipsett, Leslie Collins, Katie Smalzel, Tina DeVito, Jerry White, Brenda Birmann, Lori Stobart, Barbie Gurnis and James Higghs. Also seniors Ellen McCarthy, Rayna Sargent, Alexandra Mullen, Jodi Sandblom, Philip Tye, Leslie Carroll, Karen Smith, India Turner, Alicia Gurnis, Ronny White, Dvid Zobel and Doug Dillion.

Two horsewomen injured in Whitney Woods Saturday

Horsewomen Mary Fairman and Katy Morgan met in the emergency room at South Shore Hospital Saturday afternoon after injuries resulting from horse-related accidents over the weekend.

According to Mary, she had injured her hand (which is now in a splint) during a ring maneuver Saturday morning when a dog interfered with her act. After the hand swelled up later in the day, she went to South Shore Hospital where she met Kathy, who had just been thrown from her horse on a Whitney Woods trail. Kathy's accident resulted in a broken collar bone. She was expected to return home from the hospital Monday afternoon.

Rep. Murray seeking third term this year

A few weeks ago a Hingham resident remembered that a former community editor of this newspaper had once referred to Mary Jeannette Murray as the 'Harry Truman of Cohasset.' Reviewing that article in preparation for this article — we think the writer meant that MJM reflects a Truman principle that Murray has tried to follow all of her life.

It guided her father, a representative of the Third Norfolk-Plymouth District for 12 years. And he handed it down to MJM. . . in tact. In Pennsylvania it would be called "Quaker measure." And that's when someone always gives a little bit more than what's demanded.

Running for a third term for representative in the Third Plymouth District of Cohasset, Hingham and Hull, Mary Jeanette promises "More of the same" kind of concern she dispenses easily, effortlessly and genuinely.

Although she has no GOP opposition this year, four Democrats are campaigning heavily for her job. "All, except for Eddie Demoko, are young Democrats who don't know the area," is the meanest thing MJM will say about her potential rivals publically.

Basically, she's watching taxes for the taxpayer . . . a basic philosophy which can be borne out by her service to Cohasset as a former member of the board of selectmen for nine years, and a member of the housing authority for 10 years.

She's against mandated state programs, a proponent of home rule in every way, and she files a bill every year to give the administration of the towns back to the towns.

She has a voting record too that backs up her rhetoric. She has a record of 97 percent in voting in favor of the taxpayer — a record which received rave reviews from the Mass. Municipal Association.

During her four years on the legislature, MJM served on the committee for local affairs, the committee on counties (one of the most prestigious house committees) and during her first term she was elected vice president of the freshmen class of 1977.

House commissions she has been appointed to include the reorganization of higher public education, the commission to study the transportation of hazardous materials, and the commission to study gerontology.

She feels it's a good year for getting re-elected to her position, but while she expects to be reelected, she's hardly lounging on a chaise eating bonbons. She remembers that after years of serving his constituents on local boards and as state representative, her father, Nathaniel Hurwitz, "lost in a recount by one vote" when he ran for Cohasset selectman.

"One vote's important," she noted.

Water Commission briefs

WATER REGULATIONS

This year water commissioners will be reviewing water rates, service charges and regulations. Water Commission Chairman William Montouri said this is the third year the water department has continued with the same rate plan, which resulted in a financial loss in its second year, forcing the water department to use its cash reserves.

Part of the review this year will include rules which will eliminate dead-end water systems. Montouri said the reason being that if a line breaks there is no way of feeding water to that area through another line. In the future developers will be required to "loop back" to the main line.

Montouri added that the planning board has adopted some new zoning which is conducive to dead end systems.

SUPPLY

Unlike summers in years past, commissioners said there will be no restrictions on water usage this year. There's plenty of water for watering lawns, gardens and filling pools, and 20-minute showers.

GRANTS

Commissioners will make application for two state grants which have recently become available to water departments. One grant will reimburse towns for the construction of water treatment plants between 73-78. Up to 30 per cent of "eligible costs" will be reimbursed over a period of the water bond's life. The money will be used to reduce the principle, not interest. Water Supt. Edwin Pratt said he estimated the town could realize as much as $150,000 spread over a 30-year period. The money is available on a first-come, first-served basis.

The second grant would provide matching funds for towns for the purpose of leak detection, repair and distribution. Pratt noted the department is on the verge of completing a distribution study which could be plugged into this grant.

While Chairman Montouri noted the city of Boston can't account for 30-40 per cent of the water which flows through its system, Pratt said in his estimation Cohasset's system is very tight. "Daily figures don't vary. The system may be 94 years old but it's in good shape."

WATER DEPT. LAND

Commissioners are calling for a meeting with the recreation commission in the near future to discuss the recreation commission's desire to use land for that purpose in the vicinity of the old pumping station on Beechwood Street.

Water commissioners said they would have to consider state legislation which controls water department land and gather information regarding what portion of the 19 acres is actually owned by the water department.

Robert Jackson, newly elected water commissioner, said he would be in favor of joint-use of the land.

MEETING

Commissioners noted that Developer Robert Hawker had requested to meet with them at their next regularly scheduled meeting.

Variances and such

. . . None of us can survive without some sort of government protection these days. And when we apply for that protection we have to give up a bit of ourselves, and quite a lot of our personal privacy.

During these times, when we are all living closer and closer together . . . when economic troubles are turning more and more of us into gardners, conservationists, whatever . . . we need sensitive town government leaders.

We feel Dr. Michael Bliss, a recently-appointed member of the board of health, more than showed sensitivity when he deliberated (as a board of one) and ruled on the Fairman Pony variance this week.

Briefly (see Cohasset's week) he insisted that the Fairmans comply with the bylaw where possible and added some imposing conditions where the Fairman's could not physically comply under the bylaw.

We were equally pleased with the manner in which Health Chairman Marilyn Sweeney and her board conducted the workshop hearing on livestock. It can be said without questions that both proponents and opponents of livestock left that workshop with a new insight into animal husbandry.

Dr. Bliss did not address the issue of variances in his Fairman Pony decision, but we plan to follow-up that issue, as a result of comments made by Sandra Conklin and others.

Variances, when granted, certainly do restrict the property rights of abutters.

Coming attractions

CHSers are well aware, but the general public is not that Anna Marie Young has been diligently researching and interviewing students with respect to drug abuse at Cohasset High. Research has been completed . . . the article is in the process of being written . . . and Anna Marie's article will run in a May edition of the Mariner.

25th in July

July 1980 will mark the 25th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival, to be held once again on the Common in Cohasset, July 3-7.

Zoning map worse than no good

Letters

To the Editor:

The recent Cohasset Town Meeting accomplished much that was good for the town but the planning board did not make any progress in town planning. There are laws called the Zoning Enabling Act and the Zoning Act by which the state government conferred upon the town of Cohasset the right to divide its land area into districts and to prescribe the uses which the town wishes to permit in each district.

That right could be exercised by another revision of the zoning bylaw which is needed. To go with the zoning bylaw would be a zoning map of the town similar to an illustration in one of the zoning pamphlets.

The planning board has expressed its intention not to do anything further in connection with zoning. That unwillingness to comply with the provisions of the important law are very embarrassing.

That similar unwillingness resulted in the enactment of legislation which attempted to snatch away the town's right to implement zoning and to give that right to Arthur W. Brownell, Jr., former Commissioner of Natural Resources under Governor Sargent The legislation referred to was the Wetland Restrictive Act, General Law Chapter 130, Section 105.

Thomas Atkins, an associate of Brownell's, wrote that "The Wetlands Restrictive Act was enacted because the State (meaning Brownell and his associates) felt that local agencies of government (meaning the planning board) were incapable of carrying out their function. The law reads '. . . the commissioner may adopt, amend, modify and repeal orders attaching restrictions to deed of land . . . on which is a salt marsh.'"

Obviously that law is unconstitutional because it violates home rule, but about 260 parcels of land in Cohasset are paralyzed by the restrictions on deeds. In Cohasset some meadows which should be used for parking are tied up permanently so that they cannot be so used. Efforts are being made to get those restrictions removed. That salt marshes referred to are not important for wildlife, or marine life, but are very important to Cohasset for improving its harbor and land area around the harbor.

Town zoning is the same thing as town planning. By means of zoning Cohasset could exercise an influence on what kind of a town Cohasset wants to be in the future.

Cohasset is growing gradually in population and number of houses, but its growth and development now are uncontrolled. Under present conditions it is not easy to do much town planning because the Penn Central Railroad will not negotiate with the town for the sale of its railroad property.

When the railroad land is acquired it will be possible to have some new roads. One would be a continuation of Rte. 3A across Rosano's triangle down beside Sanctuary Pond, through the Wiggle and on the railroad land to the town center. Another road would be from the town center to North Scituate on the former railroad property. Besides improving Cohasset's road system, those roads would open up some house lots.

It can be predicted that the new wastewater disposal system will encourage the construction of some garden apartments on Rte. 3A between Pond St. and Beechwood St. They are needed by Cohasset people and will increase valuation.

Along Border St. on both sides of Gulf Bridge some meadows should be filled by hydraulic dredging to provide parking spaces. It may be that a new town committee will be proposed to do the town planning which the planning board refuses to do. In the past questionaires and discussions have made it evident that Cohasset wants to continue to be about the same kind of a country town that it is now. In general the zones can be about the same as they are now in actual fact, but not according to the present zoning map which is worse than no good.

A street map of the town now exists and should serve very well as a basic map for zoning. It may be that the Coastal Zone Management will change some of its rules so as to permit Cohasset's planning board to have a voice in the zoning of salt marshes. If so, some difficulties will be removed which now prevent planned development.

It is difficult to discuss the matter further because it is very involved. But one branch of our town government is now fouled up in ways that should now be corrected. One problem which is receiving no attention is the occasional flooding of the town's center.

Little League - a community project

[ED.'S NOTE: Dr. Uve Hublitz, president of the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association, made the following speech on the Little League field last Saturday, opening day of the season.]

There comes a moment when it's time to say a few thanks. As the President of the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association, I'd like to take a few moments to express our thanks.

First, I would like to thank the officers of the past few years: Bruce Darymple, Peter Whitman and John Kornet for their efforts of the past, and their continued involvement and help this year.

There are many people involved in this, working and dedicating their time as Peter O'Loughlin in the past and Mary Hartwell this year in Public Relations: John Kuhr running the pony league, Peter Whitman the minor league, Bruce Cameron the farm league, and Paul St. John the majors. Tom Myers for last night's dance. The advice of Clark Chatterton, our Athletic Director. This entire day and parade was made possible by Bob Ciciotte.

I'd like to thank our Selectmen for their support and help, our Police and Fire Department, the Cohasset Post of the American Legion, and the Department of Trees and Parks for maintaining this field. Talking about this field, we owe a great big thanks to Richard Ainslie for his countless hours in making this field the jewel of our main street. With the help of Whity Dunn surveying, Norma Swaine painting, the Wire Department wiring, David Hassen and Chuck Door from Cohasset Woodcarving providing our new sign — It's a community project.

This year we plan to open and run a concession stand, two people rose to the occasion, Sally Chatterton and Anita Bernstein. Anybody able to help, please contact Sally Chatterton or Anita Bernstein.

On a sad note, I would like to remember and thank somebody who has passed away this week — James Francis Higgins, known to us in Little League as Jimmy, when he was a coach, manager and officer in this organization.

Last, but not least, I would like to thank all of the coaches and managers of the farm league, the minors and majors and pony league, for their dedication to our boys and girls. And there's one manager who has stood out in the past for an unprecedented, unparalleled 28 years. No one less than Charles Marks, known as "Chickey" Marks.

For more than a quarter of a century he strove to inspire our players with a goal and enrich their lives towards the day when they must take their places in our community and their world.

With this plaque, "Chickey," we extend our gratitude. It simply reads: "Charles Marks, for 28 years of dedicated service toward the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association."

Lance Norris - Seventeen going on thirty two

Senior profile

Lance Norris, senior, probably won't receive the DAR award at graduation this year, but ask any kid who the most interesting senior is and Lance comes up first — only occasionally a second.

Headed for Whitman University in Washington, D.C. in the Fall, Lance will probably major in English and/or script-writing at this pro-communications university.

During his senior year his biggest claim to public fame may have been getting a berth on the girls' softball team — "Mrs. Watson (coach) didn't even want us on the team." He also played a neat dirty-old-man in The Boyfriend, a senior class production.

But underneath his 33-year old exterior (he's really 17) he's quite a different person than the bouncy and full of energy, chesty and confident as a new-car salesman guy he presents to theater-goers or softball fans.

At a recent meeting of the school committee, when it deliberated and then during a series of complicated votes elected to reconsider a former vote on football films, Lance asked the committee:

"Will you please explain what you did so we can tell the student body?"

Many parents at the session were also wondering what the committee had voted. But Lance dared to ask. And asking makes all the difference.

Involved in mostly athletic endeavors over his CHS career (football, wrestling, track, softball, soccer) he's also a percussion musician having played drums in the jazz ensemble and in The Czar, a student band run by David Zobel. He says he will remember most fondly his "Alternative Year" in 10th grade during which he attended theater classes in Boston and ran into interesting people, unlike himself.

Cohasset Dramatic Club Director Ron Emmons has called Lance back this summer for the Cohasset Dramatic Club production of Godspell, slated for the July 4 weekend. Lance is not positive he'll get a part — as five of the 15 callbacks have yet to be cut. But during a former production of Godspell he played the drums. He thinks he has a chance.

This summer Lance will most likely work at Paragon Park on the rides (he worked there last year). He used to deliver bread for Sunbeam.

He's a former member of the students advisory council. And regarding his future role as a script-writer he said: "I want to do it all. I want total control over what I do."

principal." And his students aim to please him. "A poem for Mrs. Creamer: There's Mr. Creamer every day, coming to help us in every way. We're all trying to do our best. And not trying to be a pest."

"I said, 'Hi Creamer,' " and he said, "What did you day?" And I said, "Hi Mr. Creamer." Sometimes I get into trouble and he talks to me. He says, 'Don't do that again,' and I say 'O.K. I am trying to be good.' ".

He is a many talented principal. "When the wind blows, everybody knows that Mr. Creamer is coming. Who knows? He might be about to check that plumbing!"

They wrote charming cinquaims with descriptions covering all the qualities of their leader. "Friend. Caring, helping. Play, work, write. Kind, nice and willing. Pal . . . Man. Very nice. Good, watchful, alert. Working with ease, kindness. Principal . . .Mister. Mister nice. Mister nice guy. Mr. Nice Guy is nice. Sir . . .Principal. Neat, handsome. Go into office. Angry, mad, frightening, scary. Man."

They tell about his secret cache of lollipops. "Last year I moved here. Sometimes I forget his name and call him Mr. Stool. He doesn't get mad, he laughs . . . I have never been to the office . . . When you are bad sometimes you go to his office and he gives you a lollipop."

"He is funny . . . a warm friend . . .I like his clothes . . . I think your son is handsome . . . He is smart; we were going to tell him how to play a game instead, he told us! . . . I remember when a deaf lady came in and sang for him. What a fun time that was!"

Could the mother of Mr. Nice Guy be anything less than wonderful? Of course not. "His mother is sweet, Mr. Creamer is a treat!"

☐A MAY BABY! Congratulations to Agnes and Joseph MacDonald who are the parents of a baby daughter, Sarah Jane, born on Thursday, May 1, at South Shore Hospital weighing 6 lbs., 10 ounces. Welcoming their new sister at home are: Michael, 18, Brenda, 17, David, 13, Madlyn, almost 8, and Jessica, who will be 6 on Wednesday (Happy birthday Jessica!). Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. John Molloy of Beverly.

☐Rich Tebbetts, who is spending a post graduate year at the Hotchkiss School in Lakeville, Connecticut, was elected to the Tri State Interscholastic (basketball) League. As a center on the Hotchkiss team, Rich is one of the two highest scorers there this year.

His parents, Priscilla and Ned Tebbets of Jerusalem Road, were present at the awards ceremony last weekend when Rich received a trophy.

A 1979 graduate of Cohasset High School, Rich was a member of last year's basketball team that went to the state semi-finals. He will be attending St. Lawrence University in Canton, New York in the fall (watch for news of their basketball team!)

Grace Tuckerman of South Main Street will be honored by the New England Deaconess Hospital at a special awards presentation for volunteers with 100 hours service to be held Thursday, May 15, at the Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum.

Mrs. Tuckerman, who volunteers in the hospital gift shop, will receive a service pin from Richard Lee, director of the hospital. The ceremony will be followed by a tour of the museum and a coffee hour.

☐Susan Buckley, a senior at Cohasset High School, won a scholarship to the Art Institute of Boston in the 1980 National Scholastic Art Awards competition, sponsored by Scholastic Magazines, Inc., New York.

Susan qualified for the national competition as a "Blue Ribbon Finalist" in this year's Boston Globe Scholastic Art Awards, a preliminary art competition held in January for students in grades 7 through 12 in all public, private and parochial schools in the state.

The National Scholastic Art Awards included 8,000 "Blue Ribbon Finalist" works selected from more than 150,000 entries received by 60 regional competition sponsors, such as the Globe.

There were 228 entries from Massachusetts, chosen from 5,500 entries submitted to the Globe-sponsored regional preliminaries.

The Scholastic Art Awards scholarship division of the competition considered 800 portfolios, including 32 from Massachusetts. A total of 82 scholarships were granted by art schools and colleges, by Scholastic Magazines and by the Eastman Kodak Company to high school seniors, like Susan, whose portfolios and academic records were outstanding.

☐Richard Hunter, organist at St. Stephen's Church, will give a "Harp Concent" for the benefit of the Fine Arts Chorale on Saturday, May 10 at 4 p.m., 236 Sea St., North Weymouth. Wine punch and tea sandwiches will be included for a donation of $5. Seating is limited to 70. Call Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman at 335-5930 for further information.

☐Cohasset High School music students, Lisa Kurtz, Eric Hurtig and Philip Trask, will be performing in a concert presented by the Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble (MYWE) on Tuesday, May 13, at 7:30 p.m. in Jordan Hall, Boston. Conducting the free program of works by Bernstein, Dello Joio, Holst, Porter and Nehlybel, will be Daniel Riley, MYWE Music Director, Christopher Morris, Assistant Director and Frank Battisti, who founded MYWE in 1970.

Just Around The Corner Company at Osgood

By Karin Bartow

"If you don't change or grow you go nowhere . . . it's the journey inside. The journey takes place inside." So begins "Monkey: A Folk Play of Ancient China" which was performed by The Just Around The Corner Company of Boston at the Joseph Osgood School last Thursday.

Second and third grade students participated in this imaginative and colorful show which was adapted from an epic folk novel that is still widely read and loved by Chinese children and adults.

Each class acted out a myth that they made up during the pre-performance workshop, that depicted how Monkey got his magic powers. Robots, dragons, octopus and the like were acted out by the students in telling the tale. The children also helped move the action of the play by taking various parts such as assistants to the Jade Emperor, a grove of royal peach trees and lazer beams.

The play is a delightful adventure with a beautiful moral involving a precocious, but lovable monkey on his journey to enlightenment. The amusing situations he encounters along the way transform him into a gentle, truthful being who can honestly sing as the play closes, "I am Monkey free!"

The company of six multi-ethnic and many-talented young men and women portray the tale and help the students act out the story in the Peking-style of production, combining dance, mime, gymnastics, martial arts and magic, while accompanying themselves with flute, guitar, drum, cymbal and other percussion instruments.

The Just Around The Corner Company is a theater group that creates and tours original plays for elementary school children through Mass. and New England.

Sophs plan Las Vegas night

By Rob Tis

The enterprising and amazing Class of 1982 (Sophs) is sponsoring a Las Vegas Night fundraiser to raise money for graduation class activities.

The event (time and place to be announced in next week's edition of The Mariner) will be open to the Town of Cohasset only. And over 30 prizes worth well over $500 will be up for grabs including a $100 antique mirror from The Corner Lighthouse, dinner for two at Hugo's and The Red Lion Inn and numerous other desirables donated by Cohasset Hardware, Flemmings Hardware, The Ground Round, The Log & Line, Good Sport and the William F. Raymond Paint Store.

Participants in this Las Vegas Night will be alotted fake money for the low admittance fee of $2 at the door. Then they will try to enlarge that sum while competing in poker, black jack, craps, roulette, etc. If by chance you should lose your entrance money, more cash will be available inside. At the end of the evening, 30 prizes will be auctioned off to the highest bidders.

Although geared to adults, all age groups are invited. Adult volunteers are needed to deal, make change or chaperone. Please call Soph Class President J.T. Price at 383-1790 or Secretary Rob Tis at 383-1852 if you can help us out that night. But — only call if you have had some experience at card playing!

Good citizens

At a meeting of the Colonel Thomas Lothrop Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, held recently at the home of the Regent, Mrs. Drexel Gibson of Border Street, the names of two Good Citizens sponsored by the chapter were announced.

Yoanna Marie Zotos of Cohasset High School and Michael Flynn of Whitman-Hanson Regional High School will be the honored guests of the Chapter at their May 14 meeting to be held at the Lothrop House, 14 Summer St. at 2 p.m.

Mrs. Gibson will be the speaker and will show pictures and tell of her trip to Iran and the Taj Mahal in India a little over a year ago.

Any DAR members of other chapters or anyone interested in becoming a member will be welcome to attend this meeting. Please call Mrs. Gibson at 383-9745 or Mrs. Pattison at 383-0076.

Beechwood antique show

The fourth annual antique and sale sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church will be held in Cohasset Town Hall Friday, June 6, from noon to 9 p.m. and on Saturday, June 7 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Tickets for the raffle are available from Mrs. Burnside. The raffle (which includes a 3 ft. Victorian dressed doll, a crazy quilt, and dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn) will be drawn on June 7, 1980.

CCC dollhouse tour

"It is a unique hobby," declared Sue Killilea, co-chairlady for the Cohasset Community Center's Spring Dollhouse Tour.

"It bridges all ages and sexes," she said, noting that senior citizens, men, women and school-age children are participating in the show. Miniatures of several Cohasset historic homes are to be displayed, as well as Carlo Conte's hand-carved reproduction of an 18th Century Italian home.

Some of the doll houses have belonged to several generations, and many feature hand-crafted curtains, carpets and furnishings.

Tickets may be purchased at the main office of the Cohasset Community Center or the Deer Hill School. The show is scheduled for Thurs. May 15, from 1-5 p.m.

For information call the Center daily from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. at 383-0088.

Applications will be accepted at the Cohasset Recreation office for an "outward bound type" program instructor for part-time employment this summer. Applicants should have prior experience working with youth ages 12-16, and demonstrated knowledge of Camping, Biking, Hiking, Backpacking, etc. If interested call the Recreation Department office at 383-6791 immediately for an application.

Margaret Dillon art display in Boston

A Visit to Carol's is the title for a series of paintings by Cohasset artist Margaret Dillon that will be on display through May 30th at the Helen Shlien Gallery, 354 Congress Street in Boston. This is the first time the complete series has been exhibited. The work is the result of a visit to a friend's home in Amherst and is a depiction by way of calm interiors, of the life of the people as reflected in their surroundings. Gallery hours are Wednesday through Saturday, 12-5 p.m.

Merchants unite on mutual problems

By Larry Fone

Village Shop Talk

The Cohasset Village & Harbor Association had its monthly meeting Thursday last at the historical Lothrop House. The attendance was super and some of the topics discussed were the walk/drive map of the Village & Harbor. A prepared layout will go to printers for estimates and in June it will be available to merchants at cost.

The association voted to donate $100 to the Senior Shuttle Bus and $50 to the South Shore Art Association for it's July art festival on the Common.

The appearance of the business area was discussed in depth at this meeting and at one held at my home last week. It's the feeling of all that we must upgrade our shopping areas. A committee has been appointed to help any merchant in resolving aesthetics for their shop fronts. Louis Watson, Phillip Smith, Gene Price and I are available for advise and special considerations in costs of painting are available.

In addition, a group of interested citizens and consumers are being formed to talk to retailers who would be good for the town. It surprises me that property owners don't involve the Village & Harbor Association, Rotary Club or the Jaycees in their efforts to find tenants who will make Cohasset a more viable shopping area.

I often feel some property owners would rent to a "fortune teller" or some other obvious misfit, just to fill shops for a short term. A long view is profitable to all, owners, the village and most important to the good customers.

If any of you readers would like to express your thoughts on what Cohasset should have for shops or even categories of merchandise existing shops could include, jot down your ideas on a postcard and write to me at Cookworks, 25 South Main St., 02025.

Cookworks' initial offering of home baked goods last Friday and Saturday was a great success. Some of Cohassets' best cooks were represented.

Cookies, cakes, sweets, quiches were available. This will be a weekly activity. Stop in to buy or cook up something good and sell it.

Hope all of you readers know about the financial problem of the senior citizen bus. Please contribute generously.

THE DODGERS watch the Opening Day game from the dugout at the Little League field on N. Main St.. (Derr photo)

Around town...

☐Dana Doggett, 21 year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Doggett, recently completed serving a two year mission for the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Elder Doggett was one of nearly 30,000 missionaries working in countries throughout the world.

Doggett worked in parts of Panama, Costa Rica and Honduras where he taught the restored gospel of Jesus Christ in Spainish, English and sometiems in "dialecto," a language of the Kuna Indians of the San Blas Islands.

Dana will resume his general education at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah this spring. He is a member of the local Mormon church in Hingham.

☐The Mormon Church at 379 Gardner St. in So. Hingham will sponsor one more Clothing Sale on Saturday, May 10 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Cohasset resident, Polly Doggett, says that all merchandise is brand new and comes from a nationally known sportswear house. Junior misses and small misses sizes only. Proceeds from the sale will go toward the building fund of the church for the cultural hall-gymnasium located behind the present chapel.

☐Cohasset resident Anne S. MacDonald was recently honored for her sales achievements by New England Telephone. This is the second consecutive year MacDonald has received an award for excellence since its inception in 1977.

She is one of 27 salespeople recognized by the company for doing an outstanding job in developing her segment of the business market for 1979.

First loss

Last-inning HR beats softballers

By Rob Tis

The scene was set, TV cameras, newspapermen, the works . . . the hill above sparkled with people, the parking lot was filled with cars all with blaring horns . . . what was it?

Just the varsity softball team having another game. The undying rivalry between Hull and Cohasset produced, as expected, great emotion as the first place camera-shy Skippers with three controversial boys lost to Hull . . . 12-11.

Cohasset went up 4-0 in the first when Jodi Sandblom unleashed a three-run blast and Lance Norris followed her act with another homer. Hull rallied on Cohasset errors and scored six in the second. The Skippers would not let their fielding reflect their hitting as they got three more going in

A COMEDY OF errors, as Jodi Sandblom makes a face before tagging a Hull player out at second. By the looks of things, the face worked.

the third stanza.

Then Hull broke loose, upping it's total to 12. Skippers rallied in the sixth and seventh, but could only manage one. "The pressure was intense," Mike (three runs on the day) Thornton said. "Whenever I turned around the guy had the TV camera in my face."

The Pirate coach was quoted as being extremely irritated with the Cohasset boy/girl situation. She said boys have no place in the game. Certainly the Pirates seemed to be motivated by more than the mere rivalry or more than the chance to gain first place — they seemed to be possessed by the idea of conquering a semi-boys team.

Skippers will face the Hull team one more time and in all likelihood it will be a contest for first. Skipper Coach Watson feels Cohasset will take it all. "We had some trouble with errors and I think we can beat them if we play them again."

Skippers savaged Holbrook 12-6 last week. Dave Turner pitches a fantastic game, allowing Holbrook only a few runs. The game was in jeopardy in the early innings. The fourth was the big inning for Skippers — a big 10 runs (four of them on a Karen Froio grand slam) were earned. Froio's grand slam was propelled 40 feet over the fence and all the way across Pond Street to the delight of Cohasset fans.

BOYS' BASEBALL

Thanks to Bruce Maynard, the boys' baseball team won its first game of the season Monday. Both Cohasset and Middleboro came out slugging, Skippers scoring nine runs in the first six innings to Middleboro's seven. The Skippers led by Paul Plante with two doubles and three R.B.I.'s. Mike Sullivan had three hits and three runs, while Phil Drago and John Ayer both had two hits and Joe Becker came in with a big double.

Andy Shoshan pitched with Herculean effort for five and a quarter innings. Bruce (Save-The-Day) Maynard came in to get out the side and keep the Sachems scoreless until the seventh.

Down by two in the seventh, Maynard took the mound. Sachems scored one — Maynard pitched two outs . . . and then with two outs, bases loaded and the pressure building like Three Mile Island, Maynard forced the Sachems to fly out and clinched the game for the Skippers.

GIRLS' TRACK

East Bridgewater was a tough loss — 67-51. Individual performances at this meet saved the day somewhat, with Lorraine Carroll winning the 220, Mary Jo Mahoney running away from everyone in the 880 and Hannah Clinton capturing the mile. Erin O'Brien leaped to a long-jump victory and India Turner raced for a win in the low hurdles.

Cohasset showed its depth in running as it took both relay events: the 440 relay with Tina Birmann, Ann Parziale, Karen Eckberg, and Lorraine Carrol; the mile relay with Dianne Gunville, Erin O'Brien, Mary Jo Mahoney and India Turner.

BOYS' TRACK

Boys slumped to 2-3 after losing a tough one (96-43) to a strong East Bridgewater squad last week. Defeated but not down, Cohasset shone with many fine individual efforts. Benbow, the sizzling Welshman, barely escaped embarrassment by conquering his opponent by one second in the two mile. Willard Taylor off honor roll fame, copped a double victory in the high jump and discus, both of which he has dominated all year in the South Shore League.

Lightening fast Phil Tye blazed to victory in the 220 and 440 yard dashed.

WATCHING INTENSELY FROM THE sidelines is Gia Barresi, Cohasset softballer, trying to distract Hull's first baseman.

Norwell balks at Skippers

The Norwell School Committee Monday night cancelled its game with Cohasset this week because of the three boys on the Skipper roster.

The action, according to reports, was not intended against Mike Thornton, David Turner and Lance Norris per se, but rather is directed toward the fact that Cohasset is the only team in the South Shore League with boys on the roster. Until equity is established in the League, the committee said, Norwell will not play Cohasset in softball.

Tigerettes to start season next week

The Tigerettes, a women's softball team from Cohasset sponsored by Stephen Mack of South Main St. in the Hingham Women's League is starting its 21 game season next week.

The team is coached by J.L. Murphy of Pleasant St., captained by Charlene Kurtz Jones of Arrowwood Rd. and co-captained by Barbara McDevitt of Lawson Rd., Scituate.

All games are played on Hingham fields, although practice is in Cohasset.

A Kramer vs. Kramer time - the court room divorce

By Wendy Hammond

As if the emotional trauma of marital separation is not enough, brace yourself for the Court Scene!

If you are lucky, you have only invested about $1,000 in preliminary expenses. The endless phone calls and meetings with your lawyer (in whom you have the utmost confidence?) bring you to the experience of a life time — the COURT ROOM DIVORCE.

Hopefully, your lawyer and your spouse's lawyer have been able to work out some sort of agreement in the "smoke filled rooms." After all, it's their fight, they are the ones who are divorcing one another. You've bared your soul to this person who holds your whole future in his hands, and the time comes when you have to sit back like a helpless child, and hope he does it for you.

The "wife" has been prepped to dress in very demure clothing, looking as close to the Virgin Mary as possible. A navy blue dress with a white Peter Pan collar is fine, not too much make up, and low heel pumps. It's important to look affluent, but not flashy...the dutiful wife, loving mother, used to a decent life-style, (and anxious to hold on to it).

The "husband," on the contrary, must portray the hard working, penniless, unfortunate soul trying his best to provide for a family that no longer wants him. His attire might be an old suit, out-dated in style, with similarly antiquated tie, and unpolished shoes. Or he might opt for the jeans, plaid shirt, workmen's boots, disheveled hair look of the moonlighting "executive." (If he does, he's got a helluva nerve to declare $40 per week for drycleaning expenses on his financial statement.)

The big day comes, arriving early at the court house, you are apt to lose your breakfast waiting for the clerk to call your case. Sitting listening to testimony of one case after another, you quickly realize that what is a once-in-a-lifetime shot for you, is routine for the Judge, and by the time he gets to your case, he might be sick to death of the whole business of divorce and be tempted to make a rash judgment of two more people who can't work things out.

You're next on the agenda, your palms are clammy, your knees are weak. The Judge calls a recess for lunch. Your lawyer wisks you out of the courtroom trying to avoid a confrontation with your soon-to-be-ex spouse. He says he has some calls to make and will see you back here at two. Now you wish you had accepted the offer of your friend to hold your hand through the day. You couldn't possibly eat anything, what are you going to do for two hours!!?

Single in the suburbs

Two hours later, you're back, and you haven't the slightest idea what you did. Without much chance to think about it, it's your Kramer vs. Kramer time. You listen to strangers describe your life, and wonder if it's you they're talking about. You take the stand, and wonder if it was your right hand that you swore with. Your lawyer is asking you questions, you spit out the well-rehearsed lines, trying not to catch the eye of your once cherished life's partner. The whole time you're spilling out your marital history for the world to hear, the Judge is preoccupied reading the lengthy agreement that spells out your future. Of course, if there is no such agreement, the trial begins, and continues, and begins again, the whole procedure worth at least ten years off your life expectancy, and ten pounds off your already weakened body. (If you've always searched for the easy way to shed a few extra pounds, this could be it!)

Eventually you hear the boom of the gavel, and you leave the courtroom with the next case already in progress.

The ironic thing is, after you've spent an enormous amount of money, and emotional energy to reach a divorce settlement, the agreement is only as valid as the relationship between the ex-spouses. And if it was all that good you wouldn't be getting a divorce in the first place. If he doesn't feel like paying, he won't, for a while; if she doesn't want him to see the kids, he won't until she's good and ready.

Upon getting a divorce, you are immediately faced with a new challenge: to get along with the person you've decided you couldn't! The fun has just begun.

What really counts for Mother's Day

By Lois Martin

Every year a few individuals and firms alike knock themselves out trying to come up with an innovative idea to honor Mother on her day.

A few years ago the Red Sox let mother in free and allowed the kids at half price. Dad got no break at all on the deal and was merely designated driver and provider of Fenway Franks.

Now this year the John Hancock Mutual Life Insurance Company has issued an invitation to Mother to enjoy the view from its observatory, free of charge if accompanied by a son or daughter. No sense going there childless, apparently. They won't buy your delivery room stories from 50 years back.

PATCHES

Anyway I get a bit pensive when Mother's Day is taken seriously. Most of us don't plan to expect too much from the day. We don't like reminding others to take note of us. That's no honor. Mother's Day counts only under certain guidelines. A card counts, a kiss counts, doing the dishes counts. No sibling fighting counts double. And a special unexpected little something counts triple but the honorers have to come up with it themselves without hints from Mother.

And it's funny when I think of going up to the observatory to be honored — my muse becomes rhetorical. Could I see from up there into the future or the past of my career of motherhood? Does the view include the scene of the first newborn and his mother when she wondered if she'd love him differently when he grew. (Yes and no to that answer of nearly 22 years ago.)

And could I look back and see a three year-old as he filled a neighbor's 250 gallon oil tank with the water hose after watching the oil man all winter? Would we revisit from the observatory, like Dicken's "Christmas Carol," the days past when we sat by hospital cribs, silently praying for a pneumonia stricken baby, while we sewed an Indian costume for another child's school play?

Ah, we mothers entertain drama now and then in behalf of a full time job which we'll never quite retire. The job description will change maybe but we expect to move on to consultant or honorary mother rather than retiring.

Personally I suspect there's one thing families could give Mother that might be in the triple range. It doesn't include the horizon as seen from the Observatory but it doesn't necessarily exclude that or any other trip or gift.

But I believe if you could convince Mother on her Day that she's done a good job, you'd give her what she's wanted most in the world. Tell her she's provided magnificent children. You see she's never quite absolved herself of guilt, (part of a mother's makeup), wondering if she should have done this or that when children were seven, eleven or later. And what's more she hasn't quite forgiven herself for some of the things she has done that seemed right at the time.

She's given grace to husband and children for all things not worth mentioning or remembering throughout the family's lives. But she's never applied that same grace, generosity of spirit, to herself.

If Mother were to find, in those who'd honor her, adamant indication of her having made a constructive difference in this world through her children, she'll go to sleep Sunday believing herself of great value. And that's really the purist intent behind the day.

The truth remains, in spite and in light of liberation, a woman can achieve, even provide satisfactorily. But a mother whose job is common can attain excellence in a way no other profession allows. And that's a goal we're never going to give up . . .

Still one shouldn't think for a moment, based on my mother's muse, that we're above receiving material goods, paltry though they may be compared to gifts of love and kindness. Remember we'll also forgive you for going overboard at the store in our behalf.

McKinnon, brass confer on 'boat'

Senator Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) met last week with Secretary of Transportation and Construction Barry Locke and DPW Commissioners to discuss the continued operation of the hovermarine Yankee Skimmer, the high-speed commuter boat that successfully operated between Hingham and Boston last year.

McKinnon said, "Boat service between the South Shore and Boston makes eminent sense. The South Shore has very limited options for commuting to Boston. The expressway is highly inadequate and there is little or no service from the shore communities of Hingham, Hull, Cohasset and Scituate. Yet these communities do pay tax dollars to the MBTA."

"A am committed to water transportation and boat service between Hingham and Boston," said McKinnon. The high-speed, characteristic of the Yankee Skimmer makes commuting by boat very attractive for a large number of people — an average daily ridership of over 300."

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Once a year often isn't time enough for the proper observance of Mother's Day. As a mother and daughter, I sometimes feel women deserve a gold medal for their eternal battle with dust and lint, hours of "toil" midst pots and pans and daily hassles with the food bill. However, short of a statue in the park, most of us will gladly settle for a hug and kiss and, as my mother would say, "Just being together." Karen Hettstrom's family has a nice way of observing Mother's Day whereby they all congregate at the home of a family member whose turn it is to cook. This Sunday they'll gather at a "bachelor sister's" and 14-month-old Erica Lee will be far more likely to enjoy the occasion than last year, when Karen observed her first Mother's Day. Here is her suggestion for an easy, different Korean dish for when you're having company. It's from a collection of Karen's father's, who enjoys oriental cooking in his free time.

BUL-KOUGI

2 lbs. lean, 1¼ thick slices of sirloin, or top of round
2 scallions, finely chopped
3 garlic cloves, minced
5 T soy sauce
2 T vegetable oil
¼ c. sugar
2 T dry sherry
¼ tsp. Accent
1/8 tsp. black pepper

Slice steak in thin, diagonal slices, scoring with an "x" before marinating in sauce made of remaining ingredients. Put in sauce for a minimum of 30 mins. Drain. Place on broiler as near to hear source as possible, broiling 30 seconds to 1 minute each side. Serve with Chinese vegetables, or rice.

This coming Sunday is a time for remembering mothers, but often it's a time when mother remembers back through the years when a wilted offering of dandelions or wild violets clutches in a grimy little paw, meant more than the most expensive orchid corsage. Mrs. Fred Hubbard can almost qualify as a native of Marshfield. Though born in Stoneham, she has lived in town all of her married life and, together with her late husband, Glenn, raised a family of five. Two of her sons are in education and Helen has been secretary to the school superintendent in Marshfield for many years. Now living in Winslow Village, Mrs. Hubbard recalls baking for a growing family, when the cookie jar was always filled, the doughnut crock, too, and she had racks of pies and cakes in the pantry. How many mothers like that do you know today?

Weymouth was home for Kathleen Grant when her five children were growing up and she recalls Mother's Days when the family would attend Communion Breakfast, after which there was always a gift awaiting her on the dining room table. All mothers wore either a pink or white carnation on that day, another forgotten custom. Mrs. Grant is quick to admit that her first love was an immaculate house and, though her family was always well fed, cooking was not her favorite thing. Not so, Marlene Togo, who shares with us her "favorite, all-time recipe," saying that it's a hit no matter where she serves it. It may seem a little expensive (Marlene figures perhaps $3.25 for each strudel), but as a side dish, it serves 10 or 12 and more as an hors d'oeuvre. Besides, who cares? Delicious sounding is her

MUSHROOM STRUDEL

1 pkg. Pepperidge Farm Puff Pastry
2 lb. mushrooms, sliced very thin in a food processor, if possible.
¾ stick butter
1 level tsp. tarragon
½ c. sherry
Dash of salt
Freshly ground pepper, about 8 twists
½ c. sour cream

Saute mushrooms, tarragon, sherry and seasonings in butter over medium heat and when liquid boils down, add sour cream. On a floured board lay your two sheets of puff pastry and brush with melted butter. Divide mushroom mixture between two pastries, laying along one end, leaving a border about 1/2" before rolling up, jelly-roll fashion. Place seam side down on ungreased cookie sheet and bake in 350 oven until golden brown. This being an old recipe from a magazine, Marlene long ago lost it and doesn't quite remember how long the strudel bakes. "Just keep an eye on it," says she.

Angler's Corner

By Lindy Blaisdell

For those Anglers that only get two or three chances a year to fish — try trolling.

Trolling covers more water at varied depths in a shorter time than bank fishing. Once fish are located, make a mental note of the conditions. Cloud cover or brightness, depths of water, weed presence, trolling speed, your relation to shore, and even temperature if you carry a thermometer.

Consider the surrounding landscape. A hill or bank usually leads to a sharp drop-off. A flat field will graduate to a smooth bottom.

If more than one fish is caught look for similar areas elsewhere on the pond.

There are two types of trolling. One is trolling. Two, there is trolling with a trolling speed indicator. Trolling speed indicators, such as Trollex, allow you to adjust to a constant speed going with or against the wind or current.

Lure speed is very important. Plugs such as Flatfish and Lazy Ike's must be trolled quite slowly. Slim fish-like plugs, Rebel's, Creek Chubs, and Rapala's work best at a faster speed. Alphabet plugs, fat bodied look-a-likes, deep runners, and some lures like Mooselook Wobblers and Dardevils run true at a moderate speed.

In all of the above mentioned lures the action is built in, however, streamers work at all speeds but need some arm pumping action on the fisherman's part.

To take full advantage of your indicator, troll your lure along side the boat at varied speeds until maximum action is attained. Note where your indicator is reading, for future reference, drop the lure back and start fishing. Keep your indicator reading the same going down, across, or against the current or wind. This will keep the lure at the same depth, speed up a little when circling back. Adjust your depth by the amount of line behind the boat.

Keep in mind that if more than one lure or plug is used they should both be of the same general type. Streamers are the exception.

TROUT

Change lures frequently, vary your depth. Fish shallow using smaller lures in the spring, go to deeper water and larger lures in the summer months. Stay with the larger lures throughout the fall but move back closer to shore. Early A.M., then again towards evening are best in close to shore. Spend mid-day, especially bright ones, in deep water. For the dog days of August, Davis Rigs are popular. They must be trolled slow and deep. A small colorado spinner and night crawler or Flatfish are best suited to the slow rigs.

BASS

Smallmouth bass can be caught in early spring by trolling fish-like lures through their spawning areas. These are usually found in 10 to 30 feet of water along a rocky shoreline. Largemouth bass are found by trolling along weed beds and grassy shorelines. In warmer weather, troll or wind drift a weighted jig or spinner bait off shore in deeper water. Try to pick up an old creek bed or some type of structure for best results. Once you catch a fish in this manner, mark the spot, anchor and cast. Bass tend to school in small groups during warmer weather, your chances for more action are good.

PERCH

Large yellow perch can be a lot of fun on light tackle. Select a spinner, such as Mepps. Troll it slow along a river bank, drop off, or old creek bed. Sometimes a small spinner and worm work best, and streamers can be deadly also.

picture

Adding a strip of pork rind to your trolling lures will give them additional life-like action.

FROM THE OCEAN

Saturday was the day to be fishing. A nice, clear warm day. The first in well over a week.

I had to work.

However, reports were favorable from Quincy Bay. Flounder beginning to show up. Cod are around but small.

From Charlie's Bait & Tackle comes some good news. Flounder from Duxbury Bridge, Cod outside near the Gurnet and off Brant Rock.

We tried to confirm these statements Sunday. The wind was bad, forcing us to stay in the bay. We caught several Flounder, a few small Pollock and three crabs. The Flounder seem to be there. All we need is a break in the weather.

Shad are showing in both North and South Rivers. Sometimes known as a poor man's Salmon, Shad are a very sporty fish. More about Shad next week.

ALL'S WELLS THAT STARTS WELLS.

What David Wells can bring to a restaurant is legend. His original Fiddler's Green in Duxbury was the South Shore's watering hole until he sold it a few years ago.

His stint as manager of Locke-Ober's made the papers when he tried to improve the service at this stuffy Boston grande dame.

And the wine expertise he garnered from The Ritz makes him among the top New England sommeliers.

All of which augurs well for his latest venture: Fiddler's at the Granary.

A restaurant of eclectic charm and savoir faire, Fiddler's at the Granary is the restaurant we've all been waiting for.

Link Bloomfield - Cohasset's man in Washington

By Tanna Kasperowicz

When a little over two weeks ago Cuba's Fidel Castro opted to permit Cuban refugees to seek salvation in American — that and the spinoff problems the action prompted became another muddle in a series Cohasset's Link Bloomfield, an M.I.T. professor, had to puzzle over.

We caught Bloomfield between trains at his home on Beach Street, Sunday, where he offered a perspective on the affairs of state and some humor to go along with his 12-hour days in Washington as special assistant to National Security Zbigniew Brzezinski and short, short weekends in Cohasset.

BRZEZINSKI AS A TENNIS PARTNER

While it might have been a delight to beat Brzezinski on the tennis court last week . . . he looks forward to returning to M.I.T. as a professor in the Fall.

"I've got three months left of my year's tour. This particular year has been difficult," he said, describing a 'burnt-out' feeling.

Bloomfield was back in Washington as of Monday, to deal with the immediate problem of finding housing medical help and the screening of Cuban refugees who now number over 30,000.

"Castro knows how to manipulate American public opinion and he does it well. We're trying to make it an international problem. Other countries have said they'd take a proportionate number of the refugees. But when we set up an airlift for refugees over a month ago, Castro changed the rules. He decided all refugees would now have to go to America."

"If we were a dictatorship we would have said: 'We'll shoot them when they arrive,' But we've got to receive these people in a humane way."

And as long as the American people feel we should open up the door, Bloomfield said President Carter will.

While Bloomfield feels Castro has improved the condition of the Cubans with regard to health care and education, "The economy is a disaster. People with incentive need to get out."

At the same time the United States is dealing with Cuban refugees, it has pledged itself to accepting approximately 14,000 refugees a day from South East Asia. "The Cambodian problem is famine, and no sure way to get food to them."

AMERICAN HOSTAGES IN IRAN

Bloomfield said he supported President Carter's recent military move to free the American hostages in Iran. "I felt it might provide a surgical solution."

He feels new Secretary of State Edmund Muskie, who succeeds Cyrus Vance (who resigned on principal because of Carter's action to free the hostages) is likely to have a healing effect on the American scene.

She gives me love, I give her flowers

Noble's Camera Shop announced the winners of its I Love Mom Because contest Monday afternoon. The winners (see photo and caption) received their choice of a poster or a walking smurf (toy) while each Mom received a calculator. The runner-ups received writing recommendations.

The 94 entrants from Grades 1-9 had pearls of wisdom to impart and they did it with great humor, wisdom and not a little diplomacy. We had Noble's permission to print a few of the reasons kids gave for loving Mom. In almost every instance we took the writer out of context, printing only a line or two from a message filled with love.

3RD GRADERS

Jennifer Lagrotteria told judges that her mother is an honest lady "And she helps me when I am sick." She also stressed: "I am not writing this note because I want to win. It is all true what I said in this note. She is very smart, too."

Mike Coleman's mother not only tucks him in bed every night, "Every morning she makes pancakes. I like her so much I moe (sic) the lawn."

Marry [sic] Ellen Scott, Cliff's mother, "Brushes my hair in the morning. At Easter she takes care of me. When it is night time she tucks me in."

And Amy Lincoln said "The only thing that she does no other mother can do is she loves my sister and me more than anything in the world."

Mike Meers' mother, Carol, gives him breakfast in bed, while Betsy Andrade's mother, Dorothy, gets her tickets to Paragon Park. "She told me I could ride my bike any time I want."

Jack Beddows stated simply: "She took care of me all my life." While Kelly combs told judges: "You should taste her homemade pizza."

Getting a kiss when walking through the door "makes me feel wanted," Tesha Wallace said. "And when I make believe I am running away from home she makes me muffins and I stay."

"She lites up my days," Jennifer Powers said of Mom, Joan. "She feeds me right and helps me to perfect health," said Michele Coughlin of Mom, Barbara.

Health curriculum voted in 6-zip

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Surely the most interesting information obtained by the zealous health education committee was not publicized at the meeting of the school committee Monday.

Missing were the answers to a bevy of probing questions asked doctors, ministers, police officers and other agencies. Teachers' answers to whether they saw cases of physical, sexual, emotional or general neglect child abuse in Cohasset children were also missing.

However, answers to various other questions asked the respondents: 85 teachers, 30 professionals, 780 junior and senior high school students and 57 residents, showed 98 percent in favor of health education in the schools.

After a thorough presentation, the school committee voted 6-zip to implement a health education course and opted for School Supt. Dr. John Maloney to advertise for a certified health education coordinator with a Masters (preferred) and 2-4 years of experience.

The health ed. committee recommended, and the school committee voted, that any curriculam to be taught would be approved by an advisory committee comprised in a yet unknown ratio by parents, a physician and others.

The first seven categories which the surveyed groups saw as important areas of health concern were in their order of preference: nutrition, emotional development, use of drugs, use of alcohol, safety, body structure and function, and sexual awareness.

CHS grads find Ivy competition tough

John Leary, director of guidance, told the school committee Monday an estimated 82 per cent of CHS graduates will be attending some of the best colleges in the nation come September, but competition at the "Ivies" and "potted "Ivies" is stiff.

In spite of the tough economy, college attendance is up 3 per cent over last year's 79 per cent. Students planning to enter the work force is down, 15 per cent as opposed to 19 per cent last year. While those entering the service is up 1 per cent — 3 per cent as opposed to 2 per cent last year.

A parent at Monday's meeting said she felt

Cohasset's Week

3-A Indians

The astute motorist may have noticed some unusual walkers along Route 3A Monday afternoon and early evening.

Anywhere from five to 30 members of the Wampanoag Indian Tribe walked from Boston to Plymouth through town as part of a Spiritual Native American Walk.

Walkers encamped at Teke Sherman Park off Rte. 3A, Scituate, and held religious and spiritual ceremonies during the night. The ceremonies were strictly private and inquiries were discouraged.

Correction - of sorts

Water Superintendent Edwin Pratt called us to say he was just teasing about the water in the picture at water commission meetings being from Wompatuck State Park. He said it really is Lily Pond water. The Mariner is considering petitioning for an analysis.

Atkinson benched

One of the most fun things we receive in the mail is the Unitarian bulletin. This week we learned (we also heard about it at the policemen's ball) that Rev. Edward Atkinson wowed Unitarians at a church gong show by playing the piano while lying on his back on the piano bench. Parishioners were further impressed by the fact that while playing his hands were crossed.

In the bulletin this week Ed explained that if one plays the piano upside down, it is by crossing the hands that one keeps the right hand playing the treble section of the music and the left hand playing the bass — which is the usual order of things when playing right side up.

The moral of that performance was: "Could it be that if you find yourself seeing the world upside down then perhaps it is time to reverse some of your positions so that everything will come out right side up?"

Interesting.

Beach stickers

Beach and disposal area stickers are available to Cohasset residents at no charge at the police station. If the town were selling them, it would make a mint . . . the beach and the disposal area are two of the most popular shows in town!

Drinan parallel

Lester Hiltz drew the attention of selectmen last week to the timing of the withdrawal of U.S. Rep. Robert F. Drinana, D-Mass., from re-election to that office, noting it gave candidates only 24 hours to file nomination papers. Which they did, presumably, Hiltz said, with the approval of the secretary of state.

He noted that when he and Paula Knowles filed for election to the board of health, the secretary of state's office, when queried, said the position should be appointed i.e. the short notice to the public.

Hiltz said the rules should be the same at all levels in the state.

We would like to add that a town bylaw (voted by town meeting) could give town officials direction in the future.

Chris Williams

Saxophonist Christopher Williams, a senior at Cohasset High School, will be the featured soloist on two Hingham Civic Orchestra "Pops" Concerts, May 16 and 17 at The Cove in Hingham. Winner of the 1980 student competition sponsored by the orchestra for his performance of the Glazounov Concerto for Saxophone and Orchestra, Williams will perform a "Tribute to Rudy Wiedoeft" and "Harlem Nocturne."

He is a past member of the Massachusetts Youth Wind Ensemble and was runner-up in the 1979 student competition.

IMAGINE WAITING ALL THROUGH THE NIGHT for Music Circus Tickets? The Carey family of Hyde Park did just that last week. The box office opened Saturday. It will remain open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. seven days a week through June 20, when performances will begin. This is the 30th Anniversary of the South Shore Music Circus. (Derr photo)

You did it!!!

In a very short number of weeks, the Cohasset Rotary Club and the citizens and organizations of Cohasset did the almost impossible.

The Rotary organized a fund-raiser which collected over $6,200 to purchase the Senior Shuttle Bus from Cohasset Motors. The final transaction will be made today (Thursday).

Seletman Chairman and Rotary Member Arthur Clark said any funds collected over and above the $6,200 will be used for future repairs to the bus. The Rotary would like to have the bus door repainted to say something similar to: Courtesy of Cohasset Citizens!

Second in Aruba

"Put it deep down in the paper somewhere," Hanna Clinto said of her recently captured second place (women's) in the Sun Fish World competition in Aruba.

She came in 9th out of 114 entrants, but she was competing against some of the very best. And there were only two women. "I came in second out of two women," she said, her voice slightly rising.

Doug Stover

In the April 24 edition of the Mariner we featured Doug Stover, who was at that time planning to work for the National Park Service restoring the Adams site in Quincy — moonlighting in spare hours and weekends as a design consultant for Unity College in Maine (Stover's alma mater).

That's all changed. The publicity release from Unity was too late to make last week's deadline.

It has been announced that Stover has been chosen by the National Park Service to work in the President's Park, which includes the rose garden and grounds of the White House and Lafayette Park — just across the street.

Health curriculum

TEACHER SURVEY

Of the 85 teachers surveyed, 52 said they did not feel the health education presently offered students adequately meets the needs for health instruction. Another 10 teachers (six of those being from Osgood School) said they felt health instruction was adequate.

In addition, 52 teachers see drug abuse being a problem with students, and 49 teachers said they have observed alcohol abuse among students. Many teachers, Health Ed. Chairman Nancy Clapp said, pleaded for alcohol education to begin at an early age.

Teachers did not give a very good grade to parents, 23 said when parents are advised of a health problem they become defensive or reluctant to see a problem. Another 15 teachers said parents react positively. Many other teachers did not answer the question or said they preferred this to be done by others.

STUDENTS

According to Patricia Wunschel, a large percentage of students surveyed felt they could handle a variety of health problems, but follow-up personal interviews proved their answers were not backed up with information.

Ms. Wunschel said: "Students showed a good knowledge in first aid, but showed a weakness in the nutrition area." She added that sexual activity is markedly increased by the entrance to 9th Grade.

"V.D. is not known to many by the term. The students who are aware of V.D. have had it. One student said aspirin would take care of pregnancy."

PARENTS

Of the 57 residents surveyed at random, 82 percent said they felt drug abuse is a problem for Cohasset youth; 94 per cent said alcohol abuse is a problem; and 61 per cent feel there are cases of physical, sexual, emotional or general child abuse in Cohasset. Another 28 per cent said they were unaware that this existed.

OTHER COMMUNITIES

Daniel Dormer, a member of the health ed. committee, said 75 per cent of Massachusetts communities presently have comprehensive health programs in effect.

He advised that any program planned for Cohasset should be contingent upon the full cooperation of students, the administration and parents. "Any one group alone can not implement a program."

He also advised workshops for parents with participating student, although participation for students would not be mandatory.

It was pointed out that by 1982 each school system must have a health education program.

Ford looks for Dem. rep bid

Ford of Cohasset

Theodore Ford of Cohasset announced his candidacy for the Democratic nomination for State Representative at a Democratic Town Committee meeting this week.

The seat is the Third Plymouth District, which includes Hingham, Hull and Cohasset.

Ford is a former career diplomat for the U.S. Department of State and served as a specialist in economic and political affairs for six years in Washington and at American embassies overseas. Prior to his Foreign Service experience he was a Peace Corps Volunteer for two years in Africa.

"I am an economist by training and profession — a fiscal conservative — and will emphasize economic issues in my campaign. The future vitality of the region will depend on a wisely drafted new tax structure," said Ford.

Environment, energy and transportation are all tax issues, according to Ford, and future solutions to problems in these areas should be found within the framework of tax planning.

Mr. Ford, 32, who has lived in Cohasset since early childhood, is a graduate of the University of Connecticut.

"President Carter has given a strong priority to American concern regarding the condition of the individual in all countries. Because of American policy, a lot of people have had faith in American and have spoken up about the elementary conditions which governments everywhere should provide their people.

"Carter has helped to create a changed climate in many parts of the world. At least 15 countries have released political prisoners. Eight South American countries have moved away from political dictatorships. He's putting an emphasis on values."

Regarding Iran, Bloomfield said he felt the American hostages formed the centerpiece of a struggle, "but I felt the issue was the capturing of an embassy, not the taking of 50 hostages." Other hostages might well have been if American military force had worked, but Bloomfield gambled they wouldn't have been.

"Embassies operate in a most hostile environment." Ironically, he said the Iranians (or Persians) were the creators of foreign embassies over 500 years ago. "And now here, in their own country, it's breaking down. It's a dangerous thing. That's why there was such an enormous world-wide outbreak when the Iranian embassy was taken.

"It's like taking over a bank in a little town — everyone's money is in it."

The shining

Some of the best fun we had during this school year has been because of Cohasset kids. We were dazzled by the Sixth Grade Science Fair and overwhelmed by the creative responses to our Easter and Valentine contests.

But we had even more fun with the advent of the CHS Lamplight student newspaper page which has appeared on a bi-weekly basis in the Mariner since January.

It didn't take long for Lamplighters to get reporter-type headaches. They learned the power of the published word over the spoken word and were oftentimes stunned at the reactions their articles on just about everything sparked. We suspect they were somewhat pleased about that, too.

One CHS staffer said he learned pretty quickly there were not only just two sides to every story. "Sometimes there are six, seven . . . seventeen!"

This is a goodbye, in particular, to Senior Lamplighters. And a goodby to the Lamplight page for this school year with this issue. An independent publication will be published before the end of the school year.

It is likely Lamplight graduates will seek out various careers, none of which may be journalistic. But we hope that none of them ever stop writing. We hope they will remember that a newspaper is a place where people can find one another and begin to hear one another.

Writing is a million tiny stitches, a friction of a scrub brush, a scouring cloth, the renewal of a scorched pot . . the waste left behind by men.

In a world where language and naming are power, silence is oppression.

Whatever is unnamed, undepicted in images, omitted from biography, censored, misnamed as something else . . . becomes blurred with anger, contempt and guilt.

Until it is written.

Thanks for sharing your glow with us this year.

Selectmen seem to have no control

By Larry Fone

Vandalism in Cohasset is at the boiling point now and when school is out — what then? There was a good turnout of The Cohasset Village & Harbor Association Board at last week's selectmen's meeting. The time was well spent for there was the usual newspaper coverage to help inform residents of the problem.

However, it appears our selectmen have no real authority to deal with this problem — regarding police assignments or coverage. The Police Department has tried to increase its vigilance and for that effort — thank you.

The Deer Hill School car wash must have been a super smash success — seems like everybody in Cohasset was there! It's good to see the young folks in town providing a service and making money for their special interest and also see them enjoying their efforts.

Success story: Jim Gallagher & Elmer are a team!!!

By Chet Ellis

Are pigeons messing up your life? Or your roof? We've found one person who appears to have found a solution for eliminating the growing pigeon menace.

Jim Gallagher, local Michelangelo and recently elected commissioner of recreation, has been commissioned to paint the inside structure of the belfry of the First Parish Church. It's not quite the Cistine Chapel, but it's a start.

After mending his dropcloths, cleaning his brushes, and buying his paint, Jim arrived on site last week with his trusty 1959 AM radio anxious to begin the project.

Unfortunately, he found that the first day would have to be spent removing the several layers of pigeon droppings which had collected since the last painting in 1905. Apparently, the pigeons had been using the bell tower as an aerobic waste treatment plant for some time.

After scraping and sanding for a full day, the ancient beams were finally ready for the first coat of new white paint. However, upon Jim's arrival in the belfry the next morning, he observed much to his chagrin, that the pigeons had returned during the night and the previous day's work had been for naught. The great pigeon war of 1980 had begun.

Not wanting to camp out in the belfry for the duration of the painting job, Jim devised a series of flashy, noisy, "Scarepigeon" devices, designed to drive even the most courageous pigeons back to whence they came.

None did the job. Each morning he was faced with a fresh layer of droppings and was unable to paint. A new approach was going to be required.

Recalling an experience he had as a youngster, where a stuffed owl was used to keep birds out of a barn, thereby keeping the tractors clean, he bought (from Colemans, incidently) a paper-mache owl decoy and promptly named it Elmer.

Elmer was placed just inside the belfry and wired so he would sway with the wind, as it blew gently through the columns in the 250 year old tower.

It worked. The next morning not a drop was to be seen. Elmer's beady stare and the implied danger to a pigeon that lurked behind his casual demeanor had done the job. The painting project could begin.

Elmer has been in the tower over a week now and not one pigeon has reappeared. He will probably be left in placé if just to keep the belfry neat and clean after the painters leave. Who knows, he could even become a town character, along with all the others we have around Cohasset.

So this summer, in the evening, when you are lying on the grass, with the last notes of the band concert drifting through your head, or, if just walking home from the store late at night, pause by the First Parish Church tower and listen. See if you can hear the soft hoooo. . .t of the little paper-mache owl named Elmer.

Japanese students looking for Cohasset families

During three weeks in August, Cohasset will be delightfully treated to a visit from approximately 25-30 Japanese students who wish to observe a North American family in its natural habitat.

But that's only if Cohasset Interstudy coordinator Margo Cheel is able to find 30 host families between Cohasset and Hingham. Her number is 383-6845.

The Japanese students, who are between 18 and 23 years old, have had 3-5 years of English study in preparation for this trip, and will be visiting both North American and Canadian families. While students are not fluent in our language, they are able to read, write and speak English with some proficiency.

Ms. Cheel said she is looking for a part-time teacher for this group who will be required to spend approximately nine hours a week in a classroom set-up centralized in Cohasset. Tours will be planned by Interstudy throughout the week. But the bulk of the students' learning experiences will come through contact with the host family.

Interstudy has been active in the San Francisco area for 13 years. Relatively new to the East Coast, it's been in the Boston area for four years.

Ms. Cheel said each student application is comprehensively screened to ensure that only the highest caliber of student participates in the program. Host families are under no financial obligation, except for room and board, during the student's stay. Interstudy is responsible for school arrangements, materials and teacher services, sightseeing tours, orientation, welcome and farewell parties.

Students are responsible for payment of the full program cost to the recruiting agency and optional tours. All students are completely insured with regard to health, personal liability and personal belongings. Interstudy also takes out an accident coverage policy for minor accidents.

Each family who hosts a student automatically becomes a member of the Interstudy Association and is eligible for the many benefits the organization sponsors such as travel scholarships and host family trips.

Vandalism discussed by County officials

On April 24, approximately 75 representatives from area police departments, school systems, community service programs, and the Norfolk District Attorney's office gathered at the Norfolk County Agricultural School to participate in a one day conference on delinquency prevention.

The conference was sponsored by the Norfolk County Commissioners.

A number of delinquency prevention activities were presented as good examples if communities could provide more appropriate mechanisms to slow delinquent behavior. Norfolk County Sheriff Clifford Marshall discussed the good work of the South Shore Board of Realtors in assisting to prevent vandalism.

The Town of Weymouth was cited as having an active youth program which helped deter local youth from delinquency. The Towns of Ashland, Milton, Foxborough, Brookline, and Marlborough were discussed as possible models of delinquency prevention coalitions that are either off the ground or evolving.

During the next few months other aspects of the Norfolk delinquency prevention effort should begin to surface. The Norfolk County Commissioners will shortly hire a delinquency prevention specialist who will be responsible for acting as a resource and information broker concerned with area programs as well as a technical assistant for local communities.

Direct technical assistance to local communities, at no cost, will also be provided as part of the effort by the Massachusetts Halfway House Association.

Additional conferences are scheduled for late May and in the Fall, and a delinquency prevention newsletter will soon be circulated throughout the Norfolk County area.

☐Jeanne Armin of Cohasset is staging a production of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Iolanthe" to be performed by the Arlington Street Opera Group on May 30 and 31. Curtain times are Friday and Saturday evenings at 8 p.m. with a Saturday matinee at 2 p.m. featuring children's ticket prices of $1.50. Tickets at all other times are $4.00.

For tickets, call 536-7050 or purchase them at performance time at the Parish Hall door of the Arlington Street Church, Boston.

☐"Have you seen Sandy Beach? It looks so nice!" That was Heather Correa's assessment after she and some friends spent a full Sunday picking up the sand and cleaning out the parking area of the beach. Actually, the clean-up was Jackie Silvia's idea, which his brothers, Kenny and Dana, and friends Lisa Marchesi, Joe Burk and Heather seized upon and carried out a week ago.

Armed with rakes, brooms, shovels and a pick-up truck, the group cleansed the area of its resident litter and, especially, of broken glass. Heather says, "You can even walk barefoot in the parking area!"

An admirable project and a large public THANK YOU to these young people, but how long will it last? Have YOU seen Sandy Beach lately?

☐Mr. John Shaw of Forest Avenue was appointed recently as sales manager of the Boston office of the Coldwell Banker Commercial Brokerage Company, a full service commercial real estate brokerage firm. Shaw and his wife, Pamela, moved to Cohasset last fall from San Francisco.

☐There are several new residents of Cohasset whose arrival we missed. Introductions are in order for:

☐Daniel Greenslade Leary, son and first child of Kathryn and Thomas Leary of Black Rock Road. Daniel has gained almost 5 pounds since his arrival at Boston Lying-In Hospital on March 21, at 8 lbs. 10 ozs.

His grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Philip Dey, New Brunswick, New Jersey and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leary of Springfield. His great grandmother is Mrs. Walter Hussey, also of Springfield.

Daniel's parents arrived in Cohasset the first of the year from Boston; his dad is a home office representative with the John Hancock Insurance Company.

☐William "Leigh" Atherton, son of Laurie and Terry Atherton of Clay Spring Road, is another robust 13 lb. baby born on January 30 at Quincy Hospital. He joins a sister, Sarah, four-and-a-half,; his grandparents are Mrs. Leigh Johnson of Franklin, Virginia and Mrs. Jack Atherton of Shreveport, Louisiana; great grandparents are Mrs. Evelyn Atherton also of Shreveport and Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Elderkin of Pawtucket, R.I.

☐On May 5 at Boston Lying-In Hospital, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Perlman of Hillside Street became the parents of a daughter, Abbe, who was born at 6 lbs. 13 ozs. She has an older brother, Todd, who is almost five, grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. George Rosenburg and Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Perlman both of Newton, and a great grandmother, Mrs. Dora Berks also of Newton.

☐Lt. j.g. Theodore Macklin is now fully qualified as a Navy Seal and is stationed in Little Creek, Virginia. The Seals, who during wartime were known as frogmen, are trained in undersea rescue and demolitions, after completing an elite 26 week program involving parachuting, hang-gliding and scuba diving.

Macklin, a 1976 graduate of Holy Cross College, has always been interested in the ocean. He did a lot of sailing while growing up in Cohasset and loves his work with the seals. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Macklin of Atlantic Avenue.

☐Airman Thomas Parziale recently completed Air Force basic training at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Texas and has been assigned to Sheppard Air Force Base in Texas.

☐Has the "tuck-in" craze, the newest fad short-sheeting colleges, come to Cohasset? There was one reported incident last weekend, but since it seems to have gone beyond the new characteristic bedtime story, tuck-in, and goodnight kiss on the cheek, you won't read about it here! (We parents are accustomed to performing a "tuck-in" every night of the week).

John Maloney attended his last school committee meeting Monday as Superintendent of Schools in Cohasset. He begins a new position with the Sharon School Department in June.

School committeewoman Martha Gjesteby baked a lovely Norweigian cake with fruits and nuts for Maloney and received a kiss from Maloney for her effort.

students didn't do as well this year at getting accepted by the 'college of their choice.' But Leary said he disagreed.

"There were over 8,000 applicants at Dartmouth, which accepted only 1,060 students. Dartmouth did not expect to have that yield. In addition, 4,000 of the 8,000 Dartmouth applicants had math SAT scores above 700."

Leary said the top five per cent of the CHS graduating class get very few rejections, if any. After that it's difficult to get into the top colleges even with 480 verbals and 600 math."

Regarding "legacies," Leary said if a parent attended and graduated from the school in question, "That student will be given an edge over the other students, but the student must first be qualified."

Jacqueline Dormitzer and a few other parents felt students should be doing better on the SATs, but Leary and School Supt. John Maloney said Cohasset SATs did not differ from the national trend.

"CHS SATs continue to be higher than state, area and national averages," Leary said.

Maloney added: "When our best students are in competition with the best students from everywhere else — our students become average. New England is frequently considered to be the Hub of education in the universe. There are more schools in New England than there are schools in some continents of the world."

Leary added that students and parents are advised to shoot for two "moon-shot" schools, and several additional universities and colleges at which the student would more likely be accepted.

Dental Dialogue
FIRST IMPRESSIONS ARE BEST
Q. When should I bring my children for their first dental check-up?
A. Usually by the age of two or two and a half years, because at that time all the baby or deciduous teeth have erupted. It is a good idea to bring your child in early before problems develop, to become familiar with the office, get acquainted with the dentist, and learn to associate the dental visit as a pleasant experience. Studies show that the first visits to the dentist form the basis for the child's attitude the rest of his life, so make your dentist's first impression a good one.

Here's looking at you... ...with lilacs

By Lois Martin

You can't beat a lilac. I say that fully aware of forsythia, pansies, geraniums, whatever. The lilac fulfills the promise we nearly forgot, that spring is here. And had I been a spring bride, I'd have chosen an armful of purple lilacs to accompany me to the altar.

The old-fashioned lilac bush is clearly a prize possession. If I had one, I'd be smug. Any person who has lilacs blooming near her house is somehow privileged. It isn't just the fragrance, it's the whole flower, the leaves, the stem.

PATCHES

Walt Whitman, a poet who wasn't as cheerful about lilacs as I am, nonetheless wrote, "When Lilacs Last in the Dooryard Bloom'd." And so far as I'm concerned, Walt's memorable because of his having mentioned the lilacs, as opposed to his impact as a poet.

Today I would use this lilac as part of a message, a greeting card if you don't mind, which I'm sending to those who need it. I'll tell you why.

Several weeks ago someone whose opinion I respect suggested I should write to the many people who could use a get-well, feel better, everything will be all right message. She said there are a number of folks who are facing hard times this spring. Some have physical struggles; others are trying to overcome emotional difficulties.

For you, here is a spring bouquet. I'm thinking of you, though I don't know all of you. I am too aware that the dark uncertainty of nights extends into the day for some of you. That there are those who hurt, silently, fearfully, alone. It's clear we all bustle into each day's routine, seemingly oblivious to the hardship of a daily routine which holds repeated loneliness, unhappiness, illness.

Do not assume because we may not know of you and your particular need that we would not care. We do, because we have needed caring before ourselves and know we are vulnerable to hard times again. Perhaps the worst thing to befall people who are already burdened is their own denial or ignorance of their value to the rest of us. The biggest batch of humanity has refused to believe its importance.

This Spring of 1980 thousands of Cubans are hurling themselves on our shores, finding hope here they didn't have at home . . . "Liberty," the refugees keep calling what we have here.

But liberty could also be translated to "hope." And that's what must be passed along, hand to hand, from the well to the sick, to be swapped again as illness switches victims. Hope is nearly impossible to see in the darkest of hours, from the deep pits of despair and/or pain. It is up to us to bring it to light for those who are temporarily blinded to it.

One need not be a confidante, even a friend, to transmit caring. It is there. You've seen it before. Illness often displaces memory of kindness.

So here is a bouquet of lilacs. They are the symbol, for Whitman and for me, of the "ever returning spring." Hope does "spring" eternal. And if it hasn't sprung for you through the season's rebirth, may you find it is the face of a child, the hand clasp of a friend or here in the lilac. This message is intended to be a reminder that our community will not be the same till you are well. And that, as surely as we need the lilacs, we need you.

Women's volunteers trained

The South Shore Women's Center recently completed its first Volunteer Training program. Attendance in the nine session program has enabled the volunteers to acquire the skills and training necessary to assist the staff in the provision of crisis intervention counseling and court advocacy to those in our community who are the victims of domestic violence.

High School round-up

Golf team romps, baseballers slump

By Bob Tis

The Skipper golf team dominated play Monday, ascertaining yet another victory to throw in the coffers. This time, they preyed on Abington, 12-0.

The Skippers are 3-1, but should be 4-0, as the first 12-0 aceing over the Green Wave was protested and Joe McCollough proclaimed ineligible.

The Skippers have three wins, and six linksters in the drivers' seat. Those six are Scott Hurlbut, Tom MacMahon, Jay and Jack McNeil, Torey Chatterton (the only seventh grader ever to make varsity) and Steve Taylor. Alternates are Chuck Stockbridge and T.J. O'Brien.

TRACK

The band was willing for the track team, but the music was sour. The boys lost to Duxbury to the off-key tune of 120-25, and the girls, who did a little better, still couldn't get the instrument tuned up, losing 83-35.

One Skipper who won his event was Bill Taylor, leaping six feet in the high jump. Phil Tye captured seconds in the 220 and 880, and Greg Raffa also caught two seconds.

And the band quieted down for the girls' meet, and the scenario changed to the Dot Ptomey show. Dot, who has been known to make a social call or two in Cohasset, was all business as she snatched victories in the 220, long jump and high jump.

Though it was a cloudy afternoon for the Skippers, some shiny patches shone through.

Tina Birman raced to a stunning win in the 100, as Mary Jo Mahoney won the 880 and India Turner took the low hurdles.

TENNIS

The boys team won a tough one, annihilating a tough Hanover squad, 4-1, on the road to the state tournament.

The doubles teams continued their winning ways, as Kevin Crough/Andy Poettinger and Joe Whelan/Pete Drago won in straight sets. Ron White and Bob Tis also won in straight sets.

Monday, the Skippers swept a rather hapless Norwell club in an awesome display of power, pushing the record to 6-3. Ron White, Bob Tis and Shannon Collins all won in straight sets, as did the doubles teams of Crough/Poettinger and Whelan/Drago.

But while the boys were beating Hanover, the girls sacrificed one, 3-2, in a nail-biter. The doubles teams of Sue Dalrymple/Karen Murphy and Joy Pratt/Mia Graham both won in straight sets.

BASEBALL

After their first win of the season against five losses, things were back to normal with the Cohasset baseball team, as they lost 4-1 to Hanover and 5-2 to Norwell.

The Skippers took an early lead in the Hanover game, as Paul Plante's double drove home a run. But in the fourth, and in the sixth, Hanover scored two each.

The only win, a 3-1 decision over the East Bridgewaters, was hinged on a three-run fifth inning and hitting by Paul Buckley and Jim Sullivan.

On Monday, however, the Skippers came up on the short end of the stick again.

Norwell exploded in the early innings, running up a lead that was insurmountable for the Skippers. Jack Hernan came on, though, with the score at 5-0 and pitched scoreless ball for the remainder of the game. Phil Drago went 3 for 4 and Bob Russell contributed an RBI single.

SOFTBALL

Cohasset was dealt its second loss of the season, dropping one to Duxbury Wednesday, 27-6.

Duxbury's two-part attack, come out swinging and come out pitching, worked, as the Dragons belted out 21 hits and had a pitcher named Pam Childs with an arm like a long roundabout windup bazooka. Childs also smacked two homers and a triple (make that two arms like bazookas).

The bearded wonder and Shelley Townshend were the only shining stars for the Skippers. Townshend hit a triple and Norris legged out a left field homer.

NEVER COULD REMEMBER THE NAME OF THAT FIELD — until Cohasset Woodcarvers (that's Church Dorr in the center) made this sign especially for Little Leaguers. L-R: Steve Fries, Jeff Treanor, Glen Bernstein — and then from "Barnes" on its Rick Ainslie, Doug Dalrmple and Scott Sullivan. (Finocchiaro photo)

The Quiz is back!!!

Letters have been pouring in at the Mariner office all week about the fact that we had no quiz last week. All we can do is apologize. The quiz was inadvertently thrown in the wastebasket last week by the famous trivia master David Cutler, when he couldn't answer the questions. Sorry.

Last week, Mark Hannon won again, with a close second by Tom Wigless, Flio Foli and Clark Chatterton. But, like Clark's horses. no roses.

This week's quiz:

1. ALMOST ABDUL AGAIN, NATURALLY: Give the original names of these sports figures: Muhammad Ali,, Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, Zaid Abdul-Aziz, Abdul Jeelani, Ahmad Rashad, Jamaal Wilkes, Charles Atlas.
2. Who gave Dr. J. his nickname, and where?
3. On the 1948 Boston Braves, there were two pitchers who had an interesting little poem written about them. Who were they, and what was the poem?

Durkin - first hole in one

John Durkin of 10 Ledgewood Drive, Cohasset, registered a "hole in one" on the 161 yard, 12th hole at Wollaston Country Club in Milton, Mass.

This was John's first "hole in one" during his 35 year golf career and took place during the Nazareth Food Association Annual Golf Outing on May 5, 1980.

John used an eight iron to place the ball three feet from the pin where it rolled into the hole with the previous foursome standing off the green.

On the scene to witness the spectacular shot were: Bud McDonald, (Hendries Frozen Foods) of Fairoaks Lane, Cohasset.

Abbott the arborist on Willows and Elms

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Earlier this year Peter Abbott and 2,000 expert gardeners nationwide entered the first ever Crockett's Victory Garden contest sponsored by PPB.

Abbott's all-organic garden in Scituate won first place, and no one was more surprised than he, who entered the contest at the insistence of his mother, and reluctantly.

A former employee of Reed's Country Way Nursery in Scituate, Abbott has always had a side-line as an arborist, landscaper and logger. And it is that interest and knowledge of the woodlands which he hopes to turn into a speciality throughout an area full of old homes overgrown with the plantings of the decades.

Originally from Lincoln, Massachusetts and Minot, as a youngster Abbott summered in Scituate at the famous Glades. He is related by marriage to the clan of President John Quincy Adams. Presently he operates a farm in Cohasset — just off South Main Street before the Scituate line.

Abbott, 27, has been interested in woodland improvement for as long as he can remember. At his own farm, he was recently forced to cut down an aged willow tree which was interfering with his leeching system.

"Sometime in the 40's, someone decided Willow trees would be the perfect tree to plant around leeching systems. The roots were supposed to suck all the water out of the leeching system. Unfortunately, the Willow root structure completely destroyed the leeching system by rooting into it."

Willows smell like a dead skunk when burned. "But it's not as bad if the wood is seasoned for at least one and a half years."

"Nature is beautiful, within reason," he said. His speciality to customers is in offering advice on what trees and bushes to weed out and what to buy. For instance, the popular Ewe is not difficult to prune, but if pruned improperly it can become an eyesore.

Abbot is impressed with the management of Wompatuck State Park which is supervised by Augstin Mason of the Plymouth County Extension service. Mason's secret, Abbott said, is in marking trees twice. After the first cuttings, he goes back into the forest for a second look.

If you wish to have trees removed, Abbott advises that you consult with an expert first. He has arrived at many a job to find needed support trees removed which were elemental in his plans. When elemental support trees are missing, Abbott has to take a tree down section by section.

The Elm tree situation in New England has always interested him. He has noticed that Elms in isolation can survive in New England. But Elms which grow in pairs usually end up with Dutch Elm disease. In an isolated area an Elm can be treated, fairly successfully, by removing dead growth.

"But in the commons in Maine everything is gone."

He has been noticing with interest an Elm off Atlantic Avenue which is being treated for Dutch Elm disease by the injection of poison. "It's been being treated for at least two years, now."

It's happening!!

Not all Italian cooking is based on tomato sauces, soggy pasta, "red ink" for wine, or rum cakes for dessert. There are many regional specialties. Even French cooking owes much to Italy. Until the 16th century, highly spiced meats, generally rather "high," root vegetables, lumps of crystallized honey and wine, either as strong as brandy, or as weak as water, were basic French fare. When Catherine de Medici went to France to marry Henry II, she brought Italian cooks with her and introduced a new way of cooking. Our eating habits are pleasantly broadened with the use of Italian recipes as proved by the fact that frozen pizzas account for some 11 percent of all supermarket-purchased frozen foods. According to one Italian recipe book, there are more than 15 different pastas on supermarket shelves; perhaps a spaghettini would be best served this way:

SPAGHETTI BOSCAIOLA

1 lb. spaghetti
4 oz. canned Italian-style tuna in oil, crumbled
1/2 pd. mushrooms, chopped
1/2 c. oil
1 clove garlic, crushed
1 tsp. salt
1/4 tsp. pepper

Saute the garlic in the oil in a heavy saucepan for a few minutes until it begins to color; add mushrooms, salt and pepper. Cook, covered, over medium heat for 10 min. Add the crumbled tuna and cook only until the sauce is blended and very hot. Put cooked spaghetti on serving platter and pour sauce over it. Serves six.

It's amazing to read of the variety of meats and fish used in Italian cooking. Neapolitans are connoisseurs of octopus and often eat it simple boiled and seasoned with oil, lemon and pepper. They're also big on eels, squid, cuttlefish, porgy, pike, mullet and shark fillets, said to be somewhat similar to swordfish in flavor. Turbot isconsideredthe most distinctively delicate flavored of any salt-water fish and they do an awful lot with frogs; not just legs cooked in brandy, as in one recipe. "Does nothing go to waste?" I wondered as I read of "Calf's Head Gourmet," soaked and parboiled for two hours. That wasn't bad enough, but calves' brains are served au gratin and sweetbreads, the thymus gland of the animal, are the basis of many a recipe. Sure enough, along came a recipe for "Tripes a la Mode," which called for two calves' feet, cracked and split. Well, I think Linda Lincoln's recipe is far more appealing and I can understand why her friends and family all ask for more. Right now, when artichokes are in season, is a good time to try her recipe which her Sicilian grandfather taught his wife to make a long time ago.

STUFFED ARTICHOKES

5 artichokes
3 c. Italian Pastene bread crumbs
Block of fresh Romano cheese, grate 1/2 c.
1/4 c. freshly parsley, chopped finely
Tsp. salt
1/2 tsp. pepper
16 oz. bottle olive oil

Cut off prickly tops of artichokes. Turn upside down and feather them to open up. Take mixture and try to get crumb mixture on each leaf, filling to top. Place stuffed artichokes in deep saucepan, being sure each is touching, so they don't tip over. Then dribble oil around so each leaf is saturated. Fill sauce pan with water 1/2 way up artichokes. Cover and cook slowly until center leaf is tender for approximately 1½ to 2 hrs.

Desserts play a smaller part in Italian homes than in American and usually meals end with fruit or cheese. Fruit ices existed in the Roman Empire and it is recorded that Nero had special runners bring snow from the Alps to provide him with ice in the summer. Italian ice cream is among the best in the world. This recipe is from the Italian book, but is called

COUPE HAWAIIAN

6 large scoops vanilla ice cream
1/2 c. candied pineapple, diced
1 c. heavy cream, place in freezer until mushy
3 T superfine sugar
1/2 c. coarsely chopped Praline candy
1/2 c. heavy cream, whipped

Place ice cream in a bowl and work in pineapple bits. Whip almost-frozen cream until stiff and sweeten with the sugar. Mix whipped cream with ice cream until perfectly blended. Place in ice tray, cover with foil and freeze. To serve, place ice cream in sherbert glasses and sprinkle with Praline. Top with whipped cream.

— Angler's Corner —

By Lindy Blaisdell

Arm weary from casting and swatting mosquitos, we were about ready to quit fishing for the evening. The inevitable 'one more cast' led to another — then another. Darkness began to surround us as bats zig-zaged overhead, helping with the mosquito problem.

About 10 minutes later, on my 25th last cast, I had a hit.

The fish bolted first left then right, then without warning went downstream, melting line from reel.

I followed as best I could. Dodging shopping carts, tires, old milk cases, etc. is no easy task in the dark. My fish decided to rest in the dogleg pool upstream from the old railroad bridge. This gave me a chance to get un-stuck from the mud, climb the bank, circle and get downstream. Applying renewed pressure sent my fish back upstream in its original direction. Twenty minutes eased into a half hour. The battle raged on.

Twice the fish tried to swim down over the rocks near the railroad bridge. The third time it was successful. My heart sank to the bottom of my waders as the line parted and my shad went free.

Shad are known as a poor man's salmon. Their fighting ability is second to none. Although they won't leap as do salmon, they will roll on the surface. fight deep and make long, powerful runs.

American shad average between two and eight pounds, with a maximum of 12 pounds. An anadromous fish (fish that live in salt water and spawn in fresh water), they migrate up coastal streams each spring to spawn. Unlike their cousin, the alewife, shad spawn in swift water.

Newly hatched shad spend their first summer in fresh water, than will live from two to five years in the ocean before returning. Tagging studies show northern shad will spawn two or three times, not always returning to their parent stream.

Primarily plankton eaters, shad do not actively feed once entering fresh water. You can catch them on a small red and white or yellow and white shad dart. Use a spinning rod and bounce that dart along the bottom. Small bright flys work well for the fly rodders.

Try South River shad fishing seaward of the Willow Street Bridge in Marshfield and from the Elm Street Bridge in Hanover seaward down the Indianhead River until it meets the North River. Pools in the North River headwaters are good for daytime fishing, however most fishermen go after supper or at night. At night the fish are less spooky and the rivers less crowded.

ALONG THE COAST

"Fill that cooler" was the victory cry heard of Beetles Rock on Saturday.

Geoff Loomis of Marshfield, along with Dick DiBona, Dave Chuilli, Woody and I went non-stop on the catching part of fishing for six hours.

We located about a half mile off Rexhame Beach, just inside the lobster pots. We anchored in the warm northwest wind and sent five jigs to the bottom. No luck! Geoff switched to worms and pulled in our first flounder, a beauty. After a mad rush ot the tackle box we were al' atching fish. Cod up to eight pounds, flounder up t wo pounds along with small pollock, sculpins and sks were coming over the side of Backlash, (my 20' Grady White).

At noon we had to make a bait run up to Mary's on the North River. We tried out off Third Cliff, caught a few flounder then moved back to Beetles and continued to fish until the cooler was full.

STRIPERS

Strippers are now on the South side of Cape Cod. They should be along our coast by the end of the month.

School committee briefs

TEACHER GRIEVANCE

The school committee has delayed its response to a grievance filed by the Cohasset Teachers' Association (re: the recent firing of Music Director Anthony Hyde) to its first meeting in June. Teacher Doris LaHage requested that meeting be held in executive session.

WITH REGRET

Special needs aide Anne Deignan announced her resignation at the end of the school year. The committee accepted it with regret.

SCHOOL LUNCH INCREASE

Beginning with the new school year, student lunches will increase from 40 to 50 cents and to $1 (including tax) for adults.

LAST DAY

June 20 will be the last day, and it will be a half day, for students. And Thursday, June 19 will be move-up day.

First of a series

Home rule - in reach

By Tanna Kasperowicz

This is the first of a three-part series of ideas collected from town officials, the commonfolk and others on how a town such as Cohasset might create a participatory democracy, manage its own affairs, sustain a wonderful standard of living and exist in peace with the police and fire departments, teachers, women, welfare recipients and the world.

Town government is in a constant struggle with the ambiguities and contradictions of the twilight time between where it is and where it wishes to be at some indeterminate time.

A truism which this writer quickly ran into during research was that it is not always possible to accomplish anything at the lowest possible level of government. We need not only convince ourselves that any certain change is for the better, we must oftentimes convince state and local governments as well.

At present many residents are saying let us govern ourselves fully, but "localism" is not thriving as a way of living. It is a mere window dressing — something we can all look in at but can't buy. We don't have the right tokens.

Up until recently, at least, it has been thought that people are fit to rule, but they are not fit to manage. People have let themselves be talked into needing managers. But people do and can manage themselves and perform the actions needed for their own well-being, their neighborhoods and their culture.

Although people do these things where it is necessary, they oftentimes are and have been talked out of doing them by those who reap a profit: government.

EVIDENCE OF WANTING TO CHANGE

A few weeks ago Alfred Odermatt presented to selectmen a proposal for a change in town meeting to representative town meeting. He cited quorum problems, reconsideration of articles, special-interest groups packing the hall for particular articles.

Sometime last year School Committeewoman Diana Kornet suggested job-sharing in the schools, a measure which might be tricky at the elementary level but which could be quite conceivable at CHS.

The public safety department sparked by the advisory committee at town meeting this year as a resolution at town meeting, got a nebulous show of support . . . but it's an idea — its time might come

Raftery named acting school supt.

It might seem unusual for a school committee to name its business manager acting school superintendent until the search for a new superintendent is completed.

But than John Raftery is an unusual man.

A Hull resident, Raftery was elected president of the 2,500-member Massachusetts Association of School Committees (MASC) last fall. He was the second individual from Hull to have been so honored in a two-year period.

Raftery has been employed as business manager in the Cohasset Public School system for five years and has been active in all aspects of education at both local (14 years on the Hull School Committee), state and national levels (federal task force on collective bargaining.)

While president-elect of the MASC, Raftery served on a state committee studying proposition two and a half. He was also a member of the "oversight" committee, a group which utilizes computerized information relative to collective bargaining, budget preparation and the Chapter 766 program. He has a vast business background in data

Runners are winners at Osgood marathon

By Eddie Finocchiaro

Everyone's a winner.

Where? In the Joseph Osgood School's sixth annual marathon. All any inspired little towhead had to do to win this race was finish.

The race, an interval-run around a jogging course laid out in the school's playground, was enough to send any mini-human jogger reeling.

Interval-running is a walk-run-jog type exercise, set up at the school by Helen Pratt, Osgood Marathon director and the Will Cloney of Cohasset. The kids? Well, they've taken to it like mosquitoes to unsleeved arms.

"Every child needs the interval-run," said Pratt. "The beauty of this race is that every child who finishes is a winner."

But the race was not without its pomp and circumstance, enough to make the changing of the Buckingham Palace guard look like a mud fight. The runners paraded out of the school, flags waving in the air, to the sound of a tape recording of the John Phillip Souza band.

After parading through the playground, the little people tooktheir places on the ground, much to the delight of the 300 or so spectators, for a recital of the pledge of allegiance and a heartstring-tugging rendition of 'It's a grand old flag.'

The festivities, expertly planned by Faith Bowker, ended with Mrs. Pratt laying down the ground rules, and wishing the little runners luck.

From then on, it was a sea of teeny weeny Nikes, Tigers and Pumas, along with some Donald Ducks, Mickey Mouses, and big people's sneakers. Of course, the big people's sneakers belonged to big people — the people who volunteered to run with the kids.

Carol Martin, one of the runners, has been running "for all of six months. I've been running with my daughters, and they know more about running than I do." Martin and the rest of the volunteers offered encouraging words and help for kids who stumbled on the gravelly track.

The kids, though, have been training vigorously for the event. Evan Spencer is one example.

"One day," he trained, answering a reporter's questions with head shakes, nods and shrugs.

"He's a man of few words," said Mom and fellow runner Karen, who followed with a sigh after Evan quipped, "Can we do it again, Mom?"

First grader Patrick Milligan thought the best thing about the race was "winning. I trained about a week, two miles a day," said Patrick. "The course was fair." Keri Drayton was a bit more enthusiastic.

"I've run it 500 times," beamed Keri.

John Reed echoed the feelings:

"The course was good, and I was happy," said Reed. "I learned about running through the course, but at home we don't have a course. Every day, I go out and jog. I won, didn't I?"

FOR THEM IT WAS THE BOSTON MARATHON - and they played for big stakes, and were treated with orange ices for their efforts. (Greg Derr photo)

Cohasset's Week

Non-profit bar

Attorney Joseph R. Welchof Randolph, President of the Bar Association of Norfolk County, today announced the formation of a non-profit corporation, the Norfolk County Bar Advocates, Inc., which has recently contracted with the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to represent indigent defendants in all the district courts of Norfolk County.

The offices the Norfolk County Bar Advocates, Inc., are at 10 Pearl Street in Dedham and are staffed by a full-time director of the program and a secretary.

Pool news

Hmmmmmmmmm. . . . we can smell them all now, all those Cohasset residents covered with coconut-oil baking away at beach and pool-side giving off the fragrance of bakery goodies.Wonder if coconut oil clogs the pool filter?

The pool officially opens June 14 and everybody swims free June 14 and June 15 — that's just to get everybody hooked. After the weekend everybody pays. Luckily, inflation has not yet struck family membership prices which are still $50 and that's nice to know.

At a recent meeting of the Cohasset Swim Center, Robert Knox was elected president. Vice-presidents are Pat McCarthy, Arthur McCarthy and Joan Buckley. Irene Brown was elected treasurer.

Knox said last year 370 families took out family memberships while another 60 individuals took out single memberships. This year the swim center hopes to increase its membership and its popularity with its newly-renovated functions room.

Most of the same lifeguards are back again this year: Director Pam Becker, a senior at Providence College; Assistant Director William Reynolds, a senior at Westfield State College; E.T. Price, a junior at Bowdoin College and Erin O'Brien, a freshman at Springfield.

Also, Lisa Kjer and a newly appointed lifeguard who will be announced when somebody finds out where somebody else put the official lifeguard's list.

Police brief

Unreliable sources say suspended Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. will be reinstated on the police force June 1, providing he agrees to accept a one year suspended sentence (already served) without pay.

Selectmen's several closed sessions on the matter have been airtight, with even reliable sources up in the air over what final action selectmen will take on the matter. Once again, this week, the decision is expected to be made at any time.

Supt. applicants

School Commiteewoman Martha Gjesteby said Monday 145 applicants are vying for a try at Cohasset School Superintendent and they come from as far away as Panama and California.

The screening committee for the superintendent met with the school committee briefly this week and was pretty much given carte blanche on what kind of a person might be best: "Someone most reflecting yourselves," one member said. And, someone who can develop a budget.

Contrary to rumor, neither Tana Carlson or others on the search committee will have excess to the entire $5,000 budgeted for the search. The $5,000 is the school committee's budget.

Pony appeal

Abutters to the Fairman pony on Jerusalem Road will definitely appeal the decision of Health Board member Dr. Michael Bliss, acting as a committee of one under town counsel's advice, who granted Mary Fariman a variance from the bylaws to keep the horse on her property.

Health Chairman Marilyn Sweeney said it has not yet been determined by counsel whether Dr. Bliss must sit on the appeals hearing (not yet scheduled) by himself, or whether Ms. Sweeney and member Lynn Buckley are permitted to join him.

Town Counsel Blake Thaxter, Jr. opined that both women should excuse themselves from the Fairman pony variance hearing when it was determined they had prejudiced themselves before that hearing took place.

Juror

Ruth Dalrymple of Forest Avenue has been selected for Criminal and Civil Jury duty in June.

Expanding committee

One more resident is needed for the expanding insurance committee which has been single-handedly manned by Arnold Jenks for years. Last week selectmen appointed Elmer Hollingshead to the committee. If interested, contact Peggy Ramsay at the selectmen's office: 383-0028.

Beach vendors

Persons wishing to sell ice cream and other cold treats to Sandy Beach goers this summer should file their applications for doing so at the selectmen's office before May 28.

owls

As a result of, or coincidently to, Chet Ellis' article on Elmer (and Gallagher) last week, the Cohasset Hardware Store is selling owls for getting rid of pigeons. The big, bad, beady-eyed birds are selling for $6.95 and going fast, according to Bill Watson, orthinologist-on-site.

Rottenstone pit

Selectmen will not give or sell any of its rottenstone to the Scituate Little League as its supply (in a pit at the town's disposal area) is running dry. Rottenstone is used to line the diamonds on baseball fields and etc. But there is not enough of it left for Cohasset to become the rottenstone capital of the world, selectmen said.

Golfers

A team of five women from the Cohasset Golf Club recently won the "Seventeenth Cup" sponsored by the Women's Golf Association of Massachusetts.

Team members Mary Hartwell, Janet Malloy, Elizabeth Elligs, Jeanne Topper and Louise Littlehale accumulated 48.5 points in five matches played at courses on the South Shore and Cape Cod. Woods Hole women came in second with a total of 41.5 points.

Looking for grant

At last week's session selectmen voted to approve a grant application which sum would provide engineering services and bid specifications for the town's $360,000 master plan for the harbor and the extension of Government Wharf.

processing (12 years) and he was also a member of the national committee to lobby at the federal level as the representative for the 12th Congressional District.

Raftery will receive a $25 per day increase in his salary beginning June 2, when he assumes his temporary position.

At Monday's meeting, Raftery thanked the school committee for its vote of confidence and promised to do his very best to uphold the excellence of Cohasset High School.

Cohasset High School Principal Richard Streeter was also nominated for the position by school committeewoman Irene Brown.

South Shore Art Center News South

Art sholarships

The South Shore Art Center, in a continuing spirit of cultural progress, takes great pride in offering two fine scholarships to students from South Shore schools who will be graduating this June and who have been accepted into a program of Fine Arts.

Any high school senior who wishes to apply and who is qualified should take a portfolio of original works (no slides) to the Center at 103 Ripley Road, Cohasset, on Saturday, May 24th, between the hours of 12 and 1 p.m.

The scholarships which make available $600 toward tuition are: the MacIvor Reddie Scholarship and the Marian Huse Scholarship. MacIvor Reddie was one of the Founders of the South Shore Art Center and a noted Watercolorist; Marian Huse was a member of the Center and exhibited in the Festival.

Invitational show

The Guild of Boston Artists will cooperate with the South Shore Art Center in finding artists for the Invitational Show which will be one of the main features of the 1980 South Shore Arts Festival.

This year's exhibition will be organized according to subject categories rather than medium categories for both the invitational and juried exhibits. The show is being designed to create expanded opportunities for participating artists. All media will qualify in the following categories: Landscape, Portrait, Abstract, Genre, Still Life, Figure, Marine, 3-D and Photography.

Gallery membership

Those interested in being considered for exhibiting membership in the South Shore Art Center should immediately telephone that office (383-9548) and leave their name and address. They will be informed of the date and other details.

Gallery Membership is extended to those for whom art is an ongoing profession and who have been selected by special committee.

June workshops

The South Shore Art Center will give a series of three intensive workshops to take place during the month of June. The workshops will be in session from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. every day, Monday through Friday, for one week each and will provide the participants, with three credit hours from the Massachusetts College of Art.

The courses will be taught by three outstanding professionals from the area and promise to be extremely valuable experiences. The following is the schedule for this special program.

Sculpture Workship in Wax with Dennis Kowal will begin on June 9th and will extend through June 13th.

From June 16th through June 20th, a Photography Workshop with Peter Anderson will be offered. The sessions will include a broad range of assignments at scenic locations on the South Shore as well as special sessions on studio portraiture, architectural, abstractions, theater and sports actions.

Anderson is a former Time/Life photographer who covered assignments in Asia, Central and South America and Mexico.

The third and last session will take place from June 23rd through June 27th. Painter Betty Kohlberg will instruct this Workshop in Painting. Encouraged to work in various media, the students will meet both outdoors and in the studio.

Ms. Kohlberg, who received an MFA from Tufts University, is an Associate Professor of Painting and Drawing at Massachusetts College of Art. She has exhibited widely in New York and Boston and her work is in private and corporate collections in California, Florida, New York, Boston and Georgia.

For further information and details of these exceptional workshops at the South Shore Art Center call 383-9548.

when residents no longer are willing or able to support all the various separate departmental entities which exist in the town.

A public safety department could be most easily accomplished without civil service for police and fire and the town's writing two and three year contracts with individuals.

The town already has the right to vote itself out of Civil Service.

Teacher tenure might be difficult to get rid of, but with more and more non-tenured teachers losing their jobs to a quickly declining student population, it is foreseeable that a time may come when contracts offered in place of tenure might be thought of more warmly by actual people in concrete situations.In a culture where divorce has become the norm — how can we hold a school committee to marriages for life?

Self-insurance — another possibility. The town has already been approached. The biggest seller to a self-insurance package: other towns are already doing it and saving money and Blue Cross is offering a similar (but more expensive) package.

GETTING IT TOGETHER

During a discussion with a free lance writer who was writing a story about an elderly woman who couldn't find any housing on her $300 plus welfare check, this writer asked if the woman had any children. The woman had five grown children, none of whom apparently was willing or able (or maybe had not been asked) to subsidize their mother.

Could Congress legislate a bill requiring that children subsidize their parents? Parents are afterall required to support their children up to legal age. What human being is more childlike than an elderly person who has lost his or her livelihood with age or ill health but who claims one last fantasy of independence with a social security or welfare check?

When the federal government doesn't have enough funds to give out social security checks to deserving, who will get social security checks?

The importance of the observation of contradictions as a beginning of wisdom probably appears to be a commonplace sort of thing to most people. It should be. It's the way most people test the truth of many ordinary situations.

NEXT WEEK: Cohasset residents comment on all the above and more.

Cesspool, Bob Newhart style

(ED.'S NOTE: The Rev. Dr. Edward Lewis of South Main Street described a situation to selectmen last week common to many of us. However, he did it with humor, great humanity, quiet desperation and with a Bob Newhart quality we couldn't help appreciating. Nor could we quietly permit it to slip into some board's problem file):

Honorable Sirs:

A selectman is somewhat like a minister.

In over 41 years as an ordained clergyman, I had an estimated 100,000 calls.

80,000 were for my services night and day.

19,000 were "suggestions" which you and I know as veiled criticisms.

1,000 were to encourage the spiritual leader in his work.

A neighbor of my second son asked my grandson, "What does your grandfather do?" The five-year-old lad quickly responded, "He's a retarded Congregational minister."

So I shall call on you under the "80,000."

We need your help.

Our family has owned the house at 411 S. Main Street, Cohasset for over 50 years. Uncle Walter and Aunt Ruth Crane had no children; so they could do all right with the cesspool. Since 1974, we have had the house, and Mrs. Lewis and I seldom had any of the children for more than a few days. The late Rocco Rosano cleared our cesspool often, and we had only limited trouble.

Now our daughter's family are with us, and the fluids flow! Too much fluids flow, and we need help.

I am fully aware that you are not responsible for the 240 years since our house was built with reference to a sewer system, and one town officer told me four or five years ago that there will be no sewer on Main Street (South) in the next several years.

So I am not looking for miracles, nor do I expect any; however this must have come to your attention from many on our street; so perhaps you could help or advise me on our specific need. Ours is rather unusual in that we are close to the street, and have limited room for a septic tank and leeching field.

Please send me a note when convenient, I'll be out of town till after the week of 13 through 20 May when I shall be in Winston-Salem for Church Services. However, our daughter, Dee Lewis Zerbst, will be there if you would like to send a representative to examine our situation.

Thanking you for your assistance, I am

Cordially yours,
Rev. Dr. Edward W.W. Lewis
South Main St.

Monday - A day for all memories

Memorial Day began during the Civil War when some women who lived in the South placed flowers on the graves of soldiers. In 1868, after the Civil War, Major General John A. Logan, a Northern soldier, named May 30 as Memorial Day. In more recent years we began celebrating it on the last Monday in May, to honor Americans who died in the Civil War and all wars after it.

It is customary, the day before Memorial Day, for private citizens who lost no one in any war to slip away to the gravesides to place wreaths and flowers on their memories.

And so it has become a day for all memories, not just war memories.

Hunting a vanishing light, and a solace for joy too deep.

Where do you lead me, wild one, on and on forever?

Over the hill, over the hill, and down to the meadows of sleep."

The little boy who cried 'Rat!'

Last week we happened to observe a little boy telling a teacher what another little boy had allegedly done on the way back from the restroom. The teacher said:

"Oh, I wish you wouldn't tell me things that make me sad."

It was a perfectly good comment, but it was not necessarily non-committal. First of all she told the little boy that the information made her sad. She may have also indirectly relayed the message to him that she didn't wish to receive information of wrongdoing in the future.

As we were not standing close enough to hear what was allegedly done on the way back from the restroom, perhaps she offered the remark because the crime was in fact trivial.

Maybe the little boy who relayed the information has a habit of ratting on everyone all the time and she's getting darn sick of it because everybody in the room knows he's a rat and he's making himself unpopular.

We all know what rats grow up to be: newspaper reporters, editors, cops, detectives, the IRS, Ralph Nader. The later group are not often real rats, but they do oftentimes deal with people who want newspapers to think and print nasty things about someone else for personal reasons. Usually the story, if one is written, is not handled the way the rat intended for it to be handled.

What if the little boy had a very strong sense of ethics, had been told never to do what the other little boy did, and felt driven to tell the teacher that a rule had been broken? How then does he react to the information that his telling has made her sad — not wildly angry?

What if next week the little boy who did the nasty thing on the way back from the washroom sets the school on fire? Will the little boy tell the teacher?

We have puzzled over this little drama for a few days and decided that the little boy would tell about the fire, but maybe not who did it. We also decided the teacher was kind enough not to push and wise enough to know just a bit more about the little boy's concerns than even he did at the time.

Instantaneously, she summed up the alleged crime, felt it would not threaten school security or any national treaty, and dismissed it as an unfortunate state of affairs.

Pope Church Fund raising

To the Editor:

The South Shore Hellenic Church Association announced today the launching of a campaign for funds and friends to purchase the famous Pope Memorial Church in Cohasset, Massachusetts. Long an important landmark on Jerusalem Road, "It will be a Greek Orthodox Church welcoming all South Shore residents," said Michael Vallas, Boston's energetic and ubiquitous Aegean Fare owner.

The long range plans call for the acquisition of the building by early summer, then the modification to an Orthodox church, and then the search and selection of a priest, and finally the beginning of services.

The fund drive will be headed by the following persons: Mr. Michael Vallas, Mrs. Demosthenes Syrmopoulos, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Manjos, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Sofis, Mrs. George Papadopoulos and Mrs. Mary Manekos.

The immediate goal is $30,000 and donors of $1,000 or more will be recognized as Founding Fathers.

With over 100 families of Greek Orthodox heritage and many, many others interested in participating," Mr. Vallas concluded, "that the task at hand is difficult but will be done."

He invited all to a meeting at the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road, Thursday night, May 22, at 7:30 p.m. Anyone wishing to donate may send a check to the South Shore Hellenic Church Association, 732 Jerusalem Road, Cohasset, Ma., c/o Mr. Michael Vallas.

'Please, walk on the water'

To the Editor:

The search committee appointed by the Cohasset School Committee to assist them in reviewing applications for the position of superintendent were officially charged with their duties at the school committee meeting held on May 19. After listening to the differing of opinions of the school committee members, the search committee fully realized their awesome responsibility.

To simplify the task of the search committee I would suggest that the Superintendent search committee invite the 145 applicants to meet on June 29, 1980 at Cohasset Harbor in Hugo's Restaurant parking lot at noon. From there the candidates could march, military fashion of course, to the town pier where they can meet with the present School Committee. Immediately, upon request, all prospects would be invited to remove their shoes and step off the pier.

The first person who can walk across the water to Minot's Lighthouse should receive the recommendation of the Search Commitee and the unanimous approval of the School Committee. They will have found the perfect person to be our new Superintendent of Schools.

Teen cooking classes at Hublitz home

It all began, at least Ann Hublitz of Forest Avenue first noticed it, when she found herself reading and enjoying Teen Magazine at the dentist's office.

"I've gotten interested in this age-group recently," she said, offering that having a 13-year-old daughter and two budding almost-teen sons may have helped to spark her interest.

A former Wee Spinnacker partner who decided recently that her children, entering adolescence, needed her around more — Ann decided to open her home, pool and kitchen to teenagers this summer by holding cooking workshops for guys and gals between the ages of 12-15.

Ann's attractive posters, in just about every shop window in the town, promise teens the comfort of central air conditioning, lots of time to swim in the family pool, and a wide variety of exciting-sounding dishes like: patriotic barbecue, strawberry pizza? skewered Italian heroes and make-your-own sundaes.

The former elementary school teacher has already attracted five teenagers to her home for courses which will also touch on imaginative table settings, creative centerpieces, a few table manners, although nothing stressful, kitchen hints, short cuts and good conservation.

Ann said the cost of the course will probably just about cover her expenses, but she expects to have a lot of fun.

She's offering six sessions, one a week for six weeks or three sessions. The course will be in process from July 1 through August 7, once a week from 10-3 p.m.

Who said there's nothing for teenagers to do in Cohasset? There's lots A-Do at the Hublitz residence.

It was Kentucky Derby Day

Trotting through Wheelright Park on their proud mounts, the three women were a sight to behold. Kathy Morgan (star) and supporting actresses Betty Cisneros and Kathy Smith were on their way to the Wheelright ring to prepare for a dressage show.

Their fine riding breeches and caps (costumes) were in perfect order, and their mounts finely groomed for the occasion. But the first scene was the only nice part of that day which unfolded one tragic leaf after another . . . turning Wheelright Park into chaos, screams, crying, fire trucks, policemen,a troop of Boy Scouts and dread.

In retrospect Kathy (Morgan) feels either she was cursed at the Fairman horse variance hearing, or perhaps she caused the events to unfold by her meannessthat morning. Do naughty actions provoke dire consequences?

Jeeps aren't permitted in Wheelright Park and Kathy knew it and was angry when she saw a blue Jeep full of Boy Scouts heading up the road. The Jeep slowed down when it neared the horsewomen and Kathy trotted over to Boy Scout Leader David James and said:

"You know you're not supposed to be in here with that."

He said he knew.

"You're lucky you didn't get a horse plastered over your Jeep."

Kathy later admitted, "I was very snooty . . .but you pay for these things." As Kathy and the two other women rounded the bend ahead of the Jeep, Kathy's horse, Captain, broke into a cantor from his trot, bolted, and went leaping and bucking and jumping and carrying-on in the air. Kathy's rein broke, throwing her helplessly into the air and up against a tree.

"I said, 'I can't breathe.' "

"You just had the wind knocked out of you," Betty said.

"I said, 'No Betty, I broke something." In the meantime, Captain couldn't figure out what had happened to me. He stopped immediately. The problem with Captain is he's a thoroughbred. Now I'm crying, Betty's crying and the Boy Scouts happened along.

"Here I was, a perfect victim of their woods. I must have earned the whole troop merit badges that day. I saw the leader and I apologized — Wouldn't you know it, me and my big mouth, I said.

"He said, 'That's perfectly all right,' and the scouts dispersed in all directions looking for help. The ones who remained covered me, surrounded me with blankets, under and over me.

"The police and fire departments arrived; Roger (Dr.) Pompeo came by, Bill (Kathy's husband) showed up and immediately thought I was dead when he saw a photographer taking a picture of my body.

Sore all through, and with a broken collarbone, Kathy arrived at South Shore Hospital only to find she had to wait two and a half hours to be treated . . .

And that's the end, right? Wrong.

The private ambulance company which brought her home, her wounds slowly mending, dropped her in the driveway of her Bow Street home.

AHHHHHHHHHHHHHH!

May Day— Jaycees style

May Day baskets are an old French custom which have delighted Jean Salvador ever since her childhood. Some years she really gets the wind in her sails and has been known to deliver May Day baskets to all the nursing homes in the town.

This year, as a Jaycees effort (of which she is an honorary member) she and Jaycee Maurine Healy took May Day baskets full of candies to the Ronald McDonald House in Brookline. It's a home for the patients of Children's Hospital who have cancer.

Jean said one little girl had come from Venezula for treatment.

JAYCEES INSTALLATION

Tonight (Thursday, May 22) outgoing president John Perierra will officiate at installation banquet ceremonies being held at the Golden Rooster in Scituate. The newly-elected officers will be President Roy Fitzsimmons, Vice Presidents Peter Trask and Joe Andrade, Secretary Mary Ann O'Leary and Treasurer Gary Drinkwater.

John Perierra will serve as state director for the ensuing year while the board of directors will be Kent Webber, John Kinchla, Tom Cook and Dick Farwell.

Recently Jaycees donated $200 towards the purchase of the Senior Shuttle Bus for Cohasset. An active group, it is looking for members of both sexes who wish to get involved in community work.

SHE HAS PLAYED IN THIS ROOM MANY A TIME - oh yes, she has. Right at the present time it may be hard for you to believe Erin Powell, 10 has run up and down those staircases, used that chopping board to make watercress sandwiches. But she has. (Photo by Derr)

☐Look into a dollhouse through a window or door and what you see is magical! The mirror of ordinary and "dream" home life in miniature creates a real illusion that sweeps you away to the land of small. Dollhouses may be for child's play, but they're adult's fancy too.

The ever popular "house tour" was miniaturized last week by the Cohasset Community Center when 14 very original and diversified dollhouses were made available for viewing.

•One of the most spectacular houses on tour was Carlo Conte's 10 year and still unfinished reproduction of an early eighteenth century home (a combination of several houses Mr. Conte knew in his native Italy). Everything is hand-made — inlaid floors, doors, hinges, a wood tile roof (with 5,000 tiles!), and period furniture. His daughter, Barbara Conte, supplied the intricate painting and rushing on the furniture and the tiny flowers that will ultimately fill stucco urns on the many patios of the house. There is even a meditation room!

•The other houses on the road were: Rebecca Jordan's (6 and-one-half) house presented to her for Christmas last year by her Grandmother. Imagine finding a completely outfitted dollhouse under the tree that took Gram five years to construct, decorate and furnish! The six room house is full of petit-point pillows, eyelit covers and curtains, oriental rugs and bell pulls and furnishings from all over the U.S.

•Grace Tuckerman's dollhouse is an exact reproduction of the house she lived in which is also Rebecca Jordan's present family home Mrs. Tuckerman's father, William Fussell (a former President of the Community Center), built the dollhouse as solidly as the real 200 year old house. The wallpaper, paint, doors and hardware are just the same as when Mrs. Tuckerman owned the Jordan house.

•Michelle Roycroft's (age 7) dollhouse is a shared fancy with her mother, Robbie. Built by Ron Massa three years ago, Robbie has stitched, crocheted and carved treasures that make the cozy house look lived in. A few of her hand-crafted contents are: a bear skin rug, a velvet upholstered sofa, hand-carved furniture and kitchen utencils, salt dough painted fruit and pastry and a wee kleenex box. The windows even go up and down!

At the Community Center there was plenty of traffic on "Main Street" where ten houses wereon display:

•Marge Benson built a six room saltbox for her daughter, Mary Jane, exquisitely detailed with Schumacher wallpaper, Queen Ann furnishings and real lighting fixtures; a kitchen with everything in it and authentic touches like a perfume tray and oil paintings.

•Lee Anne Cicciotte's (11) dollhouse came from Santa two years ago and has engaged the whole family in its decoration. Lee Anne has wallpapered, made curtains and cleverly fashioned lamps out of toothpaste caps. It has a veranda with potted plants and rattan furniture.

•Kirsten Henry's (8) uncle built her dollhouse in 1926 and it belonged to her grandmother before her. The furnishings have been collected for three generations and some of the more unique miniatures include monogramed linens, crystal and silver sets and a gumball machine.

•Traffic on "Main Street" was backed up at the center where Nancy Hoit's dollhouse (strictly an adult affair) was located. Almost everything in her renovated Chinese house was hand-crafted by Nancy including the ceramic dishes, Delft tiled fireplace, miniature scaled and painted wallpaper and the tiny lamps, flowers and staffordshire animals. The most elegant house on tour!

•Jenny Long (12) is a practical young lady who rents the apartment in her dollhouse "attic" to help pay the taxes! Her house contains a piano that plays and many ingenious hand-made items of her own. She did all the interior work — electricity, wallpaper, furniture, curtains, and murals.

•Sarah Lualdi's (13) dollhouse is a center entrance colonial with six rooms and a secret attic. The whole family has helped in its decoration.

•The pride and joy of Erin Powell's (10) dollhouse is the old-fashioned kitchen which is well stocked with food collected by her California cousins. The furniture includes things made by her aunt and grandmother.

•Karin Story's (7-and-one-half) dollhouse, a Cape Cod design, was made by her Dad with kitchen, dining and living room furniture hand-crafted by her grandfather. Mom, Claudia, made the curtains, ruffled cushions and bed covers. Wall-to-wall carpeting makes her house cozy; there are "real" candles that burn for 10 minutes. Her window boxes were the prettiest on "Main Street."

•Also on display were: An exact reproduction of Jean Replogle's former home in New Jersey. A completely landscaped Victorian, it is true to detail with diamond-shaped windows and a second floor balcony; and a reproduction of the Lothrop House made by E. Lawrence Parker.

It becomes very obvious that dollhouse collection is not only a family, but a generational affair.

Sue Killilea and Regina Schultz dreamed up the grand idea of the tour, so they co-chaired the event. They were assisted by Claudia Story, Lee Jenkins, Sue Fiore, Holly Holway, Jane Russell, Monica McKenny, Pat Saef, cookie bakers from the CCC Nursery School and 57 junior and adult helpers who hosted the tour, served tea and cookies, arranged flowers, sold tickets, decorated, and organized a dollhouse boutique.

Jonathan D. Hibbard, a sophomore at Boston University School of Business Management has recently been elected to the following organizations for his Junior Year 1980-81:

President of the Society of Advancement of Management — a National Organization (B.U. Chapter); Treasurer of the American Marketing Assoc. — a National Organization (B.U. Chapter); Secretary of the Student Government of the School of Management — Class of 1982 and a Dean's Host for Orientation of new students.

Also Co-ordinator for the accepted students and parents visitation program; Elected to the LOCK Honorary Service Society and was an usher at B.U. Graduation Class of 1980.

Jonathan is a Dean's list student and the son of Dorothy A. Hibbard, North Truro Street, Hull, Ma.

Mrs. Hubbard is a second grade teacher at the Joseph Osgood School in Cohasset.

Balloon cynicism lot of hot air

By Lois Martin

It should be no surprise that a disparaging voice was raised to deflate the sensation of success shared by thousands with balloonists Maxie and Kris Anderson.

They were, and I'm sure you bear no reminding, the first to cross a continent in a balloon and did just that last week.

For each effort there's someone to say "so what" and that was the role adopted by M.R. Montgomery in a contribution to the Boston Globe last Thursday. In essence, Montgomery's position was that the flight from San Francisco to St. Felicite was not necessary nor comparable to feats by earlier record setters, such as Lindbergh.

PATCHES

I'm not a whit alarmed that Montgomery isn't impressed by the Anderson or their flight. Neither am I unsettled by his obvious, though self-satisfied, ignorance of the challenges in ballooning, never mind the dangers. He (and I am herein the ignorant one, not knowing if M.R. is Mabel Ruth or Marvin Robert) apparently has conceded the flight was a lark which could be accomplished breezily.

Not so. But that's not my worry. Montgomery suggests the flight of the Kitty Hawk was more stunt than achievement. I say to you that the bored cynicism propounded by Montgomery is a greater danger to America than attempts at stunts or achievements will ever be. And the tragic conclusion that all that could be done, has been accomplished by past tense heroes is frightening.

The construction of America was founded on fired up imaginations, nerve and the application of skills to challenges never been measured. The destruction could surely be hastened on complacent acceptance of the status quo, the bored yawnings of passive sophisticates.

Lord save us from that feat.

Clearly Montgomery wasn't privy to the balloon launchings which provided substance to lives of people who share adventure rather than provide it. But in Marshfield, down stream from Boston (and I'm not inviting Montgomery's comments on our fair town because my keen intuition tells me I'd be sorry) we witnessed the launch of a beautiful balloon in 1977. It was for all of us, a rare treat, somewhat 19th century bit of color of Disney-like value.

On the hillside of a sand pit thousands of people watched hours before the launch without complaint. Among the spectators to the daring deed were countless young people from the schools across the way. A group of young men caught my attention.

They weren't heroic types. One could speculate they'd have gladly skipped school for lesser reasons. But on that late summer day, they had their careful adolescent disdain for acceptable events for an afternoon of marveling, wondering and wishing.

And when I heard their earnest supplications to be part of an adventure to achieve I recognized the real contribution heroes make . . . they give the rest of us courage, daring, a sense of can do (not the king kind). Anderson has made us believe in ourselves. We needed that. Confidence may be the first step in creation.

I wouldn't deny, and I don't want to miss, the ballyhoo which was an appendage to the balloon crossing. But there are educational accoutrements even to the publicity, the amazing bits of meterological gleanings, for example, the tracking of the Kitty Hawk and the endless prognostication of one of man's final mysteries, the weather.

Fait accompli, my foot. There are countless deeds we've yet to do. We are free to judge the value of the deeds, as Montgomery has derisively done for the balloon crossing. But neither he nor we are free to judge the value of the effort. Nor are we at liberty to declare all things done.

If Montgomery knew Anderson he would know that in naming the Kitty Hawk and the Double Eagle the illustrious names to commemorate monumental accomplishments, Anderson was using the originators of those names, Lindbergh and Wright as enduring examples rather than as comparisons. The balloonist is an inveterate patriot.

Montgomery swiped at would-be achievers from his well worn easy chair. That, Mabel or Marvin, is no achievement. It's boring.

Trying is tough. It's easier to surrender effort, energy and let others expose themselves to threats of criticism if not physical hardship. The daring of the deed is still the soul of success. Failure is in not trying. And Montgomery, right off the top, needs to know there are no steering wheels in balloons.

High school roundup

It's been an interesting season...

By Bob Tis
and
Eddie Finocchiaro

To say the least, it's been quite an interesting season for the Skipper softball team.

First, be careful you don't call them the girls' softball team. They're not, anymore, as you well know. You can call them potential state champs, though. And you can call them powerful. And interesting.

Coach Watson just smiled Monday afternoon, thinking all these things as her team made the final out in a 14-9 win over Holbrook, a win that clinched a berth in the state tournament, for this, a team faced with adversity all year.

"I think the adversity has helped this club," said Watson. "It's really been tough for the boys, and the team has really rallied around it. I think the adversity has brought the team together."

Home runs in the game were provided by Lance (That's Norris with two R's) Norris, Dave Turner and Jodi Sandblom, after the Skippers had to sit out Friday's game against Abington. The reason: The Green Wave forfeited because of the 'boys.'

One contingent who've worked exceptionallywell through all the trauma has been the umpire crew, a two person team of Terry Rondelli and Andy Lee. They've taken all the complaints, ruling changes and protests in stride and called fair softball, much to their credit.

"I've seen nothing out of the ordinary," said Rondelli. "What I have seen is a lot of power-hitting. The scores of the games will show you, they've all been good ballgames."

"We don't hear the complaints," said Lee. "We just hear what we have to hear."

GOLF

Jay McNeil finished up at nine with a 38, followed by brother Jack with a 40, as the Skipper manhandled the Bulldogs of Holbrook Monday, 9-0.

The Skippers will be out in full force on Wednesday as they face Hanover. Linksters are the following: Scott Hurlbut, Tom McMahon, Jay McNeil, Jack McNeil, Troy Chatterton, Chuck Stockbridge, Steve Taylor and T.J. O'Brien will try to catapult their record to 7-1.

BASEBALL

It was a tough week — two losses, just managing to get on the scoreboard in the Holbrook game (16-1). Friday Skippers lost to a powerful Abington team, 8-4. Monday Skippers lost to Holbrook again, 8-0.

This Friday Skippers face Hull at home to finish out their season.

FAR AHEAD AS the leader, India Turner is the picture of intensity, even though she breezed to victory in the 100-meter hurdles at the Principals' track meet last weekend.

Tennis League holds banquet— several honored

The South Shore Women's Indoor Tennis League SSWITL) recently held its Seventh Annual Awards Banquet at Hugo's Restaurant in Cohasset. The banquet was hosted by the team members of the Cohasset Tennis and Squash Club.

The League is composed of women's doubles teams playing in four divisions from the Blue Hills, Brockton, Cohasset, Easton Country, Hanover, Old Colony — Hingham, Mill Pond, Pilgrim, Racquetime of Dedham and Randolph, Randolph, Scituate and the Weymouth Tennis Clubs. This year over 40 teams participated in team matches at these facilities from October thru April with over 400 members involved.

Ribbons to be hung on club banners were awarded to the third place winners in each division: Div. IV — Weymouth; Div. III — O.C. Hingham; Div. II — Weymouth-2; Div. I — Cohasset Tennis & Squash Club. Second place ribbons were captured by Mill Pond in Div. IV, Pilgrim & Weymouth tied in Div. III. Mill Pond also took Div. II and Racquetime of Dedham earned Div. I.

H.S. roundup

TRACK

Skippers wrapped up a disappointing 3-5 season with an awesome victory against a hardened Hanover team. Outstanding performances were given by Billy Taylor, Phil Tye and the omnipresent Scott Benbow . . . all seniors. Taylor hopped to a first place finish with Mike Ellis leaping into second . . . these two tracksters have been giving Cohasset the 1-2 punch it needs in the high jump. Taylor is undefeated in the high jump and recently copped a first place in the Sectional competition.

Just a note here, Taylor and his girlfriend, Debbie Jancis, were voted class couple in the 1980 yearbook. Some guys seem to have everything going for them.

Phil Tye, the most versatile runner on the team, streaked to victory in the 440 and anchored the mile relay in a superb performance.

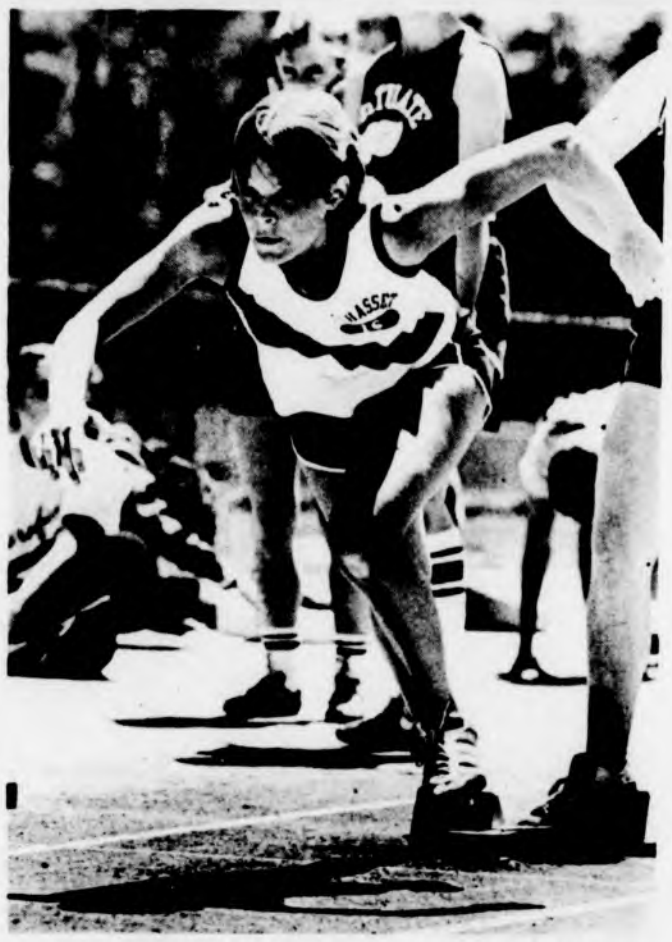
Tye will attend college in England next year and he plans to keep running. Scott "Blimby" Benbow wrapped up his season with a victory in the two mile. Soph Chris McNabb steamed in for a second place finish. Coach Davis is looking for a winning season next year even without star seniors.

Davis expects versatile athletics such as Pat Duffey, Greg Raffa, Steve Bowen, Mike Ellis and speedsters Steve D'Onofrio and Gordon Ricketts to lead the team on to victory.

TENNIS

Girls took Abington for everything last week by a 5-0 score. Seniors Laruen O'Connor, Janet England and Sandy Darymple won their straight sets. Both of Abington's doubles teams forfeited.

Boys decapitated the Green Wave 4-1 even without two of their regular starters. Joe and Robby Whelan provided the brotherly punch, capturing victories in the first and second singles positions. This along with wins by both doubles teams gave the Skippers a healthy win.



OUT OF THE blocks tough, Senior Erin O'Brien books for the finish line at the Principal's track meet last weekend.

Buckley, Keating shoo-ins for Bears in fall

Two Cohassetites put on a good show this year at the University of Maine's spring football sessions.

Barry Buckley, captain of the 1978 Skippers, and Steve Keating, who also graduated in '78, made a respectable showing in the spring sessions, which culminated with the annual spring game. The whites, Buckley's team, beat the blues, 20-0.

Both Buckley and Keating, brother of Buffalo Bill's Chris Keating, are expected to start for the Brown Bears at guard and center respectively this fall in Orono.

Fantasy Island - CHS freshman style

By Karin Bartow

The brass interludes are sounded. The peasants, nobles and royalty are welcomed by the chancellor to "a day of merriment and ceremony." With authentic pageantry,costumes and music, the courtyard of the high school is transformed to the time of the middle ages.

The sixth annual freshman class medieval banquet was celebrated last week, representing the culmination of the English and social studies academic unit on medieval times. After classroom study and testing, the students began planning the final celebration that synthesizes all the parts into a living drama.

Virginia Burbank, an English teacher and member of the teaching team, says, "(the banquet) is one way to get the ninth grade together." The students learn from each other as well by joining together on one project.

Other members of the team are Maureen Alcott and Frances Cronin, English teachers, and social studies teachers, Joseph Bouchard and Kurt Rever. The music, art, audio-visual and library departments were involved as well.

The students formed art and food committees, made their own costumes, wrote their own script and directed the six hour, seven part skit that is full of familiar medieval characters. The teachers guided, advised and assisted in full costume on banquet day.

The King and Queen of England preside over a triple celebration — the wedding of their son to the Spanish princess, crusades, and the coronation of Charlemagne by the Pope. The guests are entertained, amused and occasionally frightened by a parade of juggling jesters, dancers, singers, storytellers, jousting knights, evil witches and acrobats.

In addition to the entertainers, the skit was full of medieval favorites such as Romeo and Juliet, Chaucer's pilgrims, Beowulf, Arthur, El Cid, St. Joan, Maid Marian, Unferth, Merlin and Lancelot. Period costumes, banners and music and sound effects gave an air of authenticity to the medieval romp; the damp grass and gray skies made it all seem more real.

One student remarked: "It felt like we were living in medieval times," and another "learned that one of the best ways to learn is by doing it."

The majority of students felt the banquet was important because of what they learned about themselves, of how they act in front of others. They were "amazed at how talented" some of their classmates are. The day of entertainment had ample room for the freshmen to show off individual expertise and talent they otherwise wouldn't have the opportunity to display.

For the ladies in waiting, peasantry and royalty, who ate, drank and had a merry time around the medieval courtyard, it was also an opportunity to share in a positive spirit, the culmination of learning in living form.

BIG PARADE MONDAY!

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

By Joan Pinkham

The merry month of May started out not so very merry weatherwise, but every now and then we're treated to a few rays of sunshine and all's right with the world. It gives one's spirits a lift to see May's vegetables appearing in the markets — radishes, tender young scallions, asparagus. You can put a little springtime on your table by adding thin rings of green peppers to your salad bowl; or tomatoes blended with the mellow flavor of the avocado. A fruit salad can brighten a meal with slices of the bright red strawberries that look so luscious. Another touch of spring is the rhubarb which is beginning to appear in gardens and roadside stands. Here is Margaret Ward's

RHUBARB PIE IN LATTICE CRUST

1 recipe of a crust pastry

1 T melted butter
¼ tsp. salt
4 c. 1" pieces rhubarb

Combine tapioca, sugar, rind, butter, salt, rhubarb in bowl. Let stand approx. 15 min. Line 9" pie plate with half the pastry rolled 1/8" thick, allowing it to extend an inch beyond the edge. Fold edge back to form a standing ridge. Fill with fruit mixture. Moisten edge of pastry with cold water. Arrange lattice strips cut from other half of pastry across top. Flute rim with fingers. Bake at 450 for 15 min., then 350 for 30 min. more.

A golden day in May when the jonquils, forsythia and pansies are blooming, is no time to linger in the kitchen. For a quickly made luncheon, or supper dish arrange alternate layers of asparagus tips and sliced, hard cooked eggs in a buttered baking dish. Pour well-seasoned white sauce over it all and top with buttered bread crumbs. Brown under low broiler heat. Here is Marion Brown's delectable way of preparing broccoli in much the same manner, called

BROCCOLI-EGG BAKE

4 c. cooked broccoli
8 sliced, hard-cooked eggs
2 c. milk
8 oz. cream cheese
½ tsp. salt
Buttered crumbs

Making a layer of broccoli on bottom of casserole, put a layer of egg slices on top. In sauce pan on medium heat, make sauce by blending cream cheese and milk, cooking until smooth and slightly thick. Pour over eggs and broccoli. Top with buttered crumbs and bake 30 min. at 350 degrees.

Angler's Corner

By Lindy Blaisdell

Wanting to get out fishing but not knowing where to go can be frustrating. Ask an old salt and you will get, "In the Ocean" for an answer. Not too many fishermen are willing to give away their favorite spot. We offer the following suggestions (as a starting point) for newcomers to the South Shore and those that only go to Duxbury Bridge.

FROM THE SURF

Duxbury Bridge, Duxbury — At the end of Powder Point Ave. Fish the beach outside or the bay inside or from the bridge itself. You will find Cod, Flounder, Pollock, Tautog, Stripers, Bluefish and Mackerel.

Duxbury Beach, Duxbury — From Canal Street off Rt. 139. From the beach expect to catch Cod, Pollock, Bluefish, Stripers and Mackerel.

Brant Rock Jetties, Marshfield — Along Ocean Street Rte. 139. Pollock, Tautog, Cod, Stripers, Bluefish, Mackerel and Flounder enjoy the rocky coastline there.

Damon Point, Marshfield — Off Damon Point Road east of Rte. 3A along the North River. The exotic Co-ho Salmon along with Stripers, Flounder and Tom Cod show up here.

Green Harbor, Marshfield — From West Jetty Beach Road, off Rte. 139. Here Pollock, Tautog, Cod, Flounder, Stripers and Mackerel are waiting for you.

Pilgrim Power Plant, Plymouth — Off Rocky Point Rd. from Rte. 3A. Hours 6 a.m. to 7:30 p.m. April through November. Lots of Flounder, Stripers, Blue fish, Mackerel, Tautog, Cod, Pollock and Tom Cod here.

Plymouth Beach, Plymouth — Along Rte. 3A. Park at Bert's Restaurant. Great place for Stripers, also Flounders, Bluefish and Cod.

Town Pier and Harbor Jetty, Plymouth — At the end of Rte. 44. Everyone's favorite, the Smelt, with Tom Cod and Flounder mixed in.

Harbor Piers, Scituate — Along Front St. and Jericho Road. All bay fishing for Flounder, Tom Cod, Smelt, Pollock and small Mackerel.

Harbor Jettles, Scituate — From Cedar Point and First Cliff. Bluefish, Tautog, Mackerel, Pollock, Flounder, Cod, and Stripers all come in close here.

North Scituate Beach, Scituate — Take Gannett Road to Glades Road. Some Bluefish, Stripers, Cod, and Flounder feed here among the rocks.

Driftway, Scituate — Along Driftway Road from Rte. 3A. Lots of Smelt, Tom Cod and small Flounders.

Harbor Piers, Cohasset — Off Bordor Street. Flounder, Smelt, Tom Cod all enjoy this harbor.

WITH A BOAT

If you trailer a boat, the following list of launching ramps can get you into some fast fishing.

Cohasset, single paved ramp — From Parker Ave. Usuable from half to full tide.

Duxbury, single sand ramp — At Powder Point Ave. Paved ramps at Washington St., Mattakeeset Court, Hicks Point off Bay Rd., and Bay Marine Corp. Use at all tides.

Hingham, single paved ramp — At Iron Horse Statue and Hingham Marine, use at all tides.

Kingston, single partly paved — From River Street to Jones River. Half to full tide only. Must buy town sticker.

Marshfield, single paved — At Brank Rock, Green Harbor Marina, Kimball Marine, and Mary's Livery on North River. All tides.

Plymouth, single paved — At Town Wharf, use all tides. Single sand ramp at Nelson and Taylor Street. Half to full tides.

Quincy — Quincy Bay Marina has sand ramp for half to full tide. Single paved ramps at Boston Harbor Marina and Hurleys. Use all tides.

Scituate — Scituate Harbor and North River Marine have single paved ramp for all tides. Half to full tide paved ramp at Cole Parkway.

Weymouth — Neck Street, single paved use at all tides. Access to Quincy Bay.

SIZE LIMITS

Enjoy yourself this summer but don't come home with any short fish. Shad must be 14". No size limit on Smelt but season is closed from March 15 to June 15th. Stripers have to be 16" measured to the fork in their tail. Pollock need to be a foot while Mackerel need be only half that size at 6". Squeteague or weakfish and Atlantic Salmon must be 12" but the Co-ho Salmon has to be 15". The rest are fair game at any size.

NORWELL

Built before the last clipper ship had cleared the slips on the North River this Antique Cape still displays the warmth of exposed beams in the kitchen, family room and living room. Set on 2.9 acres this property is further enhanced by a large barn (the swallows are for gratis) and a 2½ room heated guest house, presently being used as an office & spare bedroom. Some local historian may remember it as the town barbershop. If you can, you will also recognize the reasonable price ..... $72,900.

Dealers named for Town Hall antiques show

Cohasset's Town Hall will hold their fourth annual antique show and sale sponsored by the Beechwood Congregational Church. The show will be held Friday, June 6 from noon to 9 p.m. and Saturday, June 7 from 10 a.m to 4 p.m.

Antiques such as fine glassware, clocks, furniture, jewelry, books and much more will be on display and for sale. There is ample parking and a snack bar.

This year there will be a variety of sandwiches, hot dogs, coffee, tea, cold drinks and squares next door at the Second Congregational Church. Home baked goods will be available at the ticket area.

A three foot victorian dressed doll, a crazy quilt and dinner for two at the Red Lion Inn are the prizes offered on the raffle. The drawing for the raffle will be on June 7.

Co-chairwomen Geraldine Ainslie and Linda Graves announce the following dealers in the show this year: Janice Caldwell, Jane Flynn, and Noel Ripley, Cohasset; Ann Bush, Bird in Hand Antiques, Duxbury; Paul and Deborah Loughran, Ocean Bluff; James and Stella Callahan, Brant Rock; Richard Hatfield, Green Harbor; Caroline Bates, Hobstar Antiques, Plymouth.

Also Francis Wallet, Abington; Mary Rushton and Elizabeth Vinal, Kingston; Jerome and Grace Gallant, Green Harbor; Charles and Janette Joyce, Hyannis; Geraldine Pearle, Purple Pigeon Studio, East Wareham; Nancy Petrus, Blowin a Gale, Marshfield; Margaret Colson, Forestdale.

And Justine Cook, North Pembroke; Edward Stadman, Watertown; Joanne Wickens, Whiffletree Antiques, Plymouth; Hazel Sjoberg, The Hathely Shop, Marshfield; Clare Gomness and Madeline Hoaglund, Plymouth; Diane Lothrop, West Bridgewater; Ann Prosper, 1750 House Antiques, East Bridgewater; Lee Adams, Lee Adams Antiques, Duxbury.

Discount tickets are available through these dealers and from Geraldine Ainslie and Linda Graves of the Beechwood Church.

Obituaries

Fred Troy

Fred S. Troy Jr., 58, an employee of Boston Redevelopment Authority, died Friday after a long illness.

Born in Boston, he had lived in Cohasset for the past 20 years.

He graduated from Roxbury Latin High School in 1938, Harvard University in 1942 and the Coast Guard Reserve Academy in 1942.

A veteran of World War II, he served in the Coast Guard for three years and was the commander of a Coast Guard cutter in the invasion on D-Day.

He was a self-employed wool broker for 12 years, owning the Troy Wool Company.

He was a member of the Wool Trade Association, Harvard Club of Boston, Boston Garden Club, Kittansett Country Club in Marion and Hatherly Country Club, Scituate.

Husband of the late Mary (Favorite) Troy, and father of the late Fred S. Troy III, he leaves two daughters, Mrs. Sallyann Chatterton of Cohasset and Mrs. Ricki Aikau of Honolulu, and six grandchildren.

A memorial Mass was held in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset.

Expressions of sympathy may be sent in his memory to the Cancer Fund, 47 West Elm St., Brockton, Mass. 02401.

Linda Walsh

Linda Mary (O'Malley) Walsh, of California, formerly of Cohasset, died May 13 at the age of 88. She was the wife of the late John Joseph Walsh, Sr.

She leaves a son, John Joseph "Bud" Walsh and a daughter, Mary M. Walsh, both of California.

She also leaves sisters Nancy Allan of Braintree and Margaret Walsh and Elizabeth Gurry, both of Dorchester, 10 grandchildren and 11 great grandchildren, and a sister-in-law, Nora O'Mally of Milton.

Funeral services were held Saturday from the Sparrell Funeral Home, followed by a Mass of Christian burial in St. Anthony's Church. She will be buried in Woodside Cemetery.

Joseph Fahey

Joseph Vincent Fahey, 79, retired salesman for Cody Distributors in Boston, died unexpectedly Saturday in Quincy City Hospital.

He was born and educated in Boston before moving to Cohasset 40 years ago.

He was a World War II Coast Guard Auxiliary veteran and a longtime member of the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club.

He was the husband of the late Irene V. (Dolan) Fahey, and leaves one son, Joseph C. Fahey of Cohasset; two sisters, Mrs. M. Ethel Forry of Chestnut Hill and Mrs. Louise P. McCarthy of Halifax; two grandchildren, Michele A. Fahey and Jacquelyn M. Fahey, both of Cohasset and a niece, Sister Brenda L. Forry, C.S.J. of Needham.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset and burial was in Woodside Cemetery.

Selectmen & Feola, Jr. negotiate $21,500 fine and a job in July

Nobody ever said he wasn't a good cop. But a series of off-duty accidents and mishaps last summer drew the unfavorable attention of both the public and the press to suspended Cohasset Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr., son of Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr.

After a year of having been suspended without pay, Feola, Jr. will be back on the job July 26, a week before his father retires as police chief. He has agreed to release the town from all debts, demands, actions, etc., both in equity which he now has or has ever had.

Selectmen are holding in escrow a letter of signed resignation from Feola, a 10-year member of the force, which can be presumably put into effect should Feola be involved in any behavior similar to last summer's incidents. However, even selectmen admit the signed resignation is more of a show of good faith than it is legal tender.

In brief, selectmen have bargained a financial settlement with Feola's having agreed to accept a one-year unpaid suspension. It has not been confirmed by anyone if that agreement is against Feola's constitutional rights. In all other respects, the agreement stipulates that Feola act in accordance with the standards stipulated by law of any other Cohasset Police Officer.

He must also, under terms of the agreement, continue to participate in a stress program as conducted by the Boston Police Department for period of times suggested by the director. But in all other instances, Feola, has any other police officer, has the right to appeal any complaint against him to selectmen.

If two selectmen find Feola has violated police regulations or standards of conduct — selectmen and Feola have agreed (probably illegally and contrary to Feola's constitutional rights) that selectmen will be authorized to use the resignation signed by Feola.

Of course Feola could still appeal any firing to Civil Service.

The terms of the agreement are for a period of five years.

Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said selectmen (Ainslie and hiimself, with Selectman Rocco Langelle being not present) were advised by outside counsel that Civil Service would probably not back up firing Feola.

Clark admitted that Feola, Jr. initiated the agreement and said: "We feel we did what was best for the town. I've always heard he was a good policeman on duty, but he must continue the stress program. I hope the guy works out."

In March, 1980 Wareham Judge Dennis Collari fined Feola $50 for the illegal possession of a dangerous weapon and $10 each for three driving charges arising from an incident in Hull last May: speeding, failing to keep to the right and failing to have a driver's license in his possession. The knife (dangerous weapon) was a hunting knife which was discovered on his person at a booking, after Feola was arrested for speeding down Nantasket Avenue in Hull after 1 a.m. He had, allegedly, just returned from a hunting trip.

Changing municipal government

By Tanna Kasperowicz

There used to be a man on a white horse who came calling, usually during an election year. But it appears voters are no longer looking for him. Chances are if he should show up the board of health would refuse to give him a variance for his horse.

People are increasingly less amenable to being led and government has noticed.

TALK SHOW

This series is concerned with changes in town government which Cohasset town officials have been talking about for some time. We're talking about representative town meeting, job-sharing in the schools and perhaps in other government areas, a public safety department, self insurance, getting rid of Civil Service and teacher tenure.

We're also talking about anything else concerning town government you'd like to talk about. And please don't wait to be interviewed. Write us a letter — your comments will be included in this column. Address your comments to Talk Show, the Mariner, Box 71, Cohasset, 02025.

In each series we'll try to offer you a little hard news, some interesting thoughts from citizens, and perhaps we'll even hear from some of your legislators and would-be legislators. They're certainly invited.

We're calling the series Talk Show because your letters and comments will pretty much direct the discussion.

CIVIL SERVICE

In 1979 there were 45 pieces of legislation passed which directly affected Civil Service in a number of Massachusetts towns. A large portion of that legislation had to do with acts exempting certain offices from the provisions of Civil Service.

As of April 9, 1979, summer police officers in eight counties were exempted from Civil Service. In Duxbury the police chief was exempted; in Hamilton the town accountant; in Springfield the superintendent of public parks and recreation; in West Springfield the position of secretary in the police department.

In Watertown the manager of the municipal skating rink became exempt from Civil Service; in Medford it was the position of city engineer; in Marshfield, call firefighters; in Taunton, the superintendent of cemeteries and superintendent of parks and playgrounds and so on.

And in a few instances, Civil Service was pulled out of an entire town.

For many people, those whose sense of security is dependent upon their affiliations with strong institutions, the tidal wave of changes which we're talking about are horrifying. Still others see a new Renaissance. Like the small businessman, we have to believe we will not drown if we choose something different.

James Lagrotteria, a member of the advisory committee and business manager at Glastonbury Abby, is a great believer in people and their ability to deal with chance. Yes, yes, yes . . . he's in favor of self insurance, replacing Civil Service and teacher tenure with contracts, stiffer penalities for vandalism.

Lagrotteria also advocates returning welfare administration to the town. "Welfare is much too officious. America has reached out to be fair and treat people equally, but it can't legislate those qualities.

"If you want an education, go to Roxbury Court. The court system stinks. Lawyers are out there to

CHS energy day is June 3

By Allan McDonald
Cohasset High School

Tuesday, June 3 at Cohasset High School will be the second annual Energy Day with emphasis this year on energy conservation.

A year ago following the Three Mile Island incident the high school Alternative School organized an Energy Day which focused on nuclear energy. A number of outside authorities spoke pro or con, and the day included some alternate energy presentations.

With energy matters increasing in importance and affecting all Americans in the pocketbook, conservation has become a reality. Students and teachers at the high school are beginning to realize that "Energy Conservation Means Teamwork" and that "Every Day is Energy Day," the two themes of this year's efforts, which are concentrating on the local scene instead of bringing in as many outsiders as last year.

It is hoped that the school activities culminating on June 3 will carry over into the summer and next year and have an effect on both school conditions and town-wide recycling.

June 3 will see a bicycling presentation by student Bob Lindsey; a debate on the nuclear issue featuring the school debating team of Sue Bird and Patty Walsh and Phil Dormitzer and Bob Tis; alternate energy activities directed by the physical education department including roller skating, skateboarding, and bicycling; student-made audio-visual projects on recycling; solar projects from the industrial arts department; and other student presentations.

The main display case has been featuring the value of conserving paper, glass, and aluminum, and daily announcements include an energy statistic. Cohasset is one of the last towns in the South Shore to do anything substantial about recycling and upgrading its disposal area. It is hoped that the current school efforts will help bring about a change in attitude throughout the town toward energy conservation.

Leonard and Philip Flaherty

Flaherty and son at The David Sharpe Gallery

By Karen Bartow

"He was born an artist," his father said. "I learned from him through osmosis," says the son.

They are Leonard and Philip Flaherty, not exactly a father-son "team," but a pair of talented, motivated artists who have thrived in a family of creativity.

Their combined artwork, a representation of thirty years work each, together for the first time, is on display at the David Sharpe Gallery for the next two weeks.

Leonard, who is an elementary school teacher in Scituate and was a businessman for 25 years before that, has had no formal art training. His life's love of nature, of the rocky beaches, villages and lighthouses of New England and happy personal memories, have been his inspiration. In scenes from Cape Ann and Rockport to Nauset Beach, his oils, watercolors, acrylics and pen and inks form soft, gentle pictures giving no hint of a self-taught man.

During the 1950's when the Boston Businessman's Art Association was formed (pioneer of the local art association), Leonard was exposed to many fine Boston-area artists. He has relied on art-books for training, but mostly, he's just always painted — often. "I used to sketch anywhere during business hours when I should have been working!"

Flaherty, who lives in Cohasset with his wife Loretta, plans to paint full-time when he retires from teaching. His other great interest is in music and he is an accomplished classical guitarist. Loretta sings, and before their sons Philip and Leonard, Jr. (a businessman living in California) went off to college, the family played a combined total of 20 instruments in a club act under the name of the "Balladeers."

Philip says he's "Always loved painting." He was creating murals at the age of six; he won his first prize at 12; and he is now learning to overcome the Yankee ethic that dictates that you have to work hard for a living, by painting more of the time!

He is a registered nurse the other part of the time and like his wife, Connie, a nurse practitioner, works in spinal cord injury rehabilitation.

He studied at St. Michael's College, the Vesper George School of Art, Boston, and privately with painter Robert Douglas Hunter and sculptor, Stephen Searles.

He paints in oils for still lifes, the only scenes he paints from real life. His outdoor scenes, also reminiscent of the New England countryside, are done in acrylic and re-created from photographs and many sketches. Sketching trains his eye on more detail; the photographs help him maintain accuracy in reproducing old barns, houses, cars, fields, boats and coastline scenes indoors. He uses his artist's license in shifting fields, adding a pond, or moving an old boat away from a yard full of others, to heighten their beauty and enhance the overall scene.

Oil portraits of his father, wife, father-in-law and of himself demonstrate the diversity of this artist. In a self-portrait he covers himself up with a hat, dark glasses and moustache in an attempt "to see how little of the face you could paint and still get a likeness." Without chin, brows, eyes, the painting is unmistakenly the artist!

What's impressive about this exhibition is not only the fact that the pictures covering several walls of the gallery are from father and son, but also because of the wide range of composition, technique, experience and talent it represents.

Changing

make a lot of bucks — justice is done by winning the case for the client." He added that the legislation of mandatory compatability won't and isn't solving the problem between women and men or whites and blacks.

"To knock off the mountain, you start at the top, not the bottom," Lagrotteria said. And he proposed to do that by budget cutting.

"The town's public safety budget is the biggest slice of the budget." He feels local preference in the police and fire departments has to go because those groups serve as a power block at town meeting and are numerous enough to hinder change or any attempt at change.

While he advocates budget cutting, he says it must be budget cutting with knowledge. "Through budget-cutting the town can gain control over the operation of any department. But it's not fair to just cut budgets unless the town knows that the department is in fact over-spending."

SCHOOL PHILOSOPHY

Eric Pearson, owner of Highway Motors on 3-A, said while he feels there are certain town employees who need protection from political action, he feels employment contracts with individuals would be more beneficial to all concerned.

Pearson advocates the setting of parameters for all jobs: "Specific job descriptions should be set, an evaluation of employees should be made, and specific reasons for discharge should be set."

Over the years, Pearson said we have allowed our elected officials to create individual bureaucracies which are now fighting to be continued.

He sees those bureaucracies being (for discussion's sake): the audio visual department at CHS; the music department; college orientated programs.

"The town's first responsibility is to charge the school committee to give children basic working tools to advance into adulthood." He admitted that when 82 per cent of CHS graduates go off to college every year, selling parents the basics is difficult.

"In affluent towns parents set the direction they want for children. The basic wish of the parent is for the child to go to college. And the goals of the parents enter into the child's decision, forcing the school department to be college-orientated, by offering a number of expensive alternative programs."

He feels this college push is a detriment to basic educational philosophy. Parents who wish children to continue on to college, Pearson feels, should pay privately for that education outside the school system.

He further suggests that a way to do this would be through the development of inter-town education structure (privately paid) for those who show an expressed desire for further development beyond the basic educational structure.

Pearson echoed the thoughts of Lagrotteria in his thoughts on job contracts being offered to both teachers and present Civil Servants.

A DIFFERENT WAY

William Weeks, chairman of the government structure committee and former state representative, feels a recession, ("If we're not already in a recession we're bordering on one,") will clearly affect spending habits. He noted the town this year clearly deferred major projects, "and that's going to continue for the foreseeable future."

With federal revenue funds shrinking and cherry sheet funds growing smaller, he predicts the town can expect to experience a higher tax rate and sees town meeting again rejecting funding major capital projects.

He sees changes in town government in the near future with the hiring of an executive secretary to selectmen (voted Spring 1980 annual town meeting) who will be able to benefit the town with a knowledge of grantsmanship and by providing better communications between town government boards.

Weeks also envisions town, county and state government pressures on keeping things the way they are "To justify its existence. But there are only so many tax dollars to go around."

When Weeks was a state representative, he voted for veto power over the school budget every year. "But every year attempts have been thwarted."

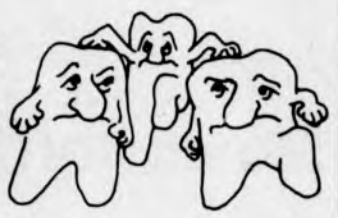
Dental Dialogue

TRAFFIC JAM IS MOM'S CONCERN

Q. My child still has his baby teeth and his permanent ones are coming in crooked behind them. I know this is not normal, what should I do?

A. Don't panic. The situation may look terrible, but it is normal. Your child now has a gallon of teeth and only half a gallon of mouth. Given time, things will even out. But see your dentist, he may want to relieve the crowding by removing the crowded baby tooth or by referring your child to an orthodontist, a specialist who straightens teeth.



This column is presented in the interest of better dental health. From the office of

Harry Ritter mooring madness

By Chet Ellis

Have you ever seen a grown man cry? I ask this question not to stir up unnecessarily the sensibilities of those who feel grown men should cry more often (thereby releasing the tensions created by the pressure of a market economy or teenage children), but rather to set a rhetorical scene for a discussion of one of Cohasset's most compelling issues, a phenomenon known to those who are involved as, the "mooring list."

Those who are on it cry often.

A few years ago, in the early seventies, when sociological insanity was reaching its peak (you may recall Vietnam, Watergate, fuel shortage No. 1, and Laugh-in), the town fathers (and mother), faced with increasingly crowded conditions in the harbor, decided to set up a list (controlled by the Harbor master) which would regulate and control that which heretofore had been a somewhat random process — that is, the establishment of a mooring for one's boat in Cohasset harbor.

Now, there are some things which are easy to regulate and some which are not. Dog licenses and public nakedness are of the first category but status and ultimate dreams are of the second and are another matter.

To own, utilize, clean and polish, sleep in, lie upon, and generally admire ones own boat at a mooring, is some people's idea of the ultimate dream. (Note: For those who feel that that which was just described is the ultimate horror, read no further, turn to the police log and get your kicks from the foibles of others).

Additionally, if that boat is a large one and can be moored in one'shome town harbor at a point no more than a few hundred feet from a dinghy space, then the ultimate dream is coupled with localized status and true Nirvana has been achieved.

Similar cases could be made, I am sure, for other forms of self gratification, such as horses, airplanes, Italian renaissance living rooms and square dancing. But since Cohasset is a picturesque New England village, on the water, and recommended by both Holiday Magazine and the Sail Plan Quarterly, boats is where it's at!

In any case, the establishment of the mooring list had the effect of:

1. Dividing the town into three groups, those who had a mooring, those who did not but wanted one, and those who didn't care one way or the other.

2. Elevating the Harbor Master to a position of power somewhere between God and Bowie Kuhn. A situation, by the way, which has since been mitigated by the creation of the Harbor Study Committee, an appointed group which recommends policy and assists in the regulation of the harbor, thereby taking some of the pressure of the Harbor Master.

Shortly after the list became a reality, all hell broke loose. Those who had moorings began to devise schemes to keep them (moorings) forever and plotted against each other and against those who were still on the list. Some of the more popular ploys were:

1. The multiple boat family mooring.
2. The executive transfer but we'll be back hedge.
3. The satellite mooring sneak.
4. The fishermen's channel block.

Those who did not have moorings but were high enough on the list to have actually bought boats and couldn't stand watching others have all the fun, devised even cagier schemes to keep their egos intact. Some of these connivances were:

1. The semi-permanent guest mooring.
2. The Yacht Club/Sailing Club end run.
3. The low tide bottom flop.
4. The Town Wharf extended tie-up.
5. The Baileys Creek swamp water grab.

On top of all this strategic mooring mayhem, the list grew and grew. Within a few years there were several hundred names waiting for moorings. Applications were made for boats that didn't exist and people that didn't exit. Listees watched each other like hawks to make sure someone further down the list didn't get a mooring first. Neighbors spied on neighbors, brothers against brothers, the Civil War all over again.

Each year new problems would arise. Can anyone forget the famous official houseboat kidnapping of 1977, the father and son lobster boat swap of 1978 and the Baileys Creek standoff of 1979.

To complicate things, the list "rules" have changed two or three times since inception. As the result of the last change, one person I know went from 9th place on the 27 foot list to 23rd place overall andmay have to wait until 1986 before he has a shot at a mooring. That is, if they don't change the rules again!

If all this sounds like I regard the list as so much bureaucratic bilge water, I don't. Cohasset Harbor is a valuable, unique resource which needs an orderly process by which it is populated. Once again, civilization has come to the rescue of humanity in turmoil. You may cry in the order that you are on the list!

Author's note: There are actually several ways to get a boat into the harbor without waiting in line. For example:

1. The town provides three floating dock areas where it is permissible at no cost to tie up a boat for up to 12 feet in lenght.

2. The Yacht Club and Sailing Club have float space for boats up to 14 ft. and 12 ft. respectively, for members only.

3. The Flying Scot Fleet has eight fore-and-aft moorings and has a spot open at present for one additional Flying Scot.

Show of faith

It wasn't a completely surprising development. When there's a lot of debate, many closed sessions, negotiations are on-going.

Selectmen made no bones about the fact they had closely calculated their chances of ousting suspended Cohasset Patrolman Randolph Feola, Jr. from the department permanently. But according to selectmen, their private counsels said the odds were against Civil Service going along with a firing.

Most of the terms of the agreement, including Feola's signed resignation to be held in escrow by selectmen, probably wouldn't hold up in a court room. And so the agreement signed by both parties is largely a show of good faith on Feola's part.

Faith can deal in absolutes. Knowledge cannot. Knowledge is what you can observe or what has been observed about either the behavior of a person, dandelions or volcanos.

Humans do not have to understand matters of faith. They merely have to subscribe to them.

In matters of absolute right or absolute wrong it is easy to take a side. The appropriate action is merely to take a side or to know that you are on one side or the other.

But Feola will ultimately be judged not by what he believes in, rather he will be judged by what he does.

And Selectmen's action last week was not a conversion.

It was simply a movement.

Music terrific - where was the audience?

Letters

To the Editor:

My husband, daughters and I had the pleasure of attending the CHS Choral Concert last Thursday. It was excellent! We took our four-year old because we feel that it is important to instill an appreciation of music in our children. Her behavior was not the best but it was hardly bothersome to the handful of people in the audience. Where were the people of Cohasset?

These youngsters worked hard and were proud. They got all dressed up and were full of excitement before their performance. One boy came from a sick bed to go on. What dedication! How disappointing to perform to a mere few parents.

The achievements of these young people are great and may one day be even greater in the field of music. Where is the encouragement needed by them for their worthwhile endeavors?

On another occasion, my family and I attended a concert at another school on the South Shore. What an incredible difference! The auditorium was packed. They participated in the singing and gave standing ovations. Afterwards, a rock concert was given for the students and their parents. It was crowded and it was fun!

What is happening in Cohasset? Will academic excellence and sports be the only criteria for a well rounded education? Will a healthy music program only be had by the larger school districts in Massachusetts? What is to become of our children, who enjoy taking an active part in music? What is to become of their hopes, their talent? Are these destined to whither after the sixth grade? How sad!

Thanks, bike riders

To the Editor:

The Cohasset Teachers' Association wishes to thank all those who participated in the Annual Ride-A-Bike for Retarded citizens recently held throughout the state.

The total amount of money collected so far is $1,420.05. We urge those riders who have not turned in their money to do so immediately — either to Pat Plante or Mary Brennock at Cohasset High School.

Thank you,
Mrs. Maria A. Plante

Finocchiaro

From the Editor:

Last Wednesday Eddie Finocchiaro, now former sports editor of the Mariner, cleaned off his desk, grabbed his hat, put a full tank of gas in his car and headed back to Chicago. He had decided Chicago was, after all, his kind of town.

We'll all miss him here because not only did he add a lot of punch to the sports pages, he also helped in a variety of ways you didn't know he helped . . . unless you were one of the CHS Lamplight kids last week.

. . .loved his smile

Dear Eddie,

Wow! I can't thank you enough for the terrific person you are! You dropped everything you were doing just to help us finish our small four-page paper. Not only did you help us with the paper when youcould have been working, but you also welcomed us with a warm smile when we walked into the door.

Thanks again, I know you'll go far.

God be with you;

They started with the fleas - graduated to estates

YOU'VE SEEN THEIR YELLOW SIGNS...but you didn't know that Irene Lord and Susie Duncombe were the hard-working twosome behind the signs, did you? [Greg Derr photo]

By Tanna Kasperowicz

When Louis Bravo offers to carry their grocery bags to the car they probably secretly smile . . . Peddlers II have run into strange animals in watery basements, lowered pianos from the attic, carried bushels of books up from the cellars of the estate sales they manage, and they have no fingernails to prove it.

But . . . put Irene Lord and Susie Duncombe into cocktail dress and they're as petite and blonde as anybody around . . . their business keeps them trim, fit, busy . . .and continually learning.

Three years agoPeddlers II took flea market philosophy and expanded upon it, and are now offering a service to customers (buyers and sellers) which is respected near and far.

They are also most definitely increasing the life expectancy of the town landfill.

Years ago maiden aunties and other relatives served in the sted of Peddlers II. When a relative died and left an estate, maiden aunts descended upon the property like ants, dividing a lifetime of antiques and heirlooms, memories among the relatives, friends and heirs.

Peddlers II have come full circle. They're the middlewomen between the estate, relatives and friends, and they are sellers, not buyers. "We're strictly a service," Irene said, adding that Peddlers have a sure-fire system that has left all their customers satisfied.

Peddlers II offers complete resale service for estates, collections, antiques and household items — in your home, barn or garage. And the two women guarantee total sales organization, expert promotion and confidentiality. Consultation is without obligation.

In the years the Peddlers have been in business, they've dealt with over 20 homes. It takes three weeks on the average per sale. A high energy level, and "wanting to work and doing it," are the prerequisites of the business, Irene said. But their real satisfaction comes from getting a substantial overall gross to the delight of customers.

How do they do it? Susan said it's all promotion. "We've developed a following, there are a lot of people looking for things and we know who they are. Chances are they're going to get it a little cheaper. In 99 per cent of the time we have sold 50 per cent of what might have been taken to the dump."

They've got a bid sheet, mailing list comprised of well over 250 buyers, and a general following of a large number of people from the South Shore who when they see a yellow Peddlers II ad respond.

Research on items (and there are always new items to research during a sale) keep the women busy, interested and help to get some of the prices their business savvy generates.

What's the secret to their success? "We sell the bobby pins, we bag the buttons. During the third day of one of our Hingham estate sales, with only three or four items remaining, Susie quickly boxed the Comet and the rest of our cleaning aids which people quickly bought," Irene said.

Realtors are quickly catching on to Peddlers II and are referring transferees to them, which allows home owners a quick and grateful exit. They take the furniture and items they want along, and leave the remains to the Peddlers. "Sometomes a realtor doesn't even need a cleaning service to pick up the house," after Peddlers II has conducted a sale, Irene said.

Over the past three years they have sold estate cars, a greenhouse, and more than once Peddlers have spruced up an item so beautifully that the owner has removed the item from the sale.

Their work is confidential, private and they recommend that sellers not be present during the sale. There's a lot of emotion involved in selling heirlooms and memories.

Irene and Susie both agree the secret to the success of Peddlers II is "We're not looking to buy people's things. We're trying to sell them. There's a lot of confidentiality involved and we try to balance all aspects."

☐Bill Enos is aptly described and deservedly honored by a fine article in the June 1980 issue of Yankee Magazine, "A Scout for all Seasons" by Mel Allen (page 68!). Enos, who scouts new talent for the Red Sox, started his career in 1952 at the age of 32, the youngest ever for a scout.

Allen writes that scouting is one of the backbones of the game (the other being the scouted talent) and of its enduring folklore: "independent, shrewd, eagle-eyed men comfortable with loneliness, but never at a loss for words; who get lost in their hometown but can find a ballpark anywhere. Probably no scout evokes the image of this baseball maverick more than Bill Enos from Cohasset, who beats the bushes for the Boston Red Sox in the north country of New England."

☐Operation Sail 1980 brings the "Tall Ships" back to Boston this Friday in an exciting opener for Boston's 350th Birthday. Chairman of Op Sail' 80, Henry Dormitzer, was recently honored for his efforts with a Lincoln award from the New England Chapter, Public Relations Society of America, for "outstanding public relations practice in the six state region."

Dormitzer also was responsible for bringing the Tall Ships to Boston in 1976 for the American Bicentennial. He is an electronics executive who has had a life-long enthusiasm for sailing.

Dormitzer's Lincoln citation recognized "his leadership of Op Sail, a program which has given pleasure and information to the people of New England, spurred interest in sailing and garnered goodwill for the city of Boston."

☐Is caring forever? Yes. Caring is forever! Just depends on whether or not Marie Price's second grade window is open or shut. The intended wisp of wisdom is the latter.

☐With Spring comes the march of concerts and plays which fill the calendars and everyone's pride in the accomplishments of the school year.

Vibrant, tenacious, bold, with little trembling, they raise their young voices, practiced horns, strings, percussion and lines of memory to center stage of everyone's rejuvenation.

•The annual Deer Hill School Spring Concert played to a full house of enthusiastic families — the musical caretakers, lesson prompters, coaches, the greatest fans!

The young altos and sopranos of the chorus and chorale, under John MacInnis's expert direction, sang familar show themes and favorites, like the Muppet theme, Day by Day (from Godspell), I Don't Need Anything But You (Annie), Gonna Build A Mountain (Stop the World), a lovely Welsh folk song, The Ash Grove and other lively and well delivered numbers.

Kathryn Fox, Deer Hill Band Director, led the Junior and Advanced Bands through impressive compositions including an excellent performance of the difficult and sophisticated "Scott Joplin Tribute." The Jazz Band did a good job with a Barry Manilow favorite, "I Write the Songs," which featured a trumpet solo by Bobby Schultz and Sax solos by John Kuntz, Eric Maki, John Kornet, Glen Hochkeppel and Tim Chamberlain.

Jean Birman accompanied the singers: Barbara Conte arranged for the corsages. All should be very proud!

•The second and third year players of the Deer Hill Band participated in the Scituate Elementary Band Festival on May 18, the first of it's kind, co-ordinated by Earl Harmon, Instrumental Music Specialist for the Scituate Schools.

Fourth, fifth and sixth grade bands from eight communities played for each other and were evaluated. For young musicians, says Kathy Fox, "It was motivating for them to hear others play." Some were better than her group, but she also felt the Cohasset kids impressed themselves with the quality of their own performance. "Most had never heard kids their own age play," Mrs. Fox added. The 37 musicians performed "King Arthur's Processional," "Songs of the Sea," a "Scott Joplin Tribute" and "Rocko Poco."

The Festival program gave the musicians and audience information on the size of each school, the number of students participating in music programs, the number of practices per week and any out-of-school performances and other information.

Congratulations to Kathy Fox and her advanced band members: Cynthia Conklin, Lisa Cuff, Kathleen McGuire, Jennifer Doublas, Jennifer Chapman, Sarah Dickerman, Betsy Wilson, Sarah Atkinson, Heather Davenport, Noel Ripley, Carolyn O'Brien, Robin McAllister, Kathy Haase, Paul Bishop, Eric Whitman, Glenn Hochkeppel, John Kuntz, Laurie Livingston, Linda Colabro, Robert Schultz, Lisa Gallagher, Mark Delaney, David Leptich, Tom O'Brien, Larry Desmond, Leonard White, Elizabeth Williams, Amy Barrows, Darrell Horton, Floyd Hardwick, Robbie Jackson, John Jackson, John Kornet, Anne Taylor, Pamela Ellis, Jacqueline Fahey and Alice Bowdoin.

•The Advanced Band will perform selections from their Spring Concert for the Joseph Osgood students on June 4 at 10 a.m.

•Down at Osgood, another hotbed of talent, the open space classrooms gave the performance of their little careers in a combination of music, acting and dance for the sake of the environment.

One third grader said, "We have been working so long and very, very hard; we had eight practices then we had a dress rehearsal with the whole school." They made all their own scenery (three changes!) with Liz Wyman's help; individually designed programs; and John MacInnis "did the music." Well, his winning smile and experienced hand at combining young voices into a rousing strand of harmony were the guiding force, but the enthusiasm was truly their own.

How so many second and third graders remembered lines, props, steps and action is the wonder of Shirley Manna's, Shirley Tewksbury's and Ruth Clark's combined "drama center"!

The program, "A Trilogy for Ecology" presented the hopes of the youngsters for a safer environment, harmony with animals and nature and a desire to "give" to the world instead of taking from it.

The "Do-Nothing Frog" introduced a new kind of store, a "what I'm going to be shop" and proprietors, Jay Staunton and Danny Cox, secured promises from buyers to use their futures wisely and well . . . "Just don't take from the world, give to it."

"The Nature of Little Things" introduced a charming array of friendly bugs (Lila Ladybug, Billy Bee, Cecil Centipede, Ida Inchworm, the Anthill Baseball Team) who are saved from extinction by a determined exterminating team, by Dr. Good and her assistants, Kay and Ray, who switch formulas on the chemists.

The chorus "Talked to the Animals" extolled Jeremiah Bullfrog in "Joy to the World," choked and chuckled through "Pollution" (. . . like lambs to the slaughter, they're drinking the water and breathing the air! Uggggghhhh!!"), went to a cliff-hanging "Baseball Game" (Chris Walsh soloing), and, of course, there's always "Tomorrow."

Troy Hasse did an expert job of moving the program along with introductions, credits, explanations and thanks to all, especailly the custodians!!

Ah, working togetherness

By Lois Martin

My, how I marvel at couples who work together . . . all day long . . . during weekends . . . constantly seeking one another out for astute observations, business or otherwise.

I've wondered if life would thrust my mate and me together in a working relationship for money, someday. We go our separate ways now during the workweek, meeting again for supper, swapping news and planning what we'd like to do about this or that. It's been a pleasant non-working relationship. But I've watched the Ma and Pa businesses, behind the counter ensemble, singing in a perpetual duo, constantly coordinating through life.

PATCHES

Let me say here that my instincts at this moment are not toward risking our livelihood on a working partnership. Don't misunderstand me. I like him and I exist on the premise that the feeling's mutual. But in our many experiences together, there've been some which included temporary times of working together. I don't foresee them as being profitable in the long run. And I suspect that statement's too modest.

Take wallpapering. We worked best on different rooms. We weren't graciously receptive to constructive criticism. There was a similar degree of rapport when we used to put up the tent together. And when I've been called upon to direct him when he's backing out the car or the other way around, there's been a definite lack of lilting communication. If it were necessary for me to try to start the car while he worked to repair it under the hood, things went from loud words to silence faster.

As we've matured, however, we've worked at withholding spontaneous observations that tend to incriminate and cause hard feelings. We've made ignoble efforts, for example, when we are lugging a sofa out of the house to speak to one another with endearments when our fingers are crushed against the door frame instead of speaking sharply. It's no small accomplishment.

In short, I believe we're working toward a retirement together which could incorporate a business . . . together.

But I'm here to tell you we shan't be sailing through life together. That's a promise in made in the aftermath of his boat launching last Saturday.

Strange too. We are dynamite on the same softball team, even taking turns pitching. And for several years running we took first place in the three-legged race with the big burlap bag. Some said we were a sight to behold, so perfectly in stride.

What then is it with me and these boats. I make of him a Captain Bly and he creates of me a mutinous swabbie, an incompetent one at that.

We've been in many a boat together. That's why when we prepared for Saturday's important launching of his new sailboat, one of the short ships, I sallied forth with gusto to make of it the occasion it was. I blew up big balloons (someone said in three seconds flat). I notified friends of the time and place. I brought bubbly and cups.

But I had no intention of leaving the harbor with him in the same craft. Because I know my place and it isn't in a boat. Something happens to us when we're in the same vessel. At Disney World I paddled the wrong way. Worse than that I thought it was funny when I kept running our canoe up on the bank. When I accused him of not being patient, he declared he'd been the most patient man in the world.

Anyway he launched his craft alone. And naturally he named the thing after me, rousing some guilt. So I ran out to the dock to catch a ride after he'd safely steered away from shore.

From the very moment I went aboard, things went down downstream with the "Loie." I rowed toward shore instead of toward sea where the sail would have been helpful. I got one oar stuck under a piling and sat in a place that wasn't dry yet.

Being a sharp person, he offered to return me to the dock within three minutes time. And it's a testimony, I told him later, to the strength of our marriage that it's survived another boat ride.

I'm not terribly sure what we'll do in our elder years if we're lucky enough to have them. But we know we'll be together, he in his short ship and I, waving to him from the shore.

Hull teams ravished by Cohasset blizzard of '80

By Rob Tis

Friday was the ultimate day in Cohasset sports. Four Skipper teams faced their arch rival . . . Hull. It was the last game of the season for each team, the last time seniors would play in a Skipper uniform, and every player on every team was polished, practiced and ready to win.

BASEBALL

The baseball team had the hardest struggle as it faced the Pirates (an 11-4 record) with its own standing 1-12. It was a battle from the beginning. Paul Buckley slammed a three-run double in the third while Pirate Charlie Richardson came in with a grand slam.

Going into the sixth the score was five-up. Fittingly, two senior Skippers blitzed Pirates, winning the game. Bruce (almost singlehandedly) accounted for Skipper's last victory. Maynard singled, then Phil Drago came in with a big double to score Bruce and put the Skippers ahead forever.

Bill Kurtz had a sterling day on the mound as he let only five hits in and threw with a veteran's poise in the late innings.

SOFTBALL

A crowd of 200 Hull fans yelled, screamed and taunted the softballers (mainly the boys) last Friday, but it didn't work. Cohasset capitalized on good pitching, good hitting and five Hull errors to outplay the Pirates 7-3.

The Pirates squeaked to a victory earlier this season, and were undefeated. Skippers have been eager and hungry to gain revenge since then.

In the second inning Skippers surged to a 4-0 lead, on Lindsey Gilmore's two RBI single and another RBI by Shelly Townsend. Each team added three suns to its tally, but no major threats were ever rendered by the Pirates (excluding those from onlookers).

Mike Thorton, Karne Froio, Lance Norris and Ellen Digirolamo also added hits for Skippers. David Turner had an excellent pitching performance, allowing only six hits, striking out three and refusing any walks.

By finishing their season with only two losses, Skippers have clinched a berth in the state tournament and will probably take second place in the South Shore League.

TENNIS

Both girls' and boys' tennis teams ended their season with wins, also. Girls slammed their way to a 4-1 victory with wins by Lauren O'Connor and Janet England in the singles position and by Sue Dalrymple, Karen Murphy and Leslie Carrol and Sandy Dalrymple doubles. The girls ended their season with a very respectable 8-3 record.

Last Thursday Skipper boys lost the battle of the century to Duxbury 4-1, squelching their chances of a state tournament berth. Gallant attempts were made by both doubles teams as it took three sets and two and a half hours for them to lose. The Skipper victory was at third singles.

Dejected, but still eager, a team of substitutes took to the courts Friday and destroyed Hull 5-0 showing the great depth of this club.

DOG OBEDIENCE CLASSES

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept phone registration for dog obedience classes to be conducted by Miss Pamela Tillotson. Wednesday evenings, on the Town Common. A beginners class, dogs who have had no prior training, will be held from 6-7 p.m. and an advanced class, dogs who have had prior formal training, will be held from 7-8 p.m. The fee for the six week program is $12.

Small dogs must be a minimum of six months of age, and larger dogs may be only four months of age. There will be no minimum age requirement for the handlers, however, they must be able to control the animal. Dogs must be brought to class with a choke collar and on six foot leather leads.

If interested, please call the Recreation Office at 383-6791 for further details and registration. Classes are scheduled to begin Wednesday, June 11.

1980 OFFICERS

At its monthly meeting in May, the Cohasset Recreation Commission elected officers for the 1980-81 year. Richard P. Barrow was again elected chairman, as was Nancy E. Sladen, Vice-Chairman, and Alan L. Ekberg, Secretary. The Commission also welcomes Mr. James L. Gallagher, newly elected member, to the Commission.

GOLF LESSONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations via phone for Monday evening, golf lessons. Classes will be offered for beginners, intermediates, and advanced players taught by Mr. Rich Theabeault, Assistant Pro, Cohasset Golf Club.

There is a $10 fee for the six, one hour lessons. If interested, please call the Recreation office at 383-6791 immediately. Classes will be filled on a first call-first enrolled basis.

McKinnon steak-bake

The Committee to re-elect Senator Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) will hold a Steak-Bake IV in honor of the senator Saturday, June 14 from 6 p.m. to midnight at the Pilgrim Tennis Club in Kingston.

Tickets, $25 per couple are available from Karen Corcoran at 383-6738 and Donna McGee at 383-9114.

Best Wishes

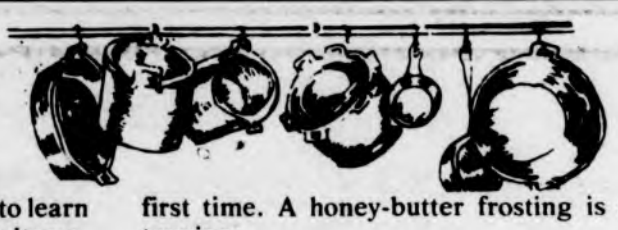
from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham



I've been reading again and am impressed to learn that there are 10,000 different supermarket items, almost sixty per cent of which are processed or convenience foods. Many, in these times of high production costs are expensive, but made with the cheapest, high-starch, high-fat ingredients. Lucky is the family where mother detours around the supermarket aisles, to bypass sugary cereals, spongy breads and syrupy tonics. Sally Cochrane serves her family natural foods and these are the cupcakes six-year-old Joy loved for her birthday party. A fresh strawberry on top of each frosted cake made them especially appealing to her party guests. This recipe makes 30 and they are also good at breakfast, unfrosted, of course.

WHOLEWHEAT CUPCAKES

4 c. whole wheat pastry flour
2 c. instant milk powder
6 tsp. baking powder
1 c. butter
2 c. honey
3 eggs
1/2 c. milk
3 tsp. vanilla

Mix flour, milk powder and baking powder in bowl. Use an electric beater to mix butter and honey. Then mix in eggs, milk and vanilla in another bowl, adding to dry ingredients with as little blending as possible. Bake at 300 degrees for approximately 30 min. Sally says her oven heat isn't too dependable, so it might be best to check when you make these the first time. A honey-butter frosting is an excellent topping.

A rainy Sunday afternoon is good for little else then catching up on one's reading and so, instead of planting my petunias, I leafed through a copy of "The Gourmet's Almanac." Found a great article on how to save on the grocery bill — eat flowers! In China, flowers are used to scent the higher grades of tea by adding 40 lbs. of orange blossoms to every hundred pounds of tea. In Japan, dahlia bulbs are peeled, diced and fried in oil for 25 minutes and eaten as vegetables. Pralines are made of mimosa on the French Riviera and in Lyons, fritters are made of acacia blossoms. Dipped in powdered sugar, sprinkled with kirsch, then in fritter batter and fried, what do you suppose our husbands would think when served this for the evening meal? Just about now, when dandelions are flourishing, people have been known to enjoy their boiled, buttered greens.

For those of us who like to read, we sometimes get desperate enough to read match book covers, or cereal box labels. Nothing escapes that bears the written word. Sometimes you can even pick up some good recipes by scanning food packages. You know they're good, for it's the firm's way of promoting their product. Everywhere you go, this Cool Whip dessert is being served, probably because it's low-calorie, whips up in seconds and can be varied in so many ways.

EIGHT-MINUTE LIGHT 'N FRUITY PIE

1 pkg. 3 oz. Jello, any flavor
2/3 c. boiling water
2 c. ice cubes
3 1/2 c. or 8 oz. container Cool Whip Whipped Topping thawed
Fruit [optional]
8 or 9" graham cracker crumb crust

Completely dissolve gelatin in boiling water, stirring about 3 min. Add ice cubes and stir constantly until gelatin is thickened, about 2 to 3 min. Remove any unmelted ice. Using wire whip, blend in whipped topping; then whip until smooth. Fold in fruit. Chill, if necessary, until mixture will mound. Spoon into pie crust. Chill 3 hours.

Angler's Corner

By Lindy Blaisdell

As the ocean warms towards swimming temperatures, fish and fishing techniques change. The flounder move out as fluke move in. Cod, seeking deeper cooler water, are replaced with stripers. Blues are usually right behind the mackerel, pogies and sperling. Tautog become scarce and smelt are not legal for another month. Rock perch are everywhere you drop bait.

During this in-between season let's take a fresh water break. Trout fishing should be peaking right now. Bass are spawning and will strike at almost any lure dragged across their nest.

Let's discuss summertime trout fishing this week

Starting about the first of May and continuing all summer, chumming is a deadly means of catching fish. To start, select a pond, then pick a spot. Choosing the right spot is important. Good chumming areas coincide with good bank fishing areas. If you have a pond chart seek out drop-offs, underwater coves, holes or submerged structures.

Locating drop-offs in a strange pond is easy. The landscape above the waterline is usually opposite out in the pond or lake. Hillsides and cliffs indicate sloping bottoms with coves and holes. Rocky, sandy shorelines continue under water. Flat land above usually gives way to shallow surroundings. A good depth sounder would be invaluable and eliminate a lot of guess work.

Baits are numerous. The best is grass shrimp, although expensive they work on both trout and smallmouth bass. Corn comes in second with everything else third. Boat position is also important. Double anchor bow and stern, quartering broadside into the wind. If using shrimp a chum can is a must. The first handful should go directly beneath the boat all the way to the bottom. These shrimp will gradually work their way to the surface. That's when the fun begins.

Start with one shrimp baited rod down deep, have another ready for surface action. I prefer fly rods using sinking line on my deep rod and floating line to roll cast out behind the boat. The shrimp surface for two reasons: one of natural instinct, the other to get away from the trout in hot pursuit. Once the shrimp are out behind the boat roll cast a baited hook intoi the chum slick. Shrimp are delicate. Be careful not to snap them off. Sometimes a shrimp imitation fly or nymph will work but not as well as the real thing.

Continue to chum deep also broadcast a few shrimp out into the chum slick. Once the trout are in the area, browns will work over your deep offerings while rainbows pluck off the surface baits. Pan fish will steal a lot of your bait. That's a good sign for when they disappear, chances are a good trout or smallmouth bass are in the area.

Chumming corn is the same except there is no surface action. Use two deep rods. Sometimes trout suspend and can be found 15 feet down in 30 feet of water. This happened once at Hamblin Pond. I caught trout after trout while others around me fishing on bottom caught nothing. Shallow waters usually give up smaller fish. Lunkers lie deep, sometimes in 60 to 80 feet of water.

Marshmallows (small ones) work especially well at night. Chum with corn but use a white marshmallow for bait. For deep water baits go with shrimp or corn but use a chub or crawfish on one line for bait.

Sullivan gym gambling June 7

By Rob Tis

Get out the cards, dice, poker chips and start practicing because Saturday, June 7 at CHS Sophs are sponsoring a Las Vegas Night from 6-11 p.m. in the Sullivan Gymnasium.

This event is open to absolutely everyone — rumor has it that Jimmy the Greek and a few other top oddsmen from Vegas will be flying in to try their luck and win some of the 30 prizes worth over $ 500 donated by local merchants.

The entrance fee will be a mere $2, which will entitle you to some artifical money with which to gamble. The player with the most amount of money at the end of the evening will choose one of the 30 prizes including: free dinners at The Red Lion Inn, Hugo's, a $100 mirror from the Corner Lighthouse, a $50 watch from King's Jewelers and 26 more prizes all of which will be given away.

This is no small-time operation. Sophs have gotten a hold of six poker tables and eight black tables, three roulette games, craps and a few other surprises.

For more information call J.T. Price at 383-1790 or see the many signs around town, especially the work of art in the window of Dependable Cleaners.

In October, 1978 Feola was suspended by his father for five days for using faulty judgment involving a car chase by Scituate police. In July 1979 Feola, Jr. was charged with drunken driving and driving dangerously and was suspended from the force for five days without pay by Cohasset selectmen. In November 1979 Feola, Jr. was ordered to be supervised in a court-ordered alcoholic rehabilitation program, after having crashed into a utility pole in a one-car accident on Atlantic Avenue.

Goodbye, goodbye class of '80

Cohasset High School graduation exercises is one of the best shows taking place under the big top at the South Shore Music Circus any year. And nobody ever complains about the traffic or the noise.

Sunday afternoon Cohasset sent 144 moonshots into the world — and where they land, nobody will know for awhile. We only know they took our hearts, our wishes and our dreams along with them on their private spaceships. They made us smile alot during commencement exercises. They were fresh, fun, esoteric and even as we gave them our final last-minute advice on our world and what we expected them to accomplish when they reach their destinies, they lectured us back.

We'll receive messages from them here and there. Not long ones, mostly they'll come on college computer print-outs, some will include pictures. Their parents will call the Mariner and ask us how we got the picture and the information and if they can have the picture . . . having heard nothing from young Ed or Sue in many a month.

Rev. John Benbow started off the exercises with the invocation, naming graduation as the celebration of a milestone in life.

Class President Ronald White defined the many individual milestones his classmates had achieved during their years at CHS. "We really are a very, very special class — innovative, musical, athletic . . . and obnoxious."

White said the first time any class ever earned money on a yearbook was this year, when it was dedicated to parents — and got applause.

Michele Fahey, salutatorian, cautioned CHS not to shift its emphasis away from music. "Music must not be regarded superficially," she said, saying it required discipline, creativity and coordination.

'A Cohasset high'

By Anne Marie Young
CHS Senior Alternative School

Over the past two months with the help of Chip Figueiredo's drug survey, 35 Cohasset High School students (drug users and/or former drug users) were interviewed on the topic of drugs.

Chip, now a graduate, (June 1, 1980), did a survey report on 28 drug users at CHS about the same time I was gathering facts for my article.

The following facts were gathered from Chip's survey. Twenty-two people out of 28 people smoke pot out of which 15 are cronic users and 7 are moderate.

Seventeen admitted having used other drugs such as the list mentioned: speed, cocaine, microdot, opium, ludes, secondal, grain alcohol, hash, angel dust, codiene, mushrooms, percodan and mescaline.

In answering the question as to why they took

C.S. backs firing of Police Officer Smith

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Selectmen learned late last week Civil Service upheld the town's decision to fire suspended Police Officer Douglas Smith, a three-year veteran of the Cohasset Police Department, from the force.

In a phone interview Monday, Alexander Matulewicz, Smith's attorney, said as a result of his having obtained new information on the matter, the town could expect further developments regarding Smith's discharge the latter part of this week.

Matulewicz said a Civil Service fact-finder submitted a report to Civil Service recommending that Smith be suspended for two years, and reinstated on the Cohasset force, in light of Smith's good participation in a stress program conducted by the Boston Police Department.

Selectmen discharged Smith March, 1978 for having allegedly been involved in two assault and battery cases (Christmas 1977 and February 1978) during off-duty hours, and for having allegedly lied to his superior officers regarding his whereabouts while on duty.

In Fall, 1979, Superior Court dismissed the assault and battery charges for lack of prosecution on the part of the Cohasset Police Department. Lieut. Charles Stockbridge said the trial had been postponed several times in succession. On the final trial date, the District Attorney's office neglected to notify the Cohasset Police Department and ultimate-

Cohasset reflects national slump

By Bernie Quigley

The national slump in auto sales that has brought Chrysler Corporation close to its knees and is skating the timbers at Ford and General Motors has hit home here on the South Shore.

Cohasset Motors, the town's oldest car dealer closed its doors last week after 25 years of service to the community. The mood was bleak as IBM Executive typewriters, leather-bound chairs and most pieces of office and repair equipment were auctioned off at a public sale last Thursday, leaving an empty showroom echoing better days behind.

There was official silence from Howard Schramm, owner of the Ford dealership on Rte. 3A, but word at the auction was that the property is up for sale.

It is highly unlikely that auto dealers will be among the viewers and potential buyers of the property, as the auto business is generally off throughout the area. Schramm last month reported the high cost of financing his inventory, citing a figure between $12,000 and $15,000 a month, as a major factor foredooming his dealership.

Taxes are up and interest rates have increased almost three-fold in the last few years. The cost of heating a large showroom with its massive work areas has doubled. And whether cars are selling or not, a full line of new cars must make their appearance in the showroom.

That full inventory is bought on credit, and according to Eric Pearson of Highway Motor Sales, the resulting overhead for the dealer is up 100 per cent. When sales are down 40 or 50 per cent, it is hard for any dealer to make ends meet.

"We are now paying the price for the irresponsibility of Congress for the last 20 years," said Person, recalling the days when credit cards were sent in mass mailings to every house on the block, and pay-as-you-go America went first and paid later (and sometimes didn't pay). From this nebulous world of

Silent auction

Ed Mulvey and Jane Trettis (brother and sister) won three of the seven prizes in the silent auction conducted by the Cohasset Rotary Club at Pilgrim Cooperative Bank. Ed, president of the bank, was so embarrassed about it that he returned the serape to the Rotary Club but presumably kept the picture.

Jane Trettis and Janet Figueriredo both won a quilt, Kathy Figeriredo a pillow. Jean Lennon won the afghan and Susan Grant, the pillowcases.

Stoners sentenced

Hingham District Court Judge George A. Sullivan last week ordered charges against eight Hull teenagers of assault and battery and throwing a missle at CHS bus to be continued without finding.

Charges of assault and battery with a dangerous weapon were dismissed. He also ordered that restitution, totaling $900 be paid. Five CHS cheerleaders aboard the bus, were cut by broken window glass, but none were seriously injured.

National registry

Last week Candy Jenkins of the National Registry for the Massachusetts Historical Commission climbed to the top of Beacon Rock in the rain, and ventured to the belfry of the First Parish clock . . . with historical commission members and former members Jan Daggett, David Wadsworth (town archivist), Ed Young and Novel Ripley, commission chairman.

Ms. Jenkins will pass or reject the town's application for National Registry listing, but a pass is expected, Ripley said.

He also stressed that any listing acquired would not permit the federal government to encroach upon any land or property owners in any way (you could still paint your house purple or orange). A listing would attract tourists, and there is always the possibility of attracting federal funds.

While in Cohasset Ms. Jenkins toured North Main Street (Gorum Bates house across from the Little League field), down North Main to the Common, the Common, downtown Cohasset, Elm Street, up Summer Street and then left on South Main Street to the Karcher's victorian house. She also visited Government Island and Minot Light. All these areas are eligible for possible inclusion on the listing.

Ripley said it would be a year before nominations were made.

While visiting, Ms. Jenkins also showed interet in the Massa Mansion on Jerusalem Road, the Belamire home on Harmony Point, and the Gropius house, the first house built by Gropius in America (North side of Sandy Beacn — a cubic structure).

Moped rules

Operators of mopeds must be at least 16 years old and must have a valid driver's license or learner's permit. To be operated, mopeds must have a sticker issued by the Registry, for a fee of $3, fixed to the rear fender.

Traffic laws for motor vehicles apply to the moped operator, including the hand signal laws. Mopeds may be driven on all public ways except on limited access highways. They may be driven on bicycle lanes adjacent to the street, but must not be driven on off-street recreational bicycle paths.

Registrar McLaughlin cited a recently released study done by the Highway Safety Research Center at the University of North Carolina, which predicts that by 1984 some 1,200 moped drivers will be killed each year.

Cohasset march

For many Cohasset businesses, the red, white and blue March of Dimes coin cannister was a fixture next to their cash register. All those nickels, dimes and quarters added up to $131.00 for the March of Dimes. The money will fund March of Dimes programs in birth defects research and prevention.

Thomas Hernan, Deputy Chief of the Cohasset Fire Department, who coordinated the effort. "In spite of all that, we were still able to collect a record breaking amount."

The cannisters were distributed by the firefighters during January, March of Dimes month.

Three out-of-towners finalists for police chief slot

Three Massachusetts men have been selected as final candidates for Cohasset Police Chief, but none of them are from the Cohasset Police Department, and that decision has caused not a little upset among at least some men on the Cohasset force.

In a letter to selectmen last week, Rev. John Benbow, chairman of the police chief selection committee, said after reviewing the applications of 120 candidates and holding nine interviews (two of those interviews were held with Cohasset Police Department members) the following three individuals were unaminously selected by the committee for second interviews:

Sgt. John A. DeBassio, 49, a member of the Brockton Police Department. DeBassio is a U.S. Navy veteran and has seen submarine service.

Chief Edward A. Haraden, 52, a former State Police Trooper, presently chief of the Wenham Police Department, and Captain Stanley Stankiewicz, 50, of the Pittsfield Police Department, a former sergeant in the Army/Air Force.

Selectmen have not yet released the resumes of any of the candidates to the press. Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark said Monday the resumes would not be released until town counsel's advice on the matter had been received.

The three individuals who qualified for second interviews have been informed they are candidates-in-the-running for the job, but as of early this week no interviews had been scheduled.

Family violence—its climate and solutions

[The following is the first of a two-part series written by staffer Karin Bartow]

Family violence — child abuse and neglect, spouse abuse, elderly abuse — is the best hidden problem of our society. It is understood to be a pervasive situation in homes in every socio-economic grouping across the country. Cohasset is no exception. It is everybody's problem.

Richard Gelles, a sociologist and co-author of a recent book on the subject, writes in Behind Closed Doors, "The family is society's pre-eminent violent institution." In a nation-wide social survey, which he spoke about last month at a "Child Abuse and Neglect" conference sponsored by the Coastline Council for Children, Gelles turned up figures he was embarrassed to talk about; figures that were so high they were triple-checked for accuracy.

A few important notes of background are worth mentioning before re-telling his findings. Gelles and his co-researchers did not survey homes where there were children under the age of three (one of the two most vulnerable age groups for abuse; the other is 13 and older). They did not question single parent homes (another high risk category). They talked to people about specific phenomenon, e.g. how did they deal with conflicts? They believe this survey was honest; the 2,143 American families who answered questions had no reason to lie about their answers since so many must be labeled "abuse" or "neglect," an illegal act in 50 states.

Here are some of the statistical highlights: "In Atlanta, 31% of homicides are the result of domestic quarrels; this is typical of the U.S. as a whole . . . Police answer more calls involving family conflicts than all calls for criminal incidents combined . . . More police die answering family disturbance calls than die answering any other single type of call . . . If you are married, the chances are about one in three that your husband or wife will hit you."

Among the conflicts between spouses that most often lead to violence, arguments over children, specifically, how to discipline children, is the one that leads to physical blows. Violence that involves children is usually found in a setting which includes violence between spouses.

"Two-thirds of the parents surveyed said they'd spanked or slapped their chidren six times a year . . .In 1975, out of a total population of 46 million children, 3 to 4 million were kicked, bitten or punched by a parent once while growing up; 1 to 2 million children were abused in the same manner three times a year."

It gets worse when Gelles multiplies out his figures for a national rate. "One out of every five children in this country is abused; four million are physically abused each year; eight million are emotionally abused or neglected a year; and .5 million are sexually abused."

The statistics in Behind Closed Doors are not only higher than all previous estimates, but are considered conservative, as well as valid.

FAMILY VIOLENCE

Reverend John Benbow, Minister of the Second Congregational Church, serves on the Child Abuse and Neglect Committee which organized the recent conference. He is involved in this troubling problem professionally, as a minister, and as a concerned member of the human community. Two Sundays ago, Mother's Day, he delivered a sermon on Family Violence.

His purpose was, and is, to bring the subject out into the open so that people will be more understanding of the victims of violence and those who are violent. Solutions aren't easy, however he suggests that the first thing to do "is stop being so horrified by the reality of family violence . . . we must not perpetuate the secrecy and cover-ups which surround it."

"Compassion for all victims," is also needed, Benbow believes. "If family violence passes on from generation to generation, the perpetrators are also victims.

Just what is child abuse and neglect and what causes it? What we do know about it, say Gelles, is comparable to what we knew about mental illness in 1945. Most of what is known is based on the study of kids who are known as abused." Public bias on how the neglected child is perceived, Gelles warns, should cause us "to be very suspicious of what people say about child abuse based on how they know it."

The "battered child syndrome," identified in 1962 as a serious, non-accidental physical injury to a child, now generally includes any non-accidental injury or pattern/series of injuries unsually encompassing one or more of these elements: non-accidental physical injury (beatings, burns, bites), neglect (failure to provide a child with the basic necessities of life: food, clothing, shelter, medical care), sexual molestations, and emotional abuse (excessive, aggressive or unreasonable parental behavior).

There is no one factor that accounts for child abuse and neglect, however Gelles feels our societal values set parents up for violence in two ways. "Our culture does two things to parents: it gives them the legitimate right to hit by approving corporal punishment and tolerating violence; and it sends parents out with the same goal — you have to be great — but not always with the same means."

We are not all equipped to be kind, supportive, perfect parents., Our training and education, financial and social backgrounds are all different. It becomes frustrating for parents without the proper resources to do a good job. Add to the frustration, the acceptance of hitting, and the climate for violence exists.

Beond this premise, there are other risk factors that heighten the possibility of violence. Gelles found "an oppressive link between husband-wife abuse and parent-child abuse." There is a relationship between growing up in an abusive household and abusive parents, however that fact is not deterministic. (About one in four follow that economics past, the future has suddenly come upon us — at 20 per cent prime rate.

If someone can get a loan, and if he can afford the high rates and the extended payments, there is still the main stumbling block: the high price of the automobile. And that high price keeps people from buying, Person said. With inflation creeping into every small item in the supermarket and the department store, a big ticket item — a house or a new car — gets pushed further into the future.

Sales are up 15 to 20 per cent from last year on fuel efficient Datsons, according to Bob Garrino, General Manager of Autohaus, but the low sticker price on foreign imports is not what it used to be. Gone are the days when you could buy a Volkswagon bug for under $2,000. Take, for example, the base-price of a 1980 VW Rabbit with a money-saving diesel engine and no extras: $6,220.

Pearson blames the high cost of automobiles partly on the cost of safety devices and emission controls of the Environmental Protection Agency. Besides adding $500 to $600 to the sticker price, he said the cost comes back again at repair time. An emission controlled car requires such highly-trained personnel to tune and repair it, and demands such sophisticated equipment, that it can double to triple the cost of repairs.

There are two bright spots on the sales side. Garrino of Autohaus reports a stable market on BMWs with price tags above $20,000. If that doesn't suit your taste you might just prefer a second-hand car, and sales there are still good, compared to new cars.

But good is not great. "I had the roughest winter in any year of my life," says Keo A. Kiriaskos of Keo's Cushing Auto Sales.

If sales on new cars are down 50 per cent, then trade-ins are also turned in at roughly the same ratio. So used cars are scarce to the retailer, and prices are subsequently higher. "The paranoia over gas," has also increased demand and raised prices on older four and six-cylinder models, and lowered the prices on eight cylinders, said Kiriakos. He said if the buyer measures the sale adroitly, the greater savings in repairs and initial buying price — balanced against the price of gas — may come in an eight cylinder used car in good repair.

Balancing against the price of gas: there's the gamble. When the numbers spin through their little window, the gas pump seems to buzz only to its own tune. And with every fillup, the more it sounds like a hurdy-gurdy.

300 toured the dollhouses

To the Editor:

Thanks to your generous support, the Dollhouse Tour was a resounding success. Approximately 300 people came to view the exhibit and to share in the fun world of miniatures. Everyone was delighted with the exhibits and the refreshments.

We had two major objectives for the Dollhouse Tour: the first was to raise money for the Community Center. Second, and equally important, was to encourage people to come into the Center to see the metamorphosis that is underway. We hope to expand our programs, offer a greater variety of topics, and ideally, involve a larger segment of the population in Community Center activities. Your publicity and review were beautiful invitations to the town to enjoy the Center. Thank you so much for your help!!

Somewhere to go, something to do

To the Editor:

Many folks in Cohasset, merchants and homeowners, have been complaining about vandalism, robberies and just plain undisciplined conduct. The police have done their best, lately, but they can do just so much.

Teenagers in Cohasset need a place to go evenings . . .with music, some exciting food, games to play, dance. Cohasset has none for teenagers. About time we did something for them. Perhaps the Community Center could provide the space but interested volunteers have the key. I can't believe there is not a grant available for this kind of activity, state or federal.

Also the kids need jobs, mowing lawns, cleaning house, painting, babysitting; why can't there be a job bank for these young people? (ED. NOTE: There is, Larry.Teens who want to work should call John Whorley, recreation director.)

All of us have done a lot for our town. But now that summer is here let's provide the kids with a place to go and something to do.

Have your egg with a pepsi...advice on ticks

Every year the CHS graduating class tries to be original in its yearbook dedication. And this year the class of '80 certainly picked some deserving, original people: Mom and Dad. Nicely written, too.

. . . At Senior Class Night we especially enjoyed Karl Gandeborn's comments (he's the Swedish foreign exchange student) when he said: "I didn't really choose to come to Cohasset — 98 per cent of the Swedish students wanted to go to California, and I was one of them. But so far I've had a great time here." He will attend college in Sweden.

. . . That same night, CHS Principal Richard Streeter, tongue n check, said he noticed that Susan Buckley's yearbook cover drawing (a tree) "Had roots, some deadwood, a lot of bark and no fruit. I can tell what the senior class will be like." He added he hoped after June 1 seniors would stop showing up in the Mariner police report.

. . . Very nice tribute . . . selectmen last week accepted with thanks a flag donated to them by Narbert Reardon, whose son was killed in Vietnam.

. . . A newly-elected selectwoman from a neighboring town told us a humorous story this week. The group who elected her called her back for a scolding over the weenend. They wondered why she hadn't yet accomplished the changes she campaigned over.

"I've been in office for 10 days . . . do you think you can give me a little more time?" she asked.

. . . June is the month of endings and beginnings. Summer will probably be as short this year as it was last. We will no sooner get over our sun poisoning and it will be July, August . . .back to school, college, jobs and more energy crisis (the cold kind).

Some of us will move into town, others will move out. A new police chief and a new school superintendent will be on board. We will hold open houses.

We will elect a new president in November. And sometime this year we pray the American hostages in Iran will be returned. Noel Ripley's still ringing the First Parish bells for them everyday at noon. Bet he would appreciate some help.

. . .Tick season is back. Contrary to popular belief, they don't have to be burned off. You can just pull them off and throw them back into the grass. They don't inbed their heads in anything. If you feel angry enough to kill them, fire is probably the only way they can die. If you flush them down the sink they just crawl back up.

. . . Maybe a nutrition course is needed for Cohasset parents more than students! We recently observed a Cohasset mother of three order "One egg over lightly, medium done toast, home fries and a diet pepsi!"

And . . . after we observed that it could be done, that the waitress didn't challenge the order, we had the very same!

Spring St.—original source of town's water supply

By Peter Barnicle

Looking back

Spring Street, to my knowledge, has never been mentioned for recognition in the historical annals of Cohasset.

It starts on South Main St., opposite the Pratt Memorial Library, and winds its erratic semi-circular way for about a half mile to rejoin South Main at Joe Marks' Sunoco Station.

Today's traffic takes off from the village and moves (I was tempted to say speeds) straight down South Main St. towards Scituate. Back in the 17th and 18th centuries Cohasseters took the "Old Road to Scituate." A detour perhaps, but a helluva lot better than trying to get through Jacob's Meadow marsh.

Also our forefathers found they could get up through the pastures and woodlands to the farms in Beechwood by cutting a cartway which is now known as Pond St.

Pond St. derived its name from Lily Pond. And Spring St., originally Spring Lane, was obviously named because of a spring.

That bubbling cold spring was the original source of drinking water in Cohasset. It was located a couple of hundred feet north of the railroad crossing and is buried deep under the now abandoned railroad right-of-way.

Back in the latter part of the 17th century John Jacobs built a home on the south side of what is now known as Spring St. It was replaced by a dwelling in 1760 which still occupies the land.

In 1672 Jacobs undertook the task of building a bridge and corduory road along the front of his property to enable those in the village to send supplies to Beechwood via Pond St. and to get to Scituate.

It wasn't until the early 19th century that a way was found, and money provided, to build the "new" road eliminating the winding detour.

Beyond the railroad crossing Spring Street takes a sharp left around an outcropping once known as Taylor's Rock. That was at one time (way back when) the location of the South School. Many buildings in town have been moved from one place to another, but that one just vanished.

On the west side of the street is the house built by Thomas Pratt in 1765. Parts of the original stone wall still mark the boundaries of the property and extend up Pond Street. Over the years the level of the Pond Street roadway has been built up so that now the top of the wall is even with the payment.

The street re-crosses the railroad right of way just after Pond Street. The three story, mansard-roofed building there, now an apartment house, was once "The Cohasset House" and in the late 19th century Jason's Hotel.

Adjacent to it is a dwelling which was Statson's store. The building was moved to its present location from Black Horse Lane many years ago.

Then at "Jim Pratt's Corner" Spring Street rejoins South Main. Pratt had a home where St. Anthony's Church now stands. Diagonally across is the dwelling believed built by Caleb Nichols, a master mariner, early in the 19th century.

Spring Street may not be a tourist attraction, but it has plenty of history.

State rep candidates' night to be in Hull

On Thursday, June 12 at 8 p.m. at the Worrick Mansion in Hull, the Democratic Town Committees of Cohasset, Hingham, and Hull will sponsor a candidate's night for those who are running in the Democratic Primary for State Representative for the Third Plymouth County seat (Cohasset, Hingham and Hull).

Candidates who will be present are Ted Ford of Cohasset, Edward Demko and Rick Douherty of Hingham, and John Conwell of Hull.

All local Democrats are urged to take the opportunity to hear the candidate's positions on local issues and ask questions of their own.

Coffee and refreshments will be served.

Cartloads of books missing from CHS in '79-80

Caroline Wampole

It must be incredibly encouraging for English teachers to see such an interest in library reading material, but librarians at Cohasset schools who are missing cartloads of books do not share in the enthusiasm. Since September of the 1979-80 year, books (including reference material) have been taken from the Osgood, Deer Hill and CHS libraries' shelves — some probably never to be seen again. Many of these books have not been signed out — because of laziness or purposeful theft — and there is really no way to get these "stolen" books returned except by urging parents and teachers to keep a sharp lookout for stray library material which may have been illegally obtained.

It is not only stolen books that have created this problem. Many books which were legally signed out have been missing since September. For students who haven't returned these books, their report cards are being withheld, but apparently this practice has not bothered many students; 18 report cards from the first semester are still in library files. Even though strong warnings are issued to those people who do not return books, librarians cannot possible keep up with the mass exodus of books from the libraries, and therefore the Cohasset schools will have to add a few more dollars to their ever-increasing budget.

For those of you out there who are stifling laughter at the seemingly trivial matter of stolen library books, think for a minute. Books, even paperbacks, are not cheap, and every book stolen has to be replaced, probably for a higher price that was first paid. Some books, such as reference material (encyclopedias, atlases, almanacs, and other expensive and valuable works) cannot be easily replaced and the waiting period is frustrating and inconvenient to students who need to find sources. Most important, though, the people who steal books from the library usually have no NEED for the books or else only temporary need, and then the book is thrown aside, forgotten, creating a waste of paper and literature that would bring tears to the eyes of conservationists and librarians.

So please, you literary fanatics out there — return those precious books to the desperate shelves of Cohasset libraries!

Vandalism under the microscope

By Philip Dormitzer

February 23 a group of students broke into a teachers' room, entering the building through a skylight. When teachers returned in the morning they found that the room had been ransacked. The contents of the refrigerator and drawers had been strewn on the floor.

The vandals smashed a chair and left two empty six-packs behind. The most costly of the damage was the destruction of a typewriter. The keyboard was hopelessly bent out of shape, and the casing had been ripped away.

The destruction of the typewriter alone cost the school $600.

Every year, a large part of the school budget that could be spent on the students must be used to pay for the results of vandalism. In one year approximately $5,000 was set aside to pay for repairs, replacing damaged property and other expenses associated with vandalism.

The school's business manager, Mr. Raftery, breaks down vandalism into three main categories: mischievous, malicious, and criminal vandalism. Although the example given constitutes malicious vandalism (pre-planned damage to school property), most damage is the result of mischievous vandalism done by students who usually do not realize the cost of their actions.

One of the most common types of minor vandalism is the destruction of ceiling tiles, which cost $2.72 a piece to replace. This figure does not seem excessively high. However, replacing two tiles costs as much as three paperback books for the library. Because of the large number of tiles destroyed each year, hundreds of dollars must be spent to keep up with the damage. Another example of deceptively costly vandalism is the breaking of thermostats, which cost $75 each to replace.

Three of the areas with the largest amount of damage due to abuse are the upper gym lobby, the cafeteria entrance, and the west wing corridors. Much of the damage occurs during lunch periods and after school hours. Although there is little problem from elementary school students, the elementary schools' exteriors are often damaged on weekends.

However, it is unfair to blame all of the damage done to the exteriors of Cohasset's schools on the students.

It is obvious that vandalism is a problem. However, its causes are not clear. Naturally, a large part of the vandalism is caused by horsing around thatis carried a step too far.

One of the more subtle reasons, according to the assistant principal, Mr. DiGiralomo, is often frustration with school work that is vented on

CHS librarian offers 'grace' period

Dear Reader (and Nonreader):

Promoting reading and the love of reading and helping to satisfy intellectual curiosity and the desire to learn are aspects of the job as librarian that are satisfying, rewarding, stimulating and pleasurable. To hound patrons about the return of books is not pleasurable but necessary. This letter, a hounding, is addressed to those of you who have or had have contact with the Cohasset Public School System, at any of the schools.

Please look through your books and libraries at home and see if you can find any books with the school stamp upon them. We are missing books at all three schools, many of them with the cards still in them and several that are reference (non-circulating). If you should find books belonging to any of the schools, please return them as soon as possible.

When books are returned, there will be no questions asked and no accusations. There will be a period of "grace" from now until June 16th. This grace period is also extended to students who have checked out books that are overdue.

To replace these books will be very expensive and in some cases impossible. As books become more and more expensive, a library becomes more valuable to the public it serves. Please help us maintain the value of our collection and cooperate in this search. Thank you.

☐Congratulations to Mary McGinnis who recently received a Bachelor of Arts degree from Fairfield University in Connecticut.

☐Navy Photographer's Mate Airman Robert F. Sullivan, son of Jack Sullivan of 708 Jerusalem Road, and Marie Sullivan of Abington, has returned from a deployment to the Mediterranean Sea and Indian Ocean. He is presently a crew member aboard the aircraft carrier USS Nimitz homeported in Norfolk, Virginia.

☐Robert Moran, recently appointed director of personnel for Codman & Schurtleff, Inc., a division of Johnson & Johnson, in Randolph, will soon be residing in Cohasset with his daughter Jennifer and his wife, Diana.

Mrs. Moran was an art history teacher in the New Jersey community college system.

☐Eli Manchester, Jr. of Nichols Road, was presented a Dean Junior College Alumni Distinguished Service Award at a recent Dean alumni reunion luncheon. A graduate of Cornell University, Manchester holds a master's degree from Columbia University. He joined Boston Insulated Wire and Cable Company in 1963, was made vice president of manufacturing in 1966, vice president and general manager in 1968 and was elected president in 1972.

From Saratoga Springs and Skidmore College we learned that Susan Emmons of Black Pond Road received a B.S. in business — it's (business) a degree trend more and more women are catching on to! Congratulations, Susan.

End of school and graduation is "good news" time, however, this week a couple of "good deeds" deserve top billing:

What do you do when you're nine years old and you've forgotten to bring your lunch to school for the field trip to Cohasset Central Cemetery? Well, if you're lucky, like Alison Crehan was, you'll find Police Patrolman Joe Kealey outside the Osgood School.

Patrolman Kealey, who faithfully and cheerfully crosses students at Ripley Road twice a day, responded quickly to Alison's tears. He escorted her home, waited for mom to quickly trow a "brown bagger" together, and drove her back to school! What a friend!

☐While we've all been preening our yards and bodies for outdoor weather, a hard-working group of volunteers have been readying the Swim Center pool for summer quenching and pleasure.

Ham Tewksbury, in charge of pool maintenance, wrote well deserved thanks to Fire Chief Charles Piepenbrink (for his ready willingness to allow use of fire pumping equipment) and to Fireman Eddie Barrow, for his enthusiasm, and a day of hard work:

"Thanks very much for everything — the use of the equipment, your know how, your good nature, your direction, your cooperation and most of all your enthusiasm and willingness to do the job."

☐Diplomas have been rolling off the presses like they used to drive cars off the line in Detroit. Grads return home from colleges throughout New England and the country, and locally they consider the coming departure day for further school, college and jobs.

To all of them — sons, daughters, moms, dads, cousins, friends, third and sixth graders, high schoolers, preschoolers — applause, applause!

☐Maria and Patrick Plante have reason to be proud. Their son, Paul, who just graduated from CHS, has received a full, four year Army ROTC scholarship to Tufts University, College of Engineering. Paul will take his military duty at M.I.T. and upon graduation from Tufts, will join the Army as a second lieutenant for a four year hitch.

☐Deborah Streeter, daughter of Richard and Priscilla Streeter, graduated from Boston College School of Nursing on May 19, as a registered nurse, receiving a bachelor of science degree. She begins work as a staff nurse at the Deaconess Hospital in August and is taking a few brush-up courses in the meantime to prepare for the State Boards.

Her older sister, Nancy, works for an insurance firm in Newton.

(Dad is principal of Cohasset High School and mon is a public health nurse in Hingham.)

☐Pat and Paul Mullaney watched the fourth of their six graduate on Sunday from Emerson College. Nancy, 22, received a bachelor of science degree in communication disorders; she plans to attend graduate school at Columbia University, New York.

The Mullaney family also includes these noteworthy young people: Eileen, 24, is a registered nurse who recently spent two years in Equador with the Peace Corps. She will be crossing the country this summer with the Traveling Nurse Association. Future plans include school next January for nurse practitioner.

Frank, 26, rennovates New York City warehouses into fashionable "lofts" inbetween voice lessons and jobs — he is a professional singer who has traveled all over the U.S.

Maureen, 21, is a Navy Petty Officer who is transferring from Rota, Spain to her new station, Washington, D.C.

"At home" are twins Beverly and Brian, age 15.

(Congratulations to Pat, who successfully passed her driving test on May 23!)

☐The O'Brien's hosted a pre-graduation party for their daughter, Erin, and 55 of her fellow classmates, 25 friends and many members of the family. The seniors enjoyed themselves, the food and the euphoria of graduation day. Family friend and neighbor, Pat Mullaney, surprised everyone with an owl-topped cake that had all the names of the graduating class — 109 of them (after substracting duplications)!

Erin will be attending Springfield College in the fall where she plans to major in health and adaptive physical education.

Goodbye

Chris Williams, valedictorian, reflected on achievement and effort. "People are hired and fired on the basis of performance," he said, adding "The reward lies in the attempt."

"If you have built castles in the air, that is where they should be — now put the foundations under them."

CHS Principal Richard Streeter noted the Class of '80 had produced three National Merit Scholars: Edward Bear, Christopher Williams and David Zobel; and 11 National Merit semi-finalists: John Ayer, Heather Carroll, Gregg Daggert, Peter Drago, Michael Duffy, Michele Fahey, Nils Gjesteby, Bonnie McClay, James McNeill, Alexandra Mullen, Paul Plante.

And Dr. John Maloney, who leaves this week to assume his duties as superintendent of the Sharon Public School system, thanked the graduates for bringing so many honors to CHS.

He cautioned students to take their time in selecting a mate, a change from previous graduation speeches in which he told male graduates to marry "a good cooker and a good looker."

"In a career-orientated society,the permanencyof marriage must be reaffirmed," Maloney said. He added, "Be tolerant of the transgressions of others and have confidence in your ability."

School Committee Chairman Frank England wished the graduates "Good Luck and Godspeed," and then presented diplomas.

ly, the court dismissed the charges.

Lieut. Stockbridge said he protested the non-notification to the District Attorney's officer several times — to no avail. He also asked selectmen to register their displeasure of the handling of the same.

When Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark was asked, Monday, if selectmen had contemplated at any point in time offering Smith a package similar to Police Officer Randolph Feola, Jr., who selectmen voted to reinstate on the force in July after a year's suspension — Clark said at no time did the selectmen consider it as they felt the alleged charges against Smith were more serious than Feola's.

Class of '80 exuded enthusiasm in all aspects of CHS athletics

By Rob Tis

Graduation has taken place. The prom as well as the rest of the seniors' rituals are now over. The class of 1980 has graduated and with their departure marks the departure of an outstanding athletic class.

The Cross Country team raced to an impressive 6-2 record led by five seniors: Scott Benbow, Mike Kearney, Nils Gjesteby, Carl Gandaborn and Dave (the Antelope) Zobel. The girls team also captured third place carried by seniors Karen Smith and Leslie Carrol.

The football team went 2-7, but had some very skilled players who never failed to give their all. Mike Thornton, Dave Turner, Matt Brown, JayMcNeil and Rich Young fought in the trenches while Joe McCullough and Bob Gunville ran through them. Bill Dutty managed to end up among the leaders in pass catching in the South Shore League and looks like this year's best hope for college ball.

Thanks to the landmark work by some CHS girls, a girls' soccer team was formed. Erin O'Brien, Sandy Dalrymple, Lorraine Carrol and Heidi Chase hustled for this inexperienced team all year and though they didn't always win, these seniors kept everyone's spirits up and set forth a enthusiastic tradition for the team.

The field hockey team also had a tough season, but seniors like Captains Linda Whitlow and Alicia Gurnis, Kristin Canil, Janet England, Heather Fairchild, Linda Curly and Ellen McCarthy made the season exciting.

The boys' soccer team had a disappointing season and with its conclusion marks the departure of probably the best soccer player in the state, Craig Langford, who has won numerous state awards. Other seniors include Ron White, Phil Tye, David Curelli, Pete Drago and Philip Drago. This year's team will be well represented in college ball next season.

The winter sports scene centered around the basketball team, but many high hopes were shattered when they failed to make the states. Tri-captains Mark Goff, Jim McCarthy and Bill Taylor, shot fight through their opponents, but some nail-biting games were lost and the talented team ended up with a 12-8 record.

The Skipper hockey team narrowly missed a state berth by only one point. This team was carried from the start by seniors Doug Dillon, Joe McCullough, Jay McNeil, Doug Yeager, John Ayer, Rich Young and David O'Connell.

The girls basketball team influenced by seniors Ellen McCarthy, Jodi Sandblom, Lorraine Carrol and Jill Rosano had a tough season. They showed their stuff by beating league-leading Duxbury in the last game.

The wrestling team was hurt with injuries or injured with hurts, but managed a good many wins for a young team. Don't be surprised if you see Jack MacLean, Craig Langford, Geoff Thayer and Paul Stockbridge in the college wrestling world.

The gymnastics team managed a 8-3 record with only one senior, Janet England, who played a key part in the success of the team. Look for this team to dominate in the future.

The softball team has definitely been the vortex of attention in the spring season. Who knows, seniors Dave Turner, Jodi Sandblom, Mike Thorton, Gina Froio, Shelly Townsend, Lance Norris and Heath Fairchild might bring the state championship home to Cohasset.

The baseball team had a tough time of it this yaer, but was sparked by some fine ball players, including Bruce Maynard, Phil Drago, Fred Espinosa, John Ayer, Matt Brown and Paul Plant.

Both tennis teams finished in third place in their league and were both pushed along by seniors. The boys will lose their second singles man, Ron White, as well as doubles players Kevin Crough and Pete Drago. The girls will be losing Janet England, Sandy Darymple and Leslie Carroll.

READY FOR THE REAL WORLD - Jodi Sandblom of girls' softball fame. The Class of '81 is going to miss her know-how next spring sports season. Good luck, Jodi! - from your Mariner fans. (Derr photo).

The track teams both had winning records and some fine individual performances. Erin O'Brien competed in every event except the 100; if that's not versitality, nothing is! India Turner won the hurdles in the state tournament as well as placing in the long jump and was voted "most outstanding girl athlete."

Bill Taylor leaped 6' 2", an inch higher than anyone else in the league.

The golf team, yet to reach its end, will most likely win its division with help from Jay McNeil and Tom MacMahon.

"The seniors are a very unique class," class president Ron White stated at graduation. In almost every sport, usually 5 to 10 seniors excelled and led the team. Many of these seniors will continue their sports in college and beyond. Don't be surprised if you're watching any one of these select seniors on national T.V. in a few years!

Rosie joins Playboy

In this age of enlightened women (and men) Rose and Donald Smith are really a twist and a half. Rose is certainly pretty enough to work for Playboy, but it's not what you think. A computer/management expert, whose former employer was Norfolk Conveyor, Rose was recently hired by Playboy, International to work at its new Playboy Hotel/Casino in Atlantic City, New Jersey.

Actually, Rose left town a while ago, leaving Don and the kids, Chase, 8 and Whitney, 5 behind to finish up school, do the packing, pay the electric bill. We ran into Don in Dependable Cleaners where he was chatting with Pat Sargent about the move.

Asked what he will be doing in New Jersey, Don said: "I'll continue to raise my children, which I've done for eight years."

While living in Cohasset he's gotten involved in "a little free lance painting" with Arthur Gordon. He agreed that raising children, exclusively, can get harrying at times," and said when both children are in school in the next year or so "I may become a dealer."

Other activities Don was involved in while in Cohasset was as a parent aid at Osgood School. "I probably was the only male parent aid they ever had at Osgood." He especially enjoyed a recent program put on by the children: "I almost cried at Arbor Day."

Cohasset Niners take six prizes

Last Thursday the Cohasset Golf Club Niners hosted the Hatherly Country Club and Duxbury Yacht Club ladies for a field day. First prize winners were: Eleanor Bailey of Duxbury, Marie Moylan of Hatherly and Grace Tuckerman of Cohasset.

Second place prized were awarded to Jean Replogle and Janet Rhodes of Cohasset, Muriel Desmond and Mary Gallahue of Hatherly.

Third place prizes were awarded to Nancy Larsen and Helen Wollan of Cohasset, Dot Brown of Hatherly and Charlene Heidenrich of Duxbury. And four prizes went to Flo Littlejohn and Connie Sturman of Cohasset, Mary Littleton of Hatherly and Ginny Burnham of Duxbury.

Graduation... ...how sweet it is!

By Lois Martin

We spent the trip to Amherst saying how we couldn't believe four years had passed so quickly. And as we got closer to the University of Massachusetts, we saw groups in other cars who looked like we did — relatives going to commencement, parents, grandparetns, siblings, dressed up nice for the big day.

Frankly I'd thought the event would be too big to enjoy. How can you get 4000 people out of a college personably? But if they didn't do it with the personal touch, they did it with one that was comfortably dignified, exciting and meaningful. Outside the stadium on that magnificent day which we all believed we deserved, were demonstrators with political statements and persuasions. Out of Iran, Seabrook, the mid-East, abortion, you name it, there was an opinion posted about it.

PATCHES

We overlooked them all. We weren't politically inclined. We were there on a different cause, to see someone graduate from his university, the first from our feather group, taking to the air with our applause serving as lift.

I noticed a lot of different tassles on mortarboards. I wasn't sure which color my graduate would wear, but I wanted him to have the best one which ever that was. Inside we discovered from the program he'd have an orange one, the School of Engineering, also we would note, the rowdiest assemblage of graduates in the lot. But we thought whatever they did that day was okay. And the most of what they did was to give themselves a very long standing ovation for their four years of work.

Parents and graduates strained themselves trying to locate one another in the field or on the bleachers. They carried flowers for commencing daughters. Everyone had a camera. They waved, hugged, took pictures, everything the day commanded by way of celebration. And I noticed that a father was as thrilled to spot his son in a far off crowd as the son had been years ago to spot his Dad in the distance. Ages and stages.

The orchestra sent compelling strains of ' Pomp and Circumstance' over the field, filling the arena with a majesty few fields command. People are almost as in awe of scholars as they are of athletes. And those people in colored robes certainly get my respect. In fact they almost make me wonder if I'd like one, if not an important degree of a robe, one of a hood. But I guess not. If it's color I'll get in a robe, it'll probably be the bath variety.

Overhead flew a plane trailing the message: 'Congratulations Rachel, Finally a College Grad.'

This was the 110th commencement there, the 110th batch of accolades to the midnight oil burners, the two-ended candle burners who lived in the isolated kingdom of study and were leaving it at the moment of victory when they finally caught what they were chasing, an education.

Thousands of chairs were lined up on the football field grass. I thought of the people who put those in place and then prayed for good weather. The occasion defied dampening, though, for celebrants. In fact some of the moments made of a mother a mute.

But that too would pass too soon. Gov. Edward King sent his message by way of the Assistant Secretary of Education. She delivered it well but was given a raspberry of sorts to take back to the governor.

I loved the down to earth, perhaps best enduring, kind of educational philosophy which was sprinkled in laudable remarks. Like the one from Mark Twain: ' I never let my schooling interfere with my education.' And from Robert Frost when he referred to college education a 'being able to hang on until you've caught on.'

One student, content with his diploma cover, exited wearing a cap, gown and backpack....'Off to Seabrook,' someone said.

The schools applauded one another, and themselves, with balloons and confetti. They were ready to merge 'discovery and service' as their graduating speaker had said. They were up to anything the world needed. They'd get over it but it was a mutually satisfying and momentary self-deception.

The conclusion to so grand an event was inevitable. And as the new graduates hugged one another, so did parents. We couldn't believe we'd accomplished that, anything so great as seeing one all the way through school. We'd taken a student there in 1976. In 1980 we brought home an engineer. A rose by any other name would have smelled as sweet. And those of us who loaded the car with possessions of a teacher, a nutritionist, a musician, an analytical bio chemist, whatever, we all shared jubilation at the return of one whalloping investment. In most cases the graduates went home with the parents in the old family car. Now and then we saw the new graduate heading home in his own car. It was easy to tell them apart because the young person had the sharp new sports car

☐The girls track team had their end-of-season "break up" dinner Monday night at the Aloha Restaurant in Hingham. Coaches, Tom O'Neil and Ron Emmons, invited Mary O'Brien to join the team, promising her all the gatorade she could drink! (Mary has faithfully provided cool drinks and hot enthusiasm for the girls all season!)

☐William Bell and his brother, David, received a bachelor of arts degree in economics with departmental honors, and a bachelor of arts in political science, respectively, from Haverford College, Pennsylvania.

☐John Phipps of Jerusalem Road was recently elected President of Chloride Pyrotector of Hingham. Phipps is new to Cohasset and the East. He joined Pyrotector (a company in the security systems group of Chloride, Inc. of Tampa, Florida) after five years in Phoenix, Arizona and before that, 25 years in California.

☐Bill and Sherry Becker and their son, Karl, 10, of North Main Street, hosted a 50th wedding anniversary party on Sunday, May 25 for Bill's parents, Ernest and Else Becker of Braintree.

The Becker's were married in Kassel, Germany; they came to Braintree 10 years later and have lived there for 40 years. Many of their life-long friends joined the family for the celebration; Bill's sister and husband, Gladys and Bob Whitney, drove all teh wayout from Wisconsin and Bill's daughter, Kathy Jackson from Baltimore, Maryland, surprised her grandparents!

☐Grethe Jones Fesler, who once portrayed various characters in radio and drama, now creates different roles through her drawings. Her specialty is pastel portraits and they are on display at the Cohasset branch of the Quincy Co-operative Bank (Route 3-A) now through the end of June.

Mrs. Fesler's portraits are something she's always wanted to do. "I chose pastels because they're hardest." (And, therefore, all the more an accomplishment!)

Her work was recently featured in a two-artist exhibition at the Marshfield Town Hall. She is a member of the South Shore Art Center, Scituate Arts Association, North River Art Society and the Duxbury Art Association.

Sparkling on your third finger, left hand, is an engagement ring, perhaps signalling a June wedding in the offing. Now almost everyone knows that here comes a young lady who may not be as sparkling as her diamond by the time she arrives at the altar. The nervous groom may be blissfully unaware of the myriad details his pretty bride has hurdled in the final days before the ceremony, for even a simple home wedding or reception involves much preparation. Heaven-sent are the services of young ladies such as our advertisers, 'Two Ladies and Company' and 'Serendipity' who prepare elegant dishes for moments such as this. Wonderful with fruit and wine is this hors d'oeuvre, one of many Susan Sack and Jan Fossella prepare called

BAKED BRIE

One (1) small round of Brie, or a good-sized wedge, 1/4 stick soft butter that has been mixed with mashed and chopped garlic clove or equal amount of garlic powder or juice. Place in ovenproof dish and smear butter over Brie. Bake slowly in 250 oven about 1/2 hour, or until the Brie has become completely soft inside. Toast 1/3 c. sliced almonds. When Brie is ready for serving, top with almonds. Serve with small cubes of French bread which is covered with the warm Brie.

Until late in the 17th Century, marriages were rarely performed in church. Those who lived far away from a church just lived together until a circuit-riding parson happened by and made it all legal. Church weddings were announced by the ringing of bells in the steeple and everyone within hearing distance gathered for the ceremony. There were no written invitations, the bride didn't wear white and afterward, everyone gathered for a 'frolick.' Dancing and a wedding supper followed, with a menu consisting of such items as cold ham, roast beef, cheese, cake and posset, a hot milk curdled with ale or wine. Just how you want to celebrate the biggest day of your life depends on your lifestyle. If you want your reception to be an occasion--a formal, elaborate affair, a year in advance is none too soon to begin canvassing restaurants, clubs or hotels. A simple, shared get-together with friends and family is more in keeping with those who treasure simplicity, but this, too, doesn't just 'happen.' A buffet featuring a number of casseroles could include a dish such a Joan Bizzozero's

VEAL SCALOPPINE

1-1/2 lbs. veal cutlet, sliced thin
2 T. flour
2 T. butter
1/2 C. sherry or marsala wine
1/2 lb. mushrooms, sliced
2 green peppers, cut in chunks, about 3/4" thick

Cook peppers in a bit of butter and oil in covered frying pan till done. Add mushrooms and cook for just a couple of minutes. Remove from pan. Pound veal to break down fibers. Cut in 2" pieces. Salt and pepper and roll the veal in flour. Brown in butter over fairly high heat about 4 min. a side. Add wine and stir until the veal is coated with the wine. Return the mushrooms and pepper to the pan. Reduce heat to slow and cover for a couple of minutes until the peppers and mushrooms are warmed. Serves 4.

As with all good things, the honeymoon and partying end. Now it's time for you to do the entertaining and an easy dessert such as this, will start you off right. Betty Cohen's dessert serves 12 and is called

ICE CREAM MOLD

1/2 gallon vanilla ice cream
1/3 c. orange juice
1 pt. heavy cream
1 can, 10 oz., macaroons
1/2 c. slivered almonds
2 10 oz. pkgs. frozen strawberries
8 tsp. orange juice

Soften ice cream, whip cream and crumble macaroons. Mix together with the 1/3 c. orange juice. Pour into a spring form pan and top with the almonds. Place in the freezer until 15 min. before serving. Remove sides of spring form pan and place on serving dish. Heat strawberries and the 8 tsp. orange juice until they come to a boil. Serve over ice cream mold.

Angler's Corner

By Lindy Blaisdell

If the movie '10' were made casting a fish in the lead, the Large Mouth Bass would have to play the part. The Large Mouth may not be everyone's favorite, but then neither is Bo Derek.

Large Mouth originally were native to Southern Canada throughout the Great Lakes down the Mississippi Valley to Mexico, across to Florida and up along the Atlantic Coast as far north as Maryland.

They now reside in every state except Alaska and have been in New England since the late 1800's. Large Mouth found our shallow weedy ponds to their liking and have established a healthy resident population throughout the state.

Bass in Northern waters grow slowly. A yearling reaches four inches while a two-year-old may grow to be seven or eight inches. It isn't until the third year most bass reach their legal size of 10 inches. If you see or catch a Lunker of 20 inches it's probably nine or 10 years old. Northern bass can only feed heavily during the warm summer months as opposed to Florida bass that can feed year round.

Our state record is 15 pounds and was caught in Plymouth. Bass of 10 and 12 pounds have been recorded witn nine pounders almost common. The average, however, is one to three pounds.

It's a safe bet bass of three to six pounds exist in almost every pond where the Large Mouth is common.

Bass spawn in the spring as the water reaches 62°. The male does the nest building in which the female will deposit her eggs. The female will carry about 5000 eggs per pound of body weight but deposits only a few hundred at a time. The male will guard the nest during incubation until the young hatch out. The young bass known as Fry then move into the shallows and feed on plankton.

Bass fishermen like duck hunters are a special breed. Rising early with only a few hours sleep they're at it again the next day. There must be at least as much specialized equipment for the bass fisherman as for all hunters combined. The bass master's sonar is his bird dog, his rod and reel are his weapons. As in duck hunting the best bass fishing is early dawn. Once the sun climbs into the sky bass seek deeper water to protect their light sensitive eyes.

Early dawn fishermen cast towards shore into pockets of pads and grass, around stumps, rocks and piers. Lures such as plastic worms or any of the new fish-imitating plugs are good. Sometimes a surface plug is the answer or it could be a spinner or spoon.

As the day wears on switch to deeper water using suitable lures.

For those fishermen who work all day try night fishing. I had a span of about five year's night fishing for bass and over all caught more big bass than in 10 years of daytime fishing. The sputterbug and injured minnow were the only plugs I used.

TOURNAMENT

The Plymouth Rock Bassmasters will hold their Open Bass Tournament on Long Pond in Lakeville on Sunday June 8. Take Rte. 53 to 106 to 105 to 18. The registration begins at 5:30 a.m. on the launching ramp at Rte. 18. Registration fee is $20 with a guarantee $500 first prize and nine additional money prizes. Fishing starts at 7 a.m. and goes non-stop until 3 p.m. Weigh-in will also take place at the ramp. Local Boy Scouts will be on hand selling coffee and donuts throughout the day. For additional information call Dave Chenard at 224-4814.

See you there.

pattern).

In addition to a family heritage of violence, other burdens resulting from poverty, illness, unemployment, severe emotional pressures, or any other crisis; an isolated family (new to the neighborhood), or relatively young parents increase the risk of abuse.

The causes are complex and wide-ranging. Gelles says, "If you find a phenomena associated with child abuse, it doesn't mean it causes it. We are never going to be at a point when we have a single (cause)."

Part of the "cure" is an increased awareness of society of the problem. People are learning to recognize child abuse and neglect and there is a "tool" in Massachusetts for reporting suspected cases for investigation by the Pulbic Welfare Department. Doctors, dentists, nurses, public and private school teachers and administrators, social workers and policemen are "mandated reporters" who, if in their professional capacity, have reasonable cause to believe there is suspected abuse going on, are compelled to file a report. They can be fined up to $1,000 if they don't report.

Mandated reporters, as well as any other person who may also file a report, are protected by law against any civil or criminal action for having made a report.

It should be noted that when the Public Welfare Dept. determines abuse or neglect is going on, the department tries to provide services necesssary to "preserve the family unit." Only when there appears to be grave danger to the child, is he removed from the home."

The Massachusetts "Family Violence Act," ironically a result of the tragic multiple family shooting-suicide here in Cohasset two years ago, has become a valuable "tool" for policemen who most frequently are called upon to respond to family violence. It enables a police officer to transport a family member to a hospital for medical treatment; to standby until one or the other spouse leaves; the officer can take the threatened party to a secure place; and it gives the abused party the right to file a temporary restraining order, or an abuse petition barring the other person from entering the home.

ABUSE PETITIONS

Police Sargent John Rhodes says Cohasset Police are all too familar with this situation. "There are a substantial number of abuse petitions out right now."

Beyond the "tools," Gelles suggests that to stem the tide of this trend, we must "take a firm stand (as a society) against violence. We must also be general advocates of the rights of children and believe we are not for hitting."

Benbow says, "We should be distressed by the realities of family violence, and along with the rest of society, we should wake up to the repetitive cycles of violence which pass from generation to generation."

The one thing a community can do, says Gelles, "is to integrate families into kin and community." The more reaching out a community does to its more isolated members, the less probability there is of this problem occurring.

drugs, a great majority said they took drugs because they were bored, the drugs were offered to them, peer pressure, and simple curiosity.

Thirteen students admitted that marijuana effected their social life and attitudes while 14 students denied this fact.

Twenty-four students said that marijuana was easily obtained. The 28 students were also asked to give their idea of the percentage of students in CHS that smoke pot between the 9th and 12th grades. Two students thought less than 50 per cent of the students in CHS smoked pot while the remaining 26 ranged from 50 per cent to 99 per cent.

And, in response to the type of mood they (the students) were in before smoking pot 13 said good, seven said alright and the remaining seven said hyper to bad.

In light of this information, I began to interview on my own several students in CHS. I also spent some of my time interviewing parents, clergy, police, nurses and senior citizens. As with Chip's survey I discovered, only too late, questions that would have helped me delve into the drug situation more thoroughly. Questions like: How often do you take drugs? Do you depend on drugs to get you through the day? What is the relationship between you and your parents? What type of family life do you have?

One aspect of Chip's survey was the parents' reaction toward their children if they were knowledgeable of them taking drugs: 12 parents would be very upset, seven would react "negatively," nine would not care.

I asked my group of seven questions about the role they thought the family should play in the drug problem. Some responses were — "What family?" and "What problem?"

One student later admitted that there is a need for more drug rehabilitation centers. Many kids, from what I gathered,would like some form of direction but either don't realize it or are afraid to admit it.

In many of my interviews the students disagreed with the information claiming marijuana leaves bad effects. One student stated "There's nothing wrong with pot. People make it up to be really bad. It's better than smoking cigarettes." After the interview that same student told me that the use of pot leads to loss of coordination and perception.

Another moderate pot smoker said "After a long period of time, pot makes you less motivated and dulls your thinking capacity."

Two students in unison said "If pot is used right it's good, but if it's abused it's bad. Basically all drugs are abused." Another student, in agreement with the fact that pot was perfectly okay, said "Pot can mess up your future kid and reproductive organs." One former pot user told of a Harvard professor who wrote a book called "Be Here Now, Remember" telling of his experiences with acid an how he found God and himself when "doing" acid.

A student shuddered as she recalled the time when she smoked a joint that was "fixed" with angel dust. She said "I wasn't prepared for it. I began shaking and crying. I was really scared. I tried reaching out for people to hit me and get me out of it." She added, "I started on drugs because my friends said they were great and that I'd like them so out of curiosity I tried them."

At the end of the interview she advised anyone with any inclination toward drugs not to be so curious.

Another student told of his unhappy experiences with marijuana which he labled as a "bad trip — when I tried pot it made me ill and paranoid. I hit a point where I thought inanimate objects were out to get me. I stayed clear away from my parents until I was back to normal."

Other users claimed that pot effects judgment and dulls the senses.. It also dulls enthusiasm and motivation which leads to procrastination. Because of the many contradictions in my interviews, I got the impression that the students really had very little knowledge on the hidden effects of drugs.

Their only desire is to get from the drugs to pleasure aspect of them. Another drug user said "When I'm off drugs I feel I need something. Life's a bummer. Something is missing. I don't want to look at reality. I don't want to know truth."

A majority of the seven said "Cohasset is a boring town. There is nothing exciting to do in the town. Taking drugs is just another way of adding excitement to routine life."

In conclusion, I would again like to mention some of the questions never asked students. Most of the questions asked were very general and I received general answers.

I would have liked to have gone more thoroughly into the questions covering more students in CHS that have involved themselves with drugs. I also made a big mistake in interviewing students on drugs and parents with "straight" kids, giving an imbalanced picture of drugs between parents and children.

I would have really liked to have covered questions like, are you more or less independent from the guidance of your parents? Do your parents take drugs? Have you ever seen them use drugs? Do you feel kids from broken homes are more inclined to try drugs? Do you feel kids from affluent families are also inclined to try drugs? Are the drug dealers adults or teenagers?

Do you spend most of your pay (allowance) on drugs? Are you a successful student at CHS? If not, were you before you started on drugs? Do you receive any recognition from school, and/or parents?

There are many more questions that need to be asked.

The students interviewed were not hard addicts. They were people still reachable. The availability of drugs may also contribute to the wide use of drugs. similar to the time when cigarettes were the "in" thing, and were available to anyone. The students also claimed that Cohasset has nothing to offer. They lable it "Dullsville."

There are programs available in the town. Are they too expensive? Are there enough jobs to go around for teenagers? If all it takes to get a drug user off of drugs is to turn a dull town into town with plenty to offer for bored teenagers I say let's get started. Let's get off the tip of the iceberg, get our gear together and explore new and acceptable ways to get "A Cohasset high!"

Village shop talk

By Larry Fone

Courtesy pays . . .now the really fine weather has arrived, and more and more folks will be leisurely looking, shopping and walking in the Village and Harbor part of town.

One big problem is young folks on bicycles who insist on using the sidewalks for a quick route to the library or a coke. This is just not acceptable . . . it's also illegal. And it's time parents gave their kids a few guidelines about this. I.e., if the street is too busy walk the bikes on the sidewalks. There are many browsers and older folks enjoying the walkways in Cohasset. Last Saturday was just unbelievable, not only were there moving bicycles on the sidewalks, but groups of cyclists blocking the walkways.

How about a little courtesy, young folks? This is directed at some not-so-young folks too.

Parking courtesies should also be established. Cohasset is a small town but we do have lots of parking and it is not metered, yet. But if parking abuse continues I for one will ask for metered one hour parking only on Main Street.

True, the new signs are not up yet (they were smashed several months ago.)

Park your car in the parking lot behind village shops. Taking the Boston bus? The Town Hall Parking lot is not only enormous, but underused.

Merchants and various other organizations look forward to welcoming many visitors to Cohasset this summer and we should put our best foot forward. Visitors will be looking for restaurants, the Music Circus, etc. If you don't have the answers refer them to the nearest shop. Many of us even have menus, programs and special events listings on hand. We can also direct tourists to good out-of-town public beaches, picnic areas. Did you know the small part (Whitney Woods) across from the Mobil Station on Rte. 3A is a public picnic area? Would be nice to have another picnic area in the Harbor area. Maybe the highway department has some ideas on this!

Courtesy pays . . . try it and you'll feel good!

Vandalism

school property. In fact, a study has shown that there is an increase in vandalism at many schools when grades are released. At Cohasset High School the amount of vandalism increases at the end of every school year.

It seems that one effective method of stopping vandalism is improving conditions in the school. For instance, lockers have always been subject to abuse. Two summers ago the school installed high-quality, attractive lockers in the north wing. These lockers have remained in excellent condition after two years of use.

Among the more common methods of deterring vandalism is apprehension. Usually, students caught destroying school property are charged for the cost of the labor and parts required to repair or replace the damaged material. At the elementary schools floodlights help to stop damage, such as window-breaking, that occurs at night. In the high school a gate has been installed that prevents the entering of the school from the gyms of locker rooms.

Although these measures have managed to stop the amount of vandalism from increasing, abuse of school property is still a problem. One solution, first tried in San Francisco, is setting aside a fund for student activities.

This money would be taken from the amount now spent replacing property lost to vandalism. The cost of damage done by students would be deducted from the fund, and the student council or the entire student body could vote on a use for the remaining money.

With this incentive for maintaining the schools, peer pressure would work to help stop vandalism. If the plan is enacted at Cohasset High School everyone will benefit.

It will place no extra load on the taxpayers who are now footing the bill for vandalism. However, the people with the most to gain are the students, who will have the benefit of both the extra funds and a well-maintained school.

The Cohasset Health Education Committee would like to thank all those parents, teachers, and students who participated in their surveys. The results of these surveys are published in a report titled "Health Education Committee's Needs Assessment Report 1980." This report is available in the High School Library.

The CHS student body was represented in the Health Ed. Committee by David McCarthy and Mary Jo Mahoney. These students provided a unique perspective to the committee. This same perspective could be provided to the Faculty Advisory Forum, the Superintendent Search Committee and numerous other committees as well.

One area student representation has been successful was in 1970 when an accreditation committee was set up to evaluate the school. Another such committee is being established and would benefit greatly from student participation. The place where student participation would be best put to use would be the School Committee. One or two non-voting, student members would give the committee a new perspective that is sorely needed.

Not only would the committees benefit from student participation, but the students themselves would learn a great deal about the process of government. Certainly their is alot to be gained from student participation in school affairs, and we urge the School Committee and the administration to include more students in future committees.

GREETING

Whereas a civil action has been begun against you in our Superior Court by Charles M. Moran wherein it is seeking to recover $52,945.00 for services rendered.

We COMMAND YOU if you intend to make any defense, that on Monday, the 7th day of July or within such further time as the law allows you to cause your written pleading to be filed in the office of the Clerk of Courts at Worcester, in the County of Worcester, in said Commonwealth, and further that you defend against said suit according to law if you intend any defense, and that you do and receive what the Court shall order and adjudge therein.

Hereof fail not, at you peril, or as otherwise said suit may be adjudged and orders entered, in your absense.

It appearing to this Court that no personal service of the complaint has been made on the defendant, a deputy sheriff having made a return on the summons that after a diligent search he can find no one upon whom he can lawfully make service, a copy of which is hereto attached and made part of this notice, it is ordered that notice of this suit be given to them by publishing a copy of this order once each week for three successive weeks in the Cohasset Mariner, a newspaper published in said Cohasset, the last publication to be at least 20-days before the 7th day of July next.

Witness, JAMES P. LYNCH, JR. at Worcester the 22nd day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty.

Kindergarten population up

In spite of all predictions, a new world is being born. And some of those new world residents (who reside in newly built homes in Cohasset) are planning to attend Osgood Kindergarten in the fall.

Jack Creamer, Osgood School principal, said the hard-core figures show the kindergarten population to be up eight per cent (75 students total) over the 60 students expected.

Accordingly, the school committeedidn'tbat an eyelash when it voted 6-zip to increase the kindergarten staff from one and a half to two full-time teachers. And even committee members agreed more kindergarten students could well turn up before school starts. "Another road has appeared on Forest Avenue," Patricia Walsh said.

If more than 85 kindergarten students start school in the fall, Creamer said he'd be back to the committee for more aid. He said the present kindergarten "suite" which is really a double room, partitioned off, is not really adequate for handling many more than 20 students per section. Parent William Baird agreed.

A recent kindergarten screening, Creamer added, had shown that the 75 students signed up for kindergarten show a broad spectrum and "an added challenge not present in recent years. We need extra human resources and extra economic resources," he said, adding that many students are from single parent homes, homes with two working parents, and homes experiencing economic stress.

The committee's vote is its first addition to the school budget it presented to town meeting 1980.

Health advisors need help

Volunteers (approximately 20-25) are needed to serve on a health advisory committee which will see action after the hiring of a health curriculum coordinator/teacher is selected.

The volunteer committee will assist with parent workshops, ideas and curriculum. School committeewoman Irene Brown will be a member of the committee. Persons interested on serving on the committee should contact the school superintendent's office.

In other action Monday, the school committee voted to appoint the following persons to a screening committee for the selection of a health teacher: Nancy Clapp, Daniel Dormer, Carol Sandblum, John Creamer, Richard Conley, Frank Drinkwater, Nancy O'Toole, Gail Marshall and Mary O'Brien.

Parents see police too soft on kids

We weren't at the meeting, but Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark said several parents who attended selectmen's Monday meeting were upset with the Cohasset Police Department for not notifying parents when kids are caught breaking the law.

Clark said police officers (and especially auxillary policemen) were ignoring the problem of minors in possession of alcohol in the town and felt police were in general "too soft on the kids."

CHS Hull rivalry to continue

An incident in Hull earlier this year, during which five CHS cheerleaders were injured as the result of Hull teenagers stoning a bus, prompted the school committee, Monday, to vote to continue athletic events between the two towns under a "watchful" basis.

School committee member Diana Kornet said it was her impression that adult feelings between the two towns are "still strong," and one parent present at the meeting agreed.

A suggestion by John Langmaid prompted the committee to instruct Acting School Supt. and Hull School Committee Chairman John Raftery to confer with the Hull committee regarding the playing of all basketball games in the afternoon (daylight hours). If Hull concurs with the recommendation, both towns will appeal to the South Shore League for an extra set of afternoon basketball dates.

While there have been no incidents between the two towns since the Cohasset bus was stoned, Committeewoman Patricia Walsh suggested that principals in both schools hold Fall assemblies explaining only a "tentative privilege" by allowing the teams to compete.

School Committee Chairman Frank England said he felt some of the adult friction of "uncomfortable" feelings Cohasset residents may have experienced during recent games may have resulted from the "unusual" CHS softball team (the only team in the South Shore League with three male members).

Child abuse not all physical

By Karin Bartow

When you learn that child abuse and neglect cover a lot more territory than physical beating, the finding that one in five children are "abused" each year, startling though it is, seems believable.

Parents who place unreasonable goals and pressures on their children, who may verbally and psychologically hurt them, who may leave them alone or otherwise ignore them, or who may not provide the basic necessities of life, however unintentionally, are damaging their children.

Second in series

Comparisons that show a town has the same or similar problems as its neighbors tends to "normalize" things that are not normal.

It may be reassuring to know that Cohasset is not the only community with drug, alcohol, abuse, neglect and violence problems, but by isolating them on a local, around the block level, we begin to sense the importance of what's going on.

Last week's article discussed what are generally accepted as causes of family violence and they bear repeating: a parent who has the potential for abuse, usually acquired through his own upbringing; a child who is perceived as, or is, different; and a crisis, or series of crises (illness, financial problems, isolation, alcohol or drug problems).

The incidence of alcohol abuse in Cohasset, among adults and teenagers, is one major problem. Carolyn Housman, a social worker with the Social Service League, stated in her annual report that in "50% of my current caseload, the lives of the client had been touched by, or involved with, alcohol abuse." If you consider that one out of two families with known problems have been touched by an alcohol abuse and there is a generally accepted relationship between alcohol and family violence, this is not a desirable situation.

Dr. John Maloney, who until recently was superintendent of schools for five years, believes "alcohol and marijuana are a socially accepted way of life in this community." Depression among teenagers and suicide risk were symptoms that he saw during his tenure. He suggests recognition that these problems exist must take place in our community and families should be encouraged to seek help and know that it will be kept confidential.

The police are most often referred to when there is suspected abuse because, according to Sargent John Rhodes, "No one wants to handle it." He estimates that there may be one or two cases a year, that they know of. Mental stress, non-physical abuse, is a much bigger problem, in his opinion. He sees many kids left to run loose, without proper guidance and parents are often unavailable when trouble arises.

Cohasset police are more frequently involved with spouse violence and the "Family Violence Act" has helped a great deal in this area. The law allows the police to standby until one or the other spouse leaves; they can take on party to a secure place; or the injuried party can file for an abuse petition.

Rhodes feels there should be in-service training for police to better equip them to deal with family/social situations. "We are doctors, lawyers, plumbers . . . . we cover everything and have to make split-second decisions."

Dr. Robert Sceery, who began his pediatric practice in 1953 and has been school physician since 1954, says "physical abuse is a rare occurrence here."

Other factors that may harm childrem emotionally or psychologically, Sceery observes, are the loss of the traditional family unit (no supportive relatives, no meal times together, divorce) and financial and social pressures on parents. Sceery feels that parents who understand their intentions at the time, but lack the proper knowledge to act properly, do not mean to hurt their children.

One of Cohasset's strong suits for youngsters is the Joseph Osgood School which houses grades Kindergarten to third. Sceery says, "The children are coddled here; they are made to feel good about themselves; they try to put them in a situation where they will know success." This philosophy is harder to achieve at Deer Hill and beyond.

"One of the major needs of Cohasset," as Sceery sees it, "is going to be daycare centers." The preponderence of working parents need to have competent caretakers.

John Creamer, Osgood Principal, who has worked in the school system for 25 years, says there have been a few cases of physical abuse over the years, but most problems have been in the area of neglect (emotional problems, improper clothing, poor nutritional and health habits, uncleanliness). In general, parents are approachable and eager to work with professionals to correct deficiencies; some are not.

The traffic in Gail Marshall's nurse's office at the high school is heavy. While she says she refers more serious problems to Dr. Sceery, Guidance or South Shore Counselling, she still gets an earful of all the other up's and down's of the students, her friends. When she has discussed problems with parents, she has found them to be cooperative.

Want to know how to get on the front page of a newspaper? (this one, anyway). Talk to the Cohasset Rotary Club. Monday night the Rotary held its first press conference ever, it said, although it's been getting good press for some time now.

Reporters from three newspapers and two radio stations were wined, dined, given gifts, treated to interesting speeches and let in on some important Rotary traditions.

Cohasset's Week

Sewer appointee

Mrs. Kempton Churchill of Atlantic Avenue has been appointed to the citizen's advisory committee to the board of sewer commissioners by Moderator David Place. She succeeds Janet Daggett on the committee. Ms. Daggett was elected a sewer commissioner in the 1980 annual elections.

Mistaken identity

Some of you may have caught the tail-end of a WJDA (Quincy radio) news report over the weekend regarding the wife of a Philip Murray, Jr. being in the hospital. Some people thought State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray was the accident victim. But she wasn't. It was her daughter-in-law, Kathy, a nurse at South Shore Hospital, who was in the car accident in which she broke not a few bones.

According to Mary Jeanette, Kathy's doing fine, but expects to be a guest at the hospital for at least a few weeks.

Musical raccoons

Patriot Ledger Reporter Dorothy Perkins has been gardening for years, and sometimes she has outsmarted the raccoons, and sometimes not. She related some of her experiences to selectmen last week to the delight of everyone.

A portable radio also works in the garbage can, except for the time the raccoons pulled it out and carried it to the top of a tree where it blared for two days, until the batteries went dead.

Putting a portable radio in your cornfield does work, Dotty said. "But make sure you put it on an all-night station." One time she didn't and . . .

Town sued

Dr. and Mrs. John Burns, John and Diane Sullivan, Arnold and Arlene Winston, Dennis and Kathleen Casey and Frances Rogers have filed suit against the town and Mary and Bud Fairman over the board of health's variance allowing the Fairman's to stable a horse on their Jerusalem Road property.

Lawyers for the complaintants maintain the board overstepped its authority in granting the variance. A Dedham Court judge will review the board's action rather than hear all new evidence.

Schools honored

Acting School Supt. John Raftery said this week a plaque has been awarded to the Cohasset Public Schools for its outstanding fund-raising efforts during the United Way Campaign. According to Raftery, Cohasset had the largest percentage of contributors of any school system on the South Shore. Pat Perrault, a former CHS mathematics, led the effort.

Jury duty

Paula Buckley of Jerusalem Road, was recently drawn for Civil and Criminal Jury duty in July. Lorraine Hoy of Border Street was drawn for grand jury.

Burt Pratt, a director of South Shore Playhouse Associates, Inc., presents one of 15 cash grants totalling $33,550 to Janet Tooker, president of the South Shore Art Center. Playhouse Associates is a non-profit corporation formed in 1949 for the purposes of carrying on theatrical, artistic, educational activities for South Shore Communities.

Historical sub

Jean Repougle of Fairoaks Lane was appointed to the historical commission. She fills an appointment resigned by Janet Daggett, who was recently elected to the sewer commission.

New registrar

Selectmen selected Louise Conway as registrar for the Democratic Town Committee. She was selected from three nominees.

The following slate of election workers for the Democratic Town Committee was approved: Patricia Barrow, D. Bjorkgren, Margaret Charles, Karen Corcoran, Alice Daunt, Mary Fiori, Marguerite Libby, Janet Livingston, Donna McGee.

Also, Bernard Mulcahy, T. Rosano, Jean Salvador, Jeanne Sullivan, Rosalind Whittemore, Alice Mersch.

Dog restrained

A dog owned by Lloyd Huskins has been ordered restrained for having allegedly killed 98 broilers. Also recently ordered restrained were dogs owned by Louis H. Maurer and Brian Cogill.

McKinnon seeks a sixth term in Senate

Senator Allan R. McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) today filed nomination papers with the Secretary of State, officially announcing his candidacy for re-election to the Massachusetts State Senate.

Senator McKinnon is seeking a sixth term in the Norfolk and Plymouth Senatorial seat. The seven town district includes the South Shore Communities of Weymouth, Hingham, Hull, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and Duxbury.

A former teacher, Senator McKinnon has been a full-time legislator since his election to the State Senate in 1970. McKinnon resides in Weymouth with his wife, Anne, and their four children, Kerry, Kevin, Sean, and Megan.

Senator McKinnon is Senate Chairman of the Joint Committee on Insurance and was recently appointed to the powerful Senate Ways and Means Committee. Between 1971 and 1977, he chaired the Joint Committee on Commerce and Labor. Under his chairmanship, that Committee recommended numerous bills to improve the Commonwealth's economic climate. McKinnon also chaired the Legislature's officials, proposed a balanced statewide growth and development program which places special emphasis on revitalization of downtown business districts and older urban areas.

Since his appointment of the Chairmanship of the Committee on Insurance in January, 1979, Senator McKinnon has been active in the fight to prevent increases in auto insurance rates, has pressed for effective consumer cost disclosure requirements in the sale of life insurance, and was a leader in a successful effort to ban the sale of cancer insurance in Massachusetts.

Locally, Senator McKinnon has been particularly involved in the area of transportation and was instrumental in originally obtaining state support for the innovative commuter boat system between Hingham and Boston. The commuter boat provides a viable transportation alternative for residents of South Shore communities which receive little or no public transit service.

Senator McKinnon also initiated a petition drive to press the state Department of Public Works to synchronzie the traffic lights along Route 3A, one of only two major arteries which directly serve South Shore Coastal commuters. A new system of traffic light control for Route 3A in North Weymouth are scheduled to be installed this year.

problem and drinking, #1. "Drinking and driving is well out of control," she says and the kids' failure to recognize it as a serious problem perplexes her.. "It is only a small number who have problems," she says of the student body; in general, she finds them to be good kids.

Charles Mundhenk, a member of the guidance team for five years, is well equipped to help and relate to high schoolers. He spends 10 hours a week as a counseling psychologist, coaches soccer and recently completed his doctorate study on the effect of divorce on adolescents.

He recognizes depression and some parental neglect, although finds it to be an unintentional result of economic, social and living pressures. The competition of a stratified social community is another source of pressure on the kids.

"One of the problems is how people define abuse," says Reverend Edward Atkinson of the First Unitarian Church. He has not seen a lot of physical abuse, but more of what he considers neglect and psychological pressures; the expectation of parents that their children have to be the best at everything.

"Ministers are interested in this (problem). I think we can be helpful by counseling and giving support. The psychological framework of the Unitarian Church is that the child is not a possession, but a trust; the parents' role is to nurture, not to mold the child into their own image."

Reverend John Benbow of the Second Congregational Church is doing all that he can to see that people are aware of abuse problems, including those in his profession. A half dozen people approached him for discussion after his Mother's Day sermon on family violence, an indicator that it was a success.

Relieving stress and the burdens of guilt by talking to someone is a crucial first step for adults who find they are having difficulty handling the job of parenting. Benbow suggests that in addition to clergy in Cohasset, another good place with resources is the schools or the Social Service League (nursing and social services), the Office of Children in Hingham and the state hotlines.

"Jan" is one of the many volunteers who man the Parental Stress line, a 24-hour, anonymous service that gives parents someone to talk to, information and/or referrals. The hotline is based on the premise: "Do something for yourself before you do something to your child." Jan observes that the higher the socio-economic group, the less incidence there is of physical abuse. She finds, however, a lot of neglect — verbal and psychological abuse and the absense of a loving, bonding-type of relationship.

She handles a lot of calls from and about adolescent drug and sex problems, but the majority of calls are from women who, she says, "are having a lot of trouble. There are many single mothers with a great deal of pressure on them."

"Tell them to use the hot line," she urges. "You don't have to be ready to hit your kid; you may just need relief when under stress." The hotline volunteer who's role is to "listen," often makes all the difference to someone who's not coping well at home.

If there's one glimmer of optimism in this otherwise depressing report, it is the meaning behind the word unintentional. Whether a parent can't help circumstances or lacks the proper information, their behavior that may be abusive to a child is seen, by most local professionals, as unintentional.

Given support, education, alternatives and perhaps even the encouragement for a change in life-style, the unintentionally neglectful parent could do a better job of their children.

These are stressful times — financial, social and family burdens weigh people down. Alcohol and drug abuse exist among adults as well as teens. Single and other parents are isolated without traditional family backup. Youngsters face stiff competition for schools, jobs, friends and are left alone much of the time.

Counseling, guidance, daycare, therapy and "talking" are all avenues of support that people should learn to use more frequently.

In recognizing that we all share, to some degree, problems that create stress and have the potential to lead to the abuse and neglect of our children, there should be more understanding and community support of those who are buckling under the pressure.

Come blow your horn

Don't be afraid to. Reporters and editors love people who drop them lines or phone about upcoming events, possible stories. Sometimes we all descend upon you when you call — other times no one shows. You can never tell, sometimes we can't tell what our schedules will be like on your important date.

Monday, the Rotarians were pretty tricky. They offered to feed us at a time of our choosing, presented a program which while it was all-encompassing, got us to our various meetings by 8 p.m.

They also had an interesting story to tell. And if it hadn't been interesting, and if they weren't an interesting group, all the shisk-a-bob and dessert in the world couldn't have made up produce a story.

None of us expect to be rewarded for any story we write. We're paid (not the 10 cents an inch of Burt Pratt's early newspaper days — something more on the line of 50 cents an hour — there are laws, now, Burt) to find out about you, what you're thinking, what you're planning to do.

But remember. If we don't come the first time you call or write — don't stop calling.

Personal insult

[ED.'S NOTE: Selectmen received the following letter from the Cohasset Police Association at their Monday meeting.]

Dear Sirs:

At the monthly meeting of our Association, it was voted unanimously by our members in attendance to have the Secretary send a letter to your Board expressing our feelings on the outcome of the Police Chief Study Committee.

We consider their selections as a personal insult to the men of our Association that submitted applications for the position. Sgt. Richard Barrow, a member of this Department with almost thirty years of service was not even given the decency of an interview after submitting an application.

We feel that we have men within our Department that are fully qualified to fill the position of Chief of Police and had the job remained in Civil Service, one of them would have had the opportunity.

We strongly urge the Board of Selectmen to come to our assistance in rectifying this wrong that has been perpetrated against the three members of our Association that applied for this position.

Sincerely yours,
Charles Stockbridge
Secretary

Will it be a Moscow, U.S.A.

By Eric Pearson

Year: 1928

Place: Moscow, U.S.S.R.

Invited Guest: William Foster, Chairman of the American Communist Party.

Stalin: "Comrade Foster, you can never get the American people to vote for ommunism or even for Socialism, but you can lead them into our program through the back door. Go home and say that you support the present system, but that you wish to improve it by more governmental action on behalf of needy people.

Comments

"Take your stand for anything that will involve government more deeply in the regulation and control of the activities of men. Stand for municipal ownership of utilities, governmental aid for underprivileged people, more subsidies of all kinds, stricter regulations by such governmental bodies as the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Trade Commission, and any municipal, state, or federal plan for any kind of intervention with the economic activities of the people. In this way, you can bring America into communism and the people will never know it." (This is a direct quote of Stalin's statement by Foster in his report to the American Communist Party.)

It is now 52 years later:

Wake up America! Remember the foundations on which our country was built: the Constitution, the Bill of Rights, our Pledge of Allegiance and our National Anthem. They all state that ours is a Republic, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

Stop glorifying the liberal activists who have led and are leading us down Stalin's (and Commu--nism's) road to destructino and oblivion — the Fondas, Naders, Haydens and, now, Ramsey Clark and Professor George Wald who considers the Ayatollah "a beautiful old man . . . ". Look around you. How many politicians, candidates for office and appointed or elected officials are following Stalin's instructions to "Comrade Foster"?

Thank God we still have a democracy, but I am very fearful that we won't have one for long. Every time we allow our officials to make decisions that thwart our ability to control their actions, we come ever closer to dictatorship.

You say you're skeptical?

Eric Pearson talks about America's heritage and its preservation.

[Greg Derr]

Take a good look at Hungary — Poland — Czechslovakia — Rumania — Latvia — Estonia — Amin's Africa — Afghanistan, and in our own back yard, Jamaica — Nicaragua — the Bahamas and, last but not least, Cuba.

Today's paper The Boston Herald American (June 6, 1980) tells me that 2000 Cubans may resettle in Massachusetts with the help of a religious confeence. "It's a workable figure," says John McCarthy, director of the U.S.C.C. migration and refugee service.

I have employed and helped refugees in the past and stand ready to do so again, but now I must ask: "How many of the 2000 will be the "garbage" who burned and destoryed our property at the military facility in Arkansas and made obscene gestures at me on T.V. the same day? It is our tax money that is housing and feeding this trash and I don't like it.

Last, but not least, we should ask the media (with a few exceptions) who they are working for with their distorted coverages: the United States of America, the Soviet Union or, perhaps, Iran or Cuba.

Did I hear you say you're not going to vote this year? You'd better — the "flakes" will be voting.

There are 850,000 Rotarians, 18,000 Rotary Clubs in 150 countries, and one of those is in Cohasset. In Cohasset there are only 27 Rotarians, but they get a large proportion (for their size) of Rotary district acclaim. In 1979 they came in third in the Rotary districts for their fund-raising efforts with their Cohasset phone book publication which is mailed to every resident (in a week or two the new one will arrive).

If you thought the phone book, which is widely used and people and businesses can't get enough of, was a gift, you're wrong. Inside your phone book this (and every) year will be a little envelope requesting that you make a donation to the Rotary Club of Cohasset.

It can be just 50 cents, a dollar. But something more substantial would be greatly appreciated. This will be ths 34th year the Rotary has sponsored its Memorial Scholarship and Loan Fund. During this period $70,000 in total cash grants have been made to help CHS graduates finance higher educaiton. Another $30,000 has been loaned to students on a non-interest bearing basis. Some of it has even been paid back.

But students aren't the only ones these funds help. Four years ago Rotarian Lloyd Prescott (a floating Rotarian, who visits other Rotary Clubs throughout the world) suggested the Rotary put on a supper for the Senior Elm Street residents.

According to Ed Mulvey, "It was the warmest meeting I've ever attended in Rotary." Since then the Elm Street residents and the Rotarians have become buddies — and they assist the Rotary in addressing the phone books they mail out yearly. In return the Rotarians worried about getting the Elm Street residents a piano (and, finally, accomplished it). When the Rotary took over the fund-raising effort to purchase the Senior Shuttle Bus from Cohasset Motors and Elm Street residents canvassed the streets for funds, donated items to the silent auction and were in many ways the mainstay supporters of the drive.

Mulvey said whatever the Rotary tries to do for the Elm Street seniors, "We get double back with services."

Bill Ripley, former CHS School Supt. noted that at that first Elm Street dinner four years ago "I helped wait on tables for some of my former pupils." Ripley talked about the trophies given to outstanding athletes — begun in 1953. And he mentioned a few of the individuals who had received those trophies over the years: Richard and Reginal Silvia, Dennis Reardon, Richard Towle, Walter Sweeney who after receiving the trophy in 1958 went on to play 12 years in the National Football League (Fred Howe whispered: "He never missed a game.")

From Bob Roth we heard about the beach barrels the Rotarians supply. From Wayne Robbins the support the Rotary extends to local Scout troops — with over 100 scouts receiving support. And interestingly, we learned the scouts earn a lot of their budget by recycling our old newspapers. Scouts prefer you leave your newspapers in the special bin at the dump.

The Rotarians have also donated money for Scouts travelling to western scout jamborees. And while the youth exchange, which Rotarians started three years ago, has had some successful years, they all agreed this was a project which needed more attention. We (the press) all agreed to help, so you'll be hearing a lot more about that sometime in August.

Thanks again, Rotarians.

Cohasset views from Saudi Arabia

ED.'S NOTE: We were happy to learn, with this letter, that the Johnstons, at least a majority of them, will return to Cohasset for good next month. Fran said, in a more personal note, he will put in at least another six months tour of duty after which "Enshallah — whatever Allah wills."

Again — another funny, funny letter. It could probably be said the Mariner and its readers have selfish reasons for wishing they would all stay there — their letters. They offered insights into a whole new world outside of Cohasset, and we all benefited.

(Note to Susan: the kittens have all found happy homes.)

24 May 80: Well, here we are back in Saudi after a hectic three weeks in beautiful Cohasset. You can't imagine how wonderful it was to drive down Main Street that first Saturday morning after a 15 hour flight from Chararan. We thought we would never make it but we did and the long trip was certainly worth it.

Of course, our first stop was to the Log and Line for the "Breakfast Special" and to taste real pork and bacon after abstention for over eight months. What a treat...

We were really surprised at the mild weather when we arrived. We thought for sure that you would have at least four or five feet of snow for us but it was very pleasant the first week. We did see a snow flake here and there but nothing we couldn't cope with. The night winds did affect us but we had come prepared with many sweaters.

We had decided to stay at Kimball's By the Sea and were very pleased that we did. The staff could not have been more cooperative to the refugees from the East that arrived with eight suitcases and over 50 messages waiting for them.

I think they thought we had: either just arrived from Hollywood (as rejects) or that we had all just been released from Walpole...don't forget, we hadn't seen or ridden in an elevator, been able to drink water from the tap, have people talk to us that really understood what we were saying or just plain friendly faces. What a joy...

I don't see how people can travel the Atlantic or Pacific and rise the next day bright and bushy tailed ready for work. That 'jet lag' is a killer. For the first five days we were back, all of us were up at 0300 wondering why the dining room wasn't open for supper and falling asleep at 2 p.m. in the afternoon.

I can imagine the number of calls the Cohasset PD received on four strange people walking down Atlantic Ave. at 3 a.m. in the morning.

Well, we did survive and finally did get over the lag but by that time, it was almost time to think of the 15 hour plane ride back to Saudi. Sometimes, you just can't win.

Sunday morning was one of the days we had talked so much about prior to coming home to Cohasset. We had an early breakfast and then went to St. Stephen's for morning service. It was as if we had never left. Pastor Muir and all those wonderful people made us feel so welcome.

One of the highlights for me was being asked to speak to the "Old Goats" organization. What a wonderful group of people. All their years of experience certainly are an asset to Cohasset.

Things have been pretty quiet here in Ras Al Mishab. Sometimes, I have a problem thinking of things that would interest you and just when I can't think of anything else to write, I find something interesting such as the below article. It is taken from the FRONT PAGE of the Arab News, which shows that people in this area have the same type problems that you folks have (i.e. Cohasset Mariner reporters finding news).

Smoke over Jeddah doesn't mean fire

JEDDAH, April 2 — There were no fires in Jeddah on Wednesday night, Arab News learned (the hard way).

This reporter received word from a concerned source at 6 p.m. on Wednesday heavy black clouds spewed from the port area. Evidently, the sources said, the situation has gotten out of control, the newspapers must spread the word to the public.

But once reaching the bellowing smoke, disappointment and elation were the only fires raging on the shores of this sprawling Red Sea city. The reporter, seeing the fire was only the flaring of gas at Petromin, was both elated that lives were not in danger and frustrated over not being able to get the scoop. Yet, the editor expected a story, and write the reporter must.

Senior officials attributed the non-fire to lack of flames. "There is plenty of smoke, but no fires," one official said. He added that the fire-fighting department was not moving extra men in to not fight the non-fire.

One fire prevention specialist did not estimate the damage to be anything.

One leading authority on non-fires said this event is not the most disastrous occurrence that has not happened. "I can remember a few years back when nothing at all didn't happen," said one source, who wasn't knowledgeable in the subject.

This reporter, standing close to the biggest non-fire in Saudi Arabian history did not have to move backwards to prevent not being scorched by the non-flames. "They aren't the biggest non-flames in the world," said one bystander. Luckily no one had to move out of the way of the firemen that weren't there to not fight the fire.

Were invited to another "Goat Grab" the other night. All gentlemen present with the lamb being served without utensils. I am getting pretty good at getting the rice and meat into my mouth without half of it ending up on my lap. At this meal, the lamb was cut into pieces and then buried in rice. You had to feel around until you found something solid and pull.

You can't imagine what was buried in that rice. I felt I was back in Biology class. The man sitting beside me and myself had several conversations as to the identification of what we had come up with; "Is that the liver? No, I think that is part of the brain." "Anyone for a piece of the stomach?" Really a lot of fun.

I am sure that everyone in town is aware that Marie and the children will be returning to Cohasset in July for good. Just can't keep a girl down on the desert once she has seen the big city...We feel that a one year tour of the Middle East is enough and she still refuses to wear that black face veil and walk five paces behind me...

The weather is really getting hot now. Once the desert winds start to blow, the temperature really starts to climb. I don't think the temperature has dropped below 90 degrees (day or night) for the past three weeks. Thank goodness for the Saudi who invented air conditioning.

Have received only a few Mariners since our return. Lots of news about housebreaks and vandalism in the town. This is an area that we could learn from the Middle East. We never lock our doors and never take keys from cars. The crime for this type of crime is very severe plus putting shame upon the parents. To shame them is just about unthinkable as children are taught great respect for all elders...

We had been told a story that we found very hard to believe but on our way toDammamlast week, we finally saw it with our own eyes. Picture if you can, one of those Toyota pick up trucks that drive around town. The Saudi use these trucks for everything; hauling goods, wives, children and camels. We finally got a picture of one of these trucks with a camel sitting in the back. What an advertisement for the company. Will send the picture along with the next article so you can see for vourselves.

See you all in July if not sooner via the Mariner.

The Johnstons

Pilgrim Co-op elects

Shareholders of the Pilgrim Co-operative Bank of Cohasset recently elected Louis Bailey and Charles Humphreys as directors for terms of three years. Edward Mulvey was elected clerk of the corporation for a term of one year.

The report of the president was presented and the condition of the bank appraised. Growth and community service have been, and continue to be, the main theme.

During the year, the bank paid over $100,000 more than last year in dividends, and was able to considerably increase the mortgage portfolio.

In the tradition of co-operative banks, Pilgrim Co-operative continues to serve the people of the area in providing mortgage money for the purchase and construction of homes.

around town

Graduation notices from everywhere are still pouring into the Mariner and we expect Around Town will be riddled with that information for weeks and perhaps months to come.

One important group of graduates who held commencements last Friday were from the CHS Child Development Nursery School and the Cohasset Community Center Nursery School.

At CHS, John Leary, guidance chairman, presented diplomas to the following students, who all plan to attend Osgood kindergarden in the fall: John Maynard, Sarah Douglas, Bobby Gentile, Kate Barrett and Bridget Corkery.

"You were all very well behaved, and we look forward to seeing you at Osgood next year," Leary said.

Jessica Jenkins, who wore a pretty harlequin dress with matching panties, received a promoted certificate as did Vicky Maynard, Katie O'Connor, Emily Spencer, Ryan Sawchuk, Beth Devaney and Nathan Caldwell. While occasional attendance ribbons were received by Kevin Gentile and Jennifer Ripley.

Pat Wunschel, director of the program led the group in morning songs. While a number of students teachers helped during the candy hunt, balloon race and boat races held after the exercises.

At the Community Center, graduated to Osgood were: Jennifer Anstead, David Aronson, Nicole Batts, Brian Buckley, Peter Collins, Timmy Contoy, Penelope Dane, Robin DeVito.

Also, Eric Drysdale, Nathan Fiore, Meredith Hansen, J.T. Hill, Billy Jordan, Michael Russell, Johnny Kinchla, Jennifer Knowles.

And Sarah Besse Kowal, Andrew Kuhn, Peter Mazza, Erin McAllister, Marc Mercurio, Sean Milligan, Andrea Rose and Douglas Schultz.

We were not present for the exercises, but we heard the CCC three-year old nursery students put on a lovely show of songs for "seniors."

Nadine Hohman, 3, takes a break while her mother stops at the town hall antique show sponsored by Beechwood Church.

And of course, parents, friends and nanas and pop-pops were on hand in great numbers to witness both nursery graduations.

☐Unfortunately, Eleanor Croan's retirement dinner (Ms. Croan is a special needs teacher at Deer Hill School) and now former School Supt. John Maloney's open house were scheduled for the same night (last Thursday) and a lot of people complained they would have liked to have attended both parties . In spite of the conflict, we heard both Maloney and Ms. Croan had nice send-offs, and thank you for jobs well-done.

☐Karen Curelli, daughter of Joan and Rudolph, graduated from N.E. Baptist Hospital on May 17 with a diploma of nursing and an associate degree in science. She plans to attend the University of Denver in Colorado to earn a BA in nursing. The CHS graduate will work at Cohasset Knoll Nursing Home this summer while preparing for her state boards.

☐Off to Ted Williams Camp in late June will be Greg Mancini, a Deer Hill student. He is the son of Dr. and Mrs.. Joseph Mancini of Fair Oaks Lane.

☐Christopher Abbruzzese received a varsity numeral at Bowdoin's Lacrosse Award Night.

☐And from the Patriot's Trail Girl Scout Council we learned that Heidi Brown, a senior scout, and a sophomore at CHS, has been selected to participate in the 1980 Voyager's Rendezvous in Minnesota and Ontario June 21-July 11.

Heidi, along with 56 other scouts from across the country will reenact the rough and exciting life of the early fur trappers called the Voyageurs as she canoes on beautiful rivers, campouts, and historical site visits to fur posts in Minnesota and reconstructed Old Fort William in Ontario.

A two-year member of the CHS track team, Heidi also plays the guitar, is involved in advanced life saving lessons and works as a junior volunteer at Paul Pratt.

☐During recent Memorial Day Parade exercises the Gerard Stantons of Clay Spring Road were well represented.

Gerard Stanton, a veteran of WWII, marches as did Jerry, Jr., visiting from Des Moines, Ia., and brother-in-law Rich Hynes. Ike Barker, daughter of Kate Stanton Barker, marched with the local Brownies, while her sister Kristine and cousin Andreas Stanton of Des Moines marched as flower girls.

☐At Trinity College graduation exercises Carl Hurtig, son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Hurtig of Gammons Road received a BA in chemistry. And Penny Kozol, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee Kozol of Atlantic Avenue received a BA in political science.

☐The University of Massachusetts at Amherst graduated three local students: Kathleen Fessler of Forest Avenue received a BA in fine arts/education; Brian Sullivan of Pleasant Street received a degree in general business and finance and Michael Winn of North Main Street received a degree in management.

☐Don't know how we missed this — it happened a while back. During the recent annual spring instrumental concert Chris Williams received the Sousa, all-American Band and Gold Medal Awards. Ted Durant received the all-American Band Award. And Sarah Trask and Beth McGuire shared the band director's award.

Other winners were Stephen Daniels (gold medal jazz and the NBS senior outstanding soloist awards); and John Durant, the NBS sophomore outstanding jazz soloist award.

☐From Bentley College, which held its 61st. commencement May 17, we learned that Theresa Infusino of Hull Street has received a BS in accounting.

And from the University of New Hampshire we were pleased to be informed that Nancy Haskell of Windy Hill Road has received a BS in environmental conservation, and Randall Stelle of River Road has received a BA in economics.

While Karen Curelli of Linden Drive received a diploma from the New England Baptist Hospital School of Nursing. Her completion of the three-year program of studies qualifies her for an associate degree in science from Pine Manor College and entitles her to take the State Board examination for licensure as a nurse in Massachusetts and other states.

☐Susan Maynard of 326 King St. recently received an Associate of Science in Nursing degres from Curry College.

Meet Carl Gandeborn Swedish Ambassador to C.H.

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Sweden couldn't have sent us a more charming ambassador.

With characteristic economy and understatement, blond, blue-eyed 16-year old Carl Gandeborn talked with us about his year in Cohasset as a special member of the senior class.

July 3 he will return to Sweden and enter Aava in the Fall. Aava is a three-year prep school north of Stockholm. He will probably become "An economist (like his father), a politician, lawyer, scientist, historian...or suddenly I may fall in love with chemistry!"

Carl wasn't teeming with revelations about his host country, or Cohasset. Cohasset students are pretty much the same as Swedish students. He did have some compliments for us:

"Education is more competitive here than in Sweden. Class ranks and making the top 10 per cent is very important. Students work hard to make the honor roll," he said, noting he had made it for the last two terms. "There's also more homework, and I think that's good.

"The kids in the United States know their language pretty well. I'd say U.S. kids know English better than the Swedes know Swedish."

Having been exposed to various foreign languages during his Swedish grammar school days, Carl conceded: "English is one of the toughest languages in the world.

"Swedish is a more tonal language." One of the most difficult aspects of learning to speak English was learning to modulate his voice. "When I was in third grade in Sweden we started to read English, but when we started speaking English no one could understand us because we raised and lowered our voices when we talked. We sounded strange."

When Carl moved in with Norma Bubier and her daughter, Mandy, last fall (Mandy's a freshman at Derby), he thought: "Oh, no...I'm going to have to spend a whole year with a family that doesn't put butter on cheese sandwiches." But aside from that big jolt, he discovered meals were pretty regular, and "Americans eat more meat, we eat more fish in Sweden. But there are no pies.

"And, in America the girls are more on the phone," he said, casting a wry look at Mandy.

When he gets back to Sweden he'll be able to stay out after 11 p.m. In Cohasset 11 p.m. was his curfew. And while he won't be able to drive a car until he's 18, that's not really an aggravation, as Sweden has a good bus and subway system. If he hankers for a good old American hamburger, he can bike into Stockholm to McDonalds from Viggbyholm, Cohasset's Swedish counterpart in size and its nearness to the sea.

Carl applied to be in the exchange program through the American/Scandinavian Student Exchange organization. To make the grade he had to write a bevy of essays and submit to several interviews. His father, who visited him on his birthday last November, is an economist in a savings bank organization. His mother is director of buying for a company.

In Stockholm there are no skyscrapers, by law. So, he'll miss his bus trips into Boston and the different feeling one gets "Just by looking up and trying to see the top."

And just in case you're wondering, yes, he'll leave a special girl behind.

It's happening!!

Time out for some 'smaller' type news

By Lois Martin

There are issues which are being neglected, preempted by more auspicious news events. But herein we've time and space for lesser considerations . . . not to mention irreverent hogwash.

About former President Richard Nixon's threat to buy property on the Cape, remember that's a number of miles south of here. Certainly we could hope to be more gracious about his becoming a taxpayer than a New York neighbor was when he bought an apartment there. Someone was quoted as saying: "There goes the neighborhood."

PATCHES

What ever happened to Salvo, that detergent that came in big fat tablets. Seems to me they're taking stuff off the market before I get a chance to use them. If it weren't for mail marked "Occupant," products might be untested by consumers.

Who is more liberal than the wife who gives her husband a backpack for Father's Day?

Summer's when mothers believe the children are eating with fork lifts instead of forks.

I've got this friend who has a fetish about the word 'uptown.' She uses it to describe classy stuff, people or events. Using that frame of reference. I must tell you McChicken is an uptown fast food.

The Tall Ships stunned spectators, especially those who have a proclivity toward patriotism. I didn't see the ships as they sailed into the harbor. But I heard a patriot who did. I heard him describe the "Juan Sebastian . . ." in its majestic enormity coming over the horizon; the American ship which was not as shiny as the foreign ones but distinguished itself by bearing a huge American flag; and old Ironsides which he characterized as being the finest vessel afloat. Still it was my privilege to hear about that great event from someone who knew how to appreciate the awesome heritage of those ships. If you want to know about the tall ships, I recommend you ask a true Patriot.

Beware of a lifestyle which is too expeditious, that gets things done right away. Be suspicious of someone who'll never get caught with a rust stain under her bathroom scale or dust on top of it. Be grateful that it is the privilege of the inveterate procrastinator to allow burned-on or stuck-on saucepans to soak.

And a weather reminder from yesteryear. If your vegetables boil dry, it's (probably) going to rain. Eat your heart out, Don Kent, Dick Albert and that little fellow from Channel 7, you never had my grandmother's incisive meteorological skills.

If there's one thing that ticks me off, it's the number of people who can't wait to take umbrage, to be offended. It's all you can do to be defensive first.

There's a fellow in town who admits he never eats the bodies of his lobster. I questioned him at length about the propriety of that trick. But he might be just the person to sit next to at a lobster feed especially since he doesn't eat the smaller claw either.

When I prattle about the good ole days, I'm not including those horrid home permanents that smelled up the entire house for the weekend. They always overfrizzed your hair, burned your eyes and looked like the devil instead of like Annie.

A darlin' young woman (high schooler) wrote to me, asking the following question: "Are kids today as smart as their parents were?" I'd like to know where on earth she ever got the idea that parents are smart? We haven't known much since we were in the high school. Now and then we, like our children, are astounded by the dimensions of our ignorance. In fact if our kids weren't so smart, we'd have given up on the world two years after we graduated.

Whipple-Menapace

Mr. and Mrs. David Collins Whipple of 119 North Main Street, Cohasset, announce the engagement of their daughter, Dr. Leah Linda Whipple to Dr. Leon James Menapace of Ardmore, Pennsylvania.

The Drs. Whipple and Menapace both received their V.M.D. degrees this month from the University of Pennsylvania School of Veterinary Medicine.

Dr. Whipple was a member of the class of 1969 at Cohasset High School, where she was active in student affairs, a Band member, and participant in S.E.M.S.B.A. She received her A.B. degree from Mount Holyoke College, where she completed premedical requirements. She also toured with the Mount Holyoke College Concert Dance Group and was awarded the 1973 Phi Beta Kappa Prize in Creative Arts for an original work, Bell Dance. While in high school, Dr. Whipple worked as a volunteer at the Science Museum and while in college was employed during the summers at Roberts Animal Hospital, Hanover.

Dr. Menapace is the son of Mrs. Robert H. Menapace of Lansdale, Pennsylvania and the late Mr. Menapace. He attended schools in Berwyn, Pennsylvania and studies at Temple and Drexel Universities, receiving a B.S. in Animal Science from Pennsylvania State University. During his school years he worked at Tredyffrin Veterinary Hospital in Paoli, Pennsylvania.

Dr. Menapace and Dr. Whipple collaborated on Independent Work in Exotic Animals at the Philadelphia Zoo and spent the summer of 1978 as interns in the Etosha National Park in Southwest Africa, now Namibia.

A July wedding is planned.

Skipper softballers run into rocky road

By Rob Tis

An entranced crowd of 300 spectators packed the hill in front of the Pond Street Palace Monday to see the Skipper softballers face Harwich in the opening game of the state tournement.

From the start it was the Jodi Sandblom show, but even Jodi and her mighty warriors couldn't defeat the Harwich Nine. Harwich took the lead at the bottom of the seventh, the final tally being 8-7, Harwich.

It was a pressure cooker from the beginning. In the first Jodi Sandblom smashed a two run homer. Harwich, the home team winning the coin flip, came back with one in their half of the inning.

In the third Lance Norris slammed a long line drive homer scoring two. Harwich rallied in their half of the inning to three runs, tying the score at four. In the fifth, Jodi smashed another homer, this one a solo to put the Skippers up by one.

Once again the small but scrappy Harwich club came back with two runs putting themselves into the lead 6-5. Harwich kept right on track scoring yet another in the sixth.

The Skippers were down but not out. Lance Norris and Karen Froio reached base, setting the scene (2 outs, last innin, 2 runs needed to win) for guess who . . . Jodi Sandblom.

Sandblom, calm, cool and in complete control of herself came up tot he plate and ripped a double scoring two runs and tying the game.

Unfortunately this was all the Skippers could muster up. The bottom of the seventh came and with it some very cheap hits. This did the Skippers in 8-7 but they proved taht their ship doesn't sink very easily.

Harwich coach Cheryl Poore was pleased with her teams victory but when I spoke with her she hit me with a 10 minute harangue about how boys did not beong in girls' sports.

She felt it was not a question of equality but that of talent. She threw out such twitty statements as: "Boys playing softball is like a 200 pound man wrestling a 100 pound man; or a senior taking the same test as a first grader."

She stressed the greater upper body strength of the boys and felt the boys were taking positions away from the girls.

Harwich faces Apponequet next who happens to be ranked number one in this tournament. Good Luck.

As foir the Skippers, the season is over, history is made and they'll get 'em next year.

Guess what, exams start next week

The exam testing sessions are scheduled for one hour and 45 minutes (9-12), and one hour fifteen minutes (7 & 8); 9-12 students are obliged to remain in the testing room for one and one-half hours and may not remain longer than one hour forty-five minutes. Grades 7 & 8 minimum will be one hour, maximum one hour fifteen minutes.

Make-up provisions are scheduled for two sessions on Friday, June 20.

Each teacher will be available for extra help on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday from 1:00 p.m. to 2:40 p.m.

Lunch will be available from 9:30 to 12:15 during the exam period. Breakfast will be available up to 7:55 each day. Buses will run a normal morning pick-up schedule. Buses will leave at 12:10 p.m. with late buses at usual time.

Students who are not taking an exam do not need to be in school. Those who choose to do so will be restricted to the following areas: library, new study hall, cafeteria, Sullivan Gym.

Students who are absent for an exam(s) and are not able to make up on Friday, June 20 will make up the exam(s) during the following week. Provisions and time of make up will be handled by the individual teacher and the student.

To Robert S. Hawker and Thomas J. Hagan, general partners of Hotel Raymond Associates, DBA Hawker-Salisbury Co.
Residence unknown,
GREETING

Whereas a civil action has been begun against you in our Superior Court by Charles M. Moran wherein it is seeking to recover $52,945.00 for services rendered

We COMMAND YOU if you intend to make any defense, that on Monday, the 7th day of July or within such further time as the law allows you to cause your written pleading to be filed in the office of the Clerk of Courts at Worcester, in the County of Worcester, in said Commonwealth, and further that you defend against said suit according to law if you intend any defense, and that you do and receive what the Court shall order and adjudge therein.

Hereof fail not, at you peril, or as otherwise said suit may be adjudged and orders entered, in your absence.

It appearing to this Court that no personal service of the complaint has been made on the defendant, a deputy sheriff having made a return on the summons that after a diligent search he can find no one upon whom he can lawfully make service, a copy of which is hereto attached and made part of this notice, it is ordered that notice of this suit be given to them by publishing a copy of this order once each week for three successive weeks in the Cohasset Mariner, a newspaper published in said Cohasset, the last publication to be at least 20-days before the 7th day of July next.

Witness, JAMES P. LYNCH, JR. at Worcester the 22nd day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty.

Dental Dialogue
CATCH A FALLING TOOTH
Q. Is it true that you can put back teeth that have been knocked out of the mouth?
A. Yes, but it must be done quickly, preferably within the first hour after the accident. Wrap the tooth in a clean wet cloth and find your dentist immediately. He will clean the tooth, treat the root and position the tooth back in its socket. Also some type of brace will be used to secure it. It's really a simple procedure and one that usually works.
This column is presented in the interest of better dental health. From the office of Good Insulation Pays For Itself. Good Insulation is the best way to save heat in winter and keep it out in summer and the better the application, the more you'll save in heating/cooling costs. To protect yourself against rapidly rising fuel costs, be sure you have a minimum of R19 insulation in your attic.

Cohasset police dept. petitions for Smith

Last week all members of the Cohasset Police Department excepting Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge, signed a petition asking selectmen to reinstate former Police Officer Douglas Smith on the Cohasset force.

Simultaneously, Smith's lawyer asked Civil Service to reconsider a ruling which upheld his firing from the police department by selectmen in March 1978. The firing followed a hearing on two charges against Smith. One charge was assault with a dangerous weapon, two charges of being a disorderly person, failing to work a regular shift and calling in sick when the department alleged he was not sick.

Smith's attorney, Alexander Matulewicz, charged that Smith's discharge was an excessive penalty when the only proved specified charge of misconduct was falsely reporting illness on February 13, 1978.

Matulewicz suggested that Smith's only real offence was conduct unbecoming an officer, while off-duty, with a chronic illness: alcoholism. "Alcoholism is recognized by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the American Medical Association as a disease, and to the extent that Smith has controlled it for over two years, that must be taken into account."

Matulewicz also is asking Civil Service to take into account Smith's work record, which shows that even while suffering from alcoholism, has been exemplary. Prior to his suspension on March, 1978, Smith had taken only one sick day.

Civil Service is also being asked to consider the disposition of another suspended police officer in the town, similarly situated. Matulewicz noted that selectmen recently voted to reinstate Feola on the force after a one-year suspension, and after a jury had convicted him of a felony, and Feola had allegedly "Clearly shown the potential of having an alcohol problem due to the nature of the charges. according to Matulewicz.

The hearing officer for the Civil Service recommended a two-year suspension for Smith, and found Smith guilty of feigning illness one time, with two instances of misconduct being due to alcoholism.

One reason for Smith's appeal of the recent Civil Service finding is based on a conversation between then acting police chief Lt. Charles Stockbridge and members of the board of selectmen in February 1978.

In an affidavit, Stockbridge said he had recommended suspending Smith for five days without pay. However, Stockbridge said a selectman allegedly said he wished to get rid of both officers (Smith and another officer) a month before Smith's hearing which Smith feels shows the punishment was predetermined.

Also in an affidavit, Police Chief Randolph Feola said:

"I found him to be, in the three years and four months that he was in our department, a hard working, conscientious police officer. he had a well-defined sense of responsibility and he never took a drink while on duty.

"Because of Doug's participation in the Boston Police Stress Program and AA, I feel he has acquired the same knowledge as past members of the stress program and one other officer of my department is benefiting from the program because of Doug's participation and what we have learned as a result of Doug's participation."

An affidavit signed by James Connors, Senior Chief Petty Officer in the U.S.N.R. stationed at So. Weymouth Naval Air Station states that in early November, 1979, Smith was found to be both physically and psychologically qualified for acceptance into the U.S.N.R., and in April, 1980, Smith was re-enlisted into the program of the advanced paygrade program of Petty Officer 3rd Class.

Democratic candidates for representatives discuss the 'issues' in tri-town meet

Last Thursday, three Democratic candidates for State Representative (a seat presently held by Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray, R-Cohasset) were present at the forum in Hull moderated by former State Rep. Caroline Stouffer. Edmund Demko of Hingham, the fourth candidate, was absent reportedly as a result of a death in his family.

Special interest groups present from all three towns made it difficult for candidates to respond to a bevy of loaded questions, many of which had little and nothing to do with a state representative's responsibilities.

Interestingly, John Conwell of Hull and Edmund Demko of Hingham chose not to respond to Ms. Stouffer's newsletter questions of June 3, Conwell replying via a letter (printed in Ms. Stouffer's newsletter) that he preferred to communicate directly with voters, and asked for Ms. Stouffer's list, which she declined to turn over.

No reason was given for Demko's having declined the invitation.

However, Richard Doherty of Hingham and Theodore (Ted) Ford of Cohasset both responded to the questionnaire.

Conwell, a U.S. Army Veteran, former Mass. State Trooper, a former investigator for the organized crime division of the Attorney General's Office, Assistant District Attorney for Plymouth County and a practicing Hull attorney, stated he felt the third Plymouth District has been gerrymandered to "deprive" voters of former State Rep. Stouffer. "I don't believe it went unnoticed that she worked very hard on our behalf."

He cited as area problems the construction of a pier in Hull, and traffic problems in Hingham. He did not mention any specific problems in Cohasset.

Taking a jab at Rep. Murray, Counsel said "The representative's views on state government may

Portrait of Burtram J. Pratt

Certain things remain the same. In Rev. E. Victor Bigelow's A Narrative History of Cohasset (1898) there is an ancient photograph of Squire Aaron Pratt sitting in an amazing clutter and disarray; piles of papers and books, pigeonholed and packed haphazardly in a way that must have taxed the patience of the fastidious Reverend when he set out to record the facts in the historical case of Cohasset, including the long history of the Pratts.

By Bernie Quigley

The bewiskered patriarch sat for another photo, stern and proper, and that photo hangs on the wall of Burtram J. Pratt's study in his house at 75 Ripley Road. The house is modern and well kept, yet the piles of papers and records seem to have made a strange transformation through time out of the ancient photo and into the present day study of the ancestor.

There is a six-foot pile of newspapers against the left wall, and four foot-high piles of papers and clippings across the desk. Follow down across the room through the centuries: stacks of records by Nelson Eddy, and Bing Crosby by the pound. Show tunes and old shellac records; uncatalogued, bought in lot from someone's attic.

On the wall to the left hangs a photograph of Mary Francis Antoine, Burt Pratt's grandmother, and through these two ancestors he is related to half the population of Cohasset.

The phonography records piled on the floor are not his favorites; he prefers Red Nickles and the Five

Cohasset's week

Nurse sub rates

Recently, the school committee voted to increase the substitute rate for school nurses from $21 to $28 a day. In addition, 5 per cent increases were voted for instructional aids, activity aides, library aides, librarians, transportation coordinators, media technical, food service technicians and secretaries, bus drivers, and others.

President Equi

Dr. Michael Equi will be installed as President of the Cohasset Rotary Club at a special outdoor meeting June 30.

Dr. Equi will receive the gavel from retiring President Don Harrold. Fred Johansen will move from club Secretary to the Vice President's chair being vacated by Dr. Equi. Peter Logan will become club secretary, while Edward F. Goff will retain his post as Treasurer.

Installation night will be held on the grounds of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Scott, 1 Ocean Avenue, North Scituate and will include a pool party an1 buffet dinner.

Members of the new board of directors, in addition to the officers, are John E. Sadler, John Lennon, and retiring president Harold, ex officio.

The club's annual clambake will be held later in the summer at the home of vice president elect FredJohansen, 20 King St. Both events are billed as ladies' nights.

Mother's march

Through the efforts of many Cohasset residents, $151 was collected in the recent door-to-door drive to benefit the March of Dimes. Money raised through the Mother's March is used to fund March of Dimes programs in birth defects research and prevention. This year's Honorary Mother's March Chairman was Jody King, wife of Governor Edward J. King.

Anyone still having a kit should return it to the March of Dimes at 865 Providence Highway, Dedham, Mass. 02026. If you have any questions, please call the March of Dimes at 329-1360.

Sr. class elections

CHS recently held class elections and town government officials, we hear, could take some lessons from the enthusiasm, slogans and promises which were made in the halls and classrooms.

Jerry White was elected president of the Class of '81, Steve Saleski was elected treasurer. Hanna Clinton and Dean Brown were elected to the student advisory board, Pam Johnston was elected vice president and Jane Higgins is secretary.

Yearbook staff

The Class of '81 recently elected Connie Grant and Caroline Wampole yearbook editors for next spring's issue. Organizations editor will be Lori Stobart, business manager and treasurer Steve Saliski, senior editor Stephen Winn, advertising Rick O'Brien, sports editors Todd Langford and Hanna Clinton, photography editor Mark Wilkin, layout and design Dean Brown and proofreader Brenda Berman.

CHS business mgr.

Recently, the school committee voted unanimously to renew business manager John Raftery's contract for two years, with a five per cent raise the first year. He also received a $100 per month travel allowance retroactive to June 2, and for as long as he is acting school supt.

Boat

The contract to build a new boat for the harbormaster was awarded to Monahan Marine of Weymouth, the high bidder at $7,600 — at a recent selectmen's meeting. The Mariner of Plymouth was the low bidder at $7,160. Selectmen rejected the low bid because the company neglected to submit a deposit check of $100.

Final police chief interviews scheduled June 26

Selectmen will interview three candidates for Cohasset Police Chief at an open meeting scheduled for Thursday, June 26 from 9 a.m. to 12 noon.

Stanely Stankiewicz, 50, has been a captain with the Pittsfield Police Department since 1970 and a member of the department since 1952.

John A. DeBassio, 49, has been a sergeant with the Brockton Police Department since 1977, and a member of the department since 1963.

Police Chief Edward Haraden, 52, has been chief of the Wenham Police Department (the department is non-Civil Service) since 1959.

Stankiewicz has a bachelor of science degree from Southern Vermont College which he received in June, 1980. His professional training includes over 44 courses taken at the FBI National Academy.

As a captain in the department, he is in charge of five divisions: administration, investigation, clerical, technical and supervisory, and community and press relations.

He is a member of the local health planning agency, United Way and the Boy Scout Council. He is married with four children ranging in ages from 20-26 years of age.

Stankiewicz has special training as an accountant. His hobbies are: sailing, water skiing, cross-country skiing, fishing, gardening, camping and woodworking.

In a written question from the police chief selection committee, Stankiewicz said he believed in daily evaluation of men, with formal ratings being done twice a year.

DeBassio supervises 50 officers on the Brockton department. He has an MS from Northeastern in administration and two years of graduate school. He has taken eight professional courses at the FBI National Academy.

He is a Navy veteran (1948-52) having achieved the rank of QM3. He is past president of numerous professional organizations and a teacher of criminal justice at three colleges, with special interest in drug abuse.

While a member of the Brockton department, he has served as detective, sergeant, commander of the narcotics and anti-crime units. He has six years of supervisory experience.

DeBassio serves on the Mayor's advisory commission on drugs, the State Board of Mental Health, and is a director of the American Red Cross. He is past president of the Brockton MPA, Brockton Police Relief Association, Plymouth County Narcotis Association and was founder of the Massachusetts Narcotics Association.

In 1970 he received the community service award from the Brockton Jaycees; in 1974 he received a special enforcement citation for having seized two million dollars worth of hard drugs, and he has been the recipient of the outstanding service award from the Massachusetts Narcotics Association and other awards.

His hobbies are travel, golf, target shooting,

Pratt

Pennies or the Black Eagles — New Orleans Jazz — they are just piled there because Pratt collects records.Records, facts and documents of all kinds.

When Pratt retires in two years, much of his time will go into the restoration of the Lothrop House at 14 Summer Street creating a library and museum for the Town of Cohasset. Among other things, the Lothrop House will preserve in a concrete vault the records and documents that went into the writing of A Narrative History of Cohasset, Vol. 2, written by Pratt in 1956.

After the war he worked for the Patriot Ledger as a reporter for five cents an inch (that is, less than one cent per typed line) which must have qualified him for the salary he would pull on the Narrative History: $700 for seven years' work.

Not that he wanted more. In fact, he had to bid for the job. The competition was Lucy Treat, "a fine woman," he says, and "a good writer" (who worked for the town as librarian in the Paul Pratt Memorial Library). They both submitted chapter outlines to the Committee of Town History and he won the competition.

To read the two volumes of Narrative History back to back presents a journey through history in form as well as content. It was appropriate that a minister, the Rev. Bigelow wrote the first volume, and in 1898 it was probably necessary. As a minister he was likely to be one of the few men in the area with the background and general education needed to tackle the job. And with the common first names listed in the index being Noah, Moses, Lot and Job, a minister was likely to understand the sense of things.

But Burt Pratt is a man of the present and came to the job with the professional training and eye for fact and detail of a journalist. "Not the least of the difficulties encountered in selecting the work was the tendency of the average person to dwell on the definition of history as something that belongs to the past," he states in the Author's Preface to Vol. 2, "Ours is a history of our own times!"

In fact, Vol. II is a journey from the hard, pilgrim soil and rocky ground into the metamorphosis of the 20th century. Cohasset groans into the First World War, the Great Depression, the Second World War, and adjusts at the end to a new world of veterans, divided estates, and suddenly a very large number of children, not many of whom are named Noah.

Pratt's volume also teaches you a few things that you might not have expected to learn. Like how to swell the wheels on a horse and buggy if you still happen you have one. Or how to prepare the soil to grow onions. And if you don't know who "John, the banana man," was or what the "Jerusalem swill cart" was you are missing some of the finer details in the delicate fabric that is the history of Cohasset.

"Vol. II," said Pratt, "will be due in the year 2,000, and by then the old records will be preserved in the Lothrop House for whoever comes along next."

Whoever that yet undiscovered scholar will be must also have the wisdom to follow Burt Pratt around, for his stories and anecdotes are endless. And of course, he or she must understand by then, the secret of that future exterprise is somewhere within the clutter.

Don't leave it for the police

By Eric Pearson

Where did the drug-alcohol problem start? In our schools? In the police department? With our teachers? I hardly think so. Any builder will tell you that if you build your home on a weak foundation it will develop cracks, leaks, and may even collapse. The builder also knows that, until you correct the problem, the cracks and leaks will remain.

The examples we set, as parents, to our children are their foundations. What kind of example are you setting? Is your cocktail party more important than helping your son or daughter with homework? Is it "Tennis anyone?" Sunday morning instead of "It's time for church," or "Sunday School"? Does the "tee-off" at 6:30 a.m. take the place of a walk with your children in the beautiful countryside that surrounds us?

Perhaps our children see us being over-familiar with our friend's wife (or husband). Then, who do we blame when they become teenaged, unwed mothers or fathers?

How many times have we referred to crooked politicians, corrupt police and incompetent judges without doing anything about it? It's a little wonder that our children turn to drugs and alcohol. When that happens, what is your reaction? Are you the Dr. Spock "let them do their own thing — they have to express themselves" parent? Do you blame someone else before you take a look around your own house? If you do, you have sown the seeds and you will reap the harvest.

The time is now to speak up against:

— the "bleeding heart liberals" who supported the destroyers of the private property at Seabrook, (incidentally, I respect those few who are really sincere in their feelings about nuclear-power even though I don't personally agree with them).

— those "tunnel vision" liberal judges on the bench who thwart the legal system by interpreting the laws as they see fit instead of how they were written (small wonder the police are reluctant to arrest teenaged drug offenders).

— those in the legal profession who run discount ads for "el-cheapo" divorce or "sue your neighbor for $49.95", etc. and then run off with the client's money (that happened last week).

— the wealthy "candidates for office" who champion every minority group and cause, while they sit in their $500,000 homes drinking Chevas Regal and planning their "Soirees" to the Islands with their "trust fund" incomes.

Had enough? Then it's time for you to stand up and speak out against those groups and individuals who are leading us into a Godless society. Perhaps a few hours re-reading "The Rise and Decline of the Roman Empire" would bring us to reality.

If your family foundation needs repair, rebuild it now. Don't leave it to your schools and police departments to do it for you. They will never be as capable as you are. If you need help, don't be ashamed to ask for it. Tell your children that you love them as often as you can and prove it by your actions.

Strange: I can't remember the last time I met a poor "liberal."

Villains, victims, mothers, hamburgers

. . . Victims of domestic violence are usually mothers and children, although there are sure to be exceptions to this stereotype.

In light of staffer Karin Bartow's recent series on domestic violence, and having received this week a proposal from Norfolk County District Attorney William Delahunt regarding the same . . . we offer the following comments.

Delahunt said the House Committee on Ways and Means is considering legislation which would increase the fee for a marriage certificate from $4 to $9 — the difference which would be used to fund shelters for victims of domestic violence. He also suggested a surcharge might be put on divorce petitions.

We don't particularly care how shelters are subsidized; we agree they are necessary. But we also feel state and federal government might be overlooking something important here.

Victims of domestic violence are hardly dangerous to society. So why remove them from society? The best support systems for victims of domestic violence may well be friends, neighbors, teachers, ministers and other professionals in the community.

If it is deemed by policemen or other professionals that certain individuals should flee for their safety, then we feel another judgment can also be made. That judgment being that the violent member of that family be taken to a shelter, under protective custody, where he or she can receive professional help. State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray said this week Delahunt is also looking into family counseling — but he didn't tell us about that in his release.

. . . If hamburger prices increased at the same rate as medical costs over the past 20 years we would pay $4.20 a pound.

. . . Town government survives by a process of innovative self-destruction. Which is to say, it compulsively develops new and better ways (sometimes) of doing things — making obsolete the very practices which strengthened it in an earlier time.

The police chief selection committee did bypass some fine members of the Cohasset Police Department when it recently selected three out-of-towners as final candidates. We trust the selection was done clinically. We have no reason to think it was not. The resumes of the three finalists are outstanding (see article this issue) in every respect.

The police department, the town, the state are all in a process of evolution which may result in an even better method of choosing town employees. In the meantime, we might add continuing revolutions are almost invariably untidy. When the rules change, there is outrage, understandably. For senior men in the department, it's similar to a CHS senior being told grades and SRA test scores no longer count in gaining admission to college.

Some South Shore police departments do promote from within. The men in the Hull Police Department recently took the exam for chief and only one passed. He will be chief. We can see the pros and cons of staying in and going outside.

But now that we have this course, now that the police chief selection committee has broken ground by selecting candidates from without . . . we hope selectmen follow its lead by opening positions on the police department and other town departments to outsiders. Offering town jobs exclusively to persons residing within the town is limiting in all respects.

. . . We respectively suggest that mothers who know their children are drinking behind the sandpile immediately go to that sandpile, grab the offending offspring by the ear, and take it home. Just a reminder — when you see the lengthy police log we publish weekly . . . that is only one quarter, a sampling, of the calls the police department responds to every five or ten minutes of every day. Parents must begin to assume some responsibility.

. . . Correction: Selectmen Chairman Arthur Clark did not say police officers and auxiliary policemen were ignoring the problems of minors in possession of alcohol in the town. Clark said the above mothers, present at a recent selectmen's meeting, stated the same.

. . . Queries from lots of you wondering how to get columnist status on the Mariner. Simple. Write something. That's how Chet Ellis, Caroline Wampole, Larry Fone, Anne Marie Young and more recently, Eric Pearson, began. They all had something to say.

Preferably, we'd like commentary revolving around local issues. But almost everything happening in the United States is a local issue.

Unfortunately, we can't pay you. If you write often enough you get taken to dinner occasionally. If you'd like help putting a commentary together — we'll offer suggestions, advice.

. . . Residents are dumping trash outside the disposal area again and Skinny Laugelle is livid. Please stop doing that, ok? It's bad enough when the raccoons get into the garbage. We expect a little more compassion from a human.

She borrowed his title

To the Editor:

I would like to thank Chip Figueriedo for lending me his title — A Cohasset High — which I used in my June 5th article on drugs in the Mariner. He had used that title on an English paper.

In the rough draft I had given him credit, but in rewrite credits got left out. Thank you, Chip.

Drug bill support asked

To the Editor:

I respectfully request that the Cohasset Mariner consider support of two legislative proposals (H.6651 and H.6652) submitted by Governor King last week. The Governor's proposals will significantly aid the Commonwealth in its effort to curtail drug trafficking and the distribution of drug paraphernalia.

Letters

As Secretary of Public Safety, I believe it is critical that this legislation be enacted before the end of the current legislative session. Frankly, I can think of no higher priority. It is imperative that we provide deterrence and certainty of punishment for those who deal in dangerous drugs and for those who seek to smuggle such substances into Massachusetts.

I know the Cohasset Mariner shares the concerns of the Governor and me in seeking to curtail major drug distribution and drug abuse.

Drug use involves the entire spectrum of our citizenry, rich and poor, young and old — are affected. The addict who lives from hour to hour, the person who abuses prescription drugs are affected. More importantly, the future of our most important resource — our children — is imperiled. We can no longer allow our society to be threatened by those who have no interest in us, our safety and our welfare.

Enormous profits are being amassed by organized crime and others by dealing in massive quanitities of these harmful and physically destructive substances. Based on reliable information I have received from respected federal and state officials, we can expect

Fortunate to have Mary Benbow

To the Editor:

On June 11, I attended the Joseph Osgood Communication Meeting.

I would like to convey to others how fortunate our children are to have Mary Benbow as part of our school system. Her discussion on the hand-writing program was so informative and her extensive research concerning this subject was disçussed fully.

The hand-writing program was implemented this year in the elementary grades.

We are extremely fortunate to live in a town where the concerns of our children are fully met and having Mary Benbow on the school staff we know our children are exposed to the very best.

Lots of CHS interest in an energy efficient Cohasset

By Anne Marie Young
CHS Senior

Early in June in CHS alternative school organized an energy day for the purpose of aspousing and arousing motivation in energy conservation among students.

Various events were scheduled throughout the school day — and while none of us were able to attend every event, teachers took the opportunity to escort their classes to the events.

A film entitled Energy From the Day Star (a comprehensive report on the state of the art of solar energy) was presented, as was a bicycle presentation by Bob Lindsey from Cohasset Cycle Sports. The bicycle presentation covered mopeds, racing bikes, touring bikes, rollers, equipment, maintenance, conditioning and legislation on a proposed bike-path through the town. It is possible the state intends to have us all, should the energy crisis worsen, bike to Boston in the future.

Two more films: A Thousand Suns and Happy Tuesday Recycling were followed by a film made by Mrs. Burbank's 7th Grade English class called Trash Man at the Dump.

Alternate energy activities were sponsored by the CHS physical education department — activities included bike races, skateboard races, rollerskating and foot races, after which Gary Gilbert, a representative from the Urban Solar Energy Association, gave a slide talk on low-cost, energy-efficient housing.

During fifth period that day the CHS debating team resolved that: nuclear power is a safe and economical source of energy for the United States. Pro nuclear energy debaters were Phil Dormitzer and Rob Tis. Con debaters were Sue Bird and Patty Walsh.

Mrs. Alcott's students presented a slide-tape on recycling: Braintree vs. Cohasset. And Daryl Every, from the governor's office, presented a slide talk on energy conservation entitled "You've Got The Power."

Mrs. Wood's classes displayed energy materials, energy poetry was presented by Ms. Coultrip's class, and Mrs. Wool's classes exhibited energy audio-visuals. Very impressive was an energy-efficient home model made by Stu Cahill.

Steve Bowen displayed a solar cooker, while Herb Brown exhibited a solar heater. And Mrs. Tribeman's classes made the energy day decorations.

Everyone, just about, contributed to another successful energy day at CHS. Thanks to all in the school community who have demonstrated their interest in making CHS and Cohasset cleaner and more energy-efficient!

Drugs

to see an immediate and significant increase in the trafficking of illegal drugs — particularly heroin — into the Commonwealth. Federal authorities are expressing concern over the alarming increase of so-called "white" heroin from the troubled nations of Southwest Asia into our Eastern cities.

The glamourization of the level of acceptance of this physically destructive behavior can be documented by simply visiting many retail outlets where drug paraphernalia is openly sold and by reading popular publications.

Together, we can put those who are infecting our society on notice that in Massachusetts they shall pay the proper penalties. Our citizens deserve no less, for it is they who are bearing the emotional and financial burden of the disruption in their homes and schools, increases in crime and despair of seeing our youth mentally and physically damaged by drugs of every description. Your newspaper can play an important role in the reversal of this insidious activity by endorsing the Governor's recommendations.

To assist you in this effort, I am enclosing a summary of the two bills which should prove to be both helpful and informative.

In closing, I look forward to working with you in this endeavor and if I may be of further assistance, please do not hesitate to contact me at (617) 727-7775.

Sincerely,
George A. Luciano
Secretary of Public Safety

ED.'S NOTE: House Bill 6652 involves three major points: manadatory sentencing for major drug traffickers based on the quantity and kind of drugs; mandatory sentencing for dealers for dangerous drugs to children and teenagers; mandatory sentencing for habitual drug violators.

House Bill 6651 is an act providing criminal penalities for certain acts relating to drug paraphernalia. This bill would make it a crime to: possess drug paraphernalia with the intent to use it in connection with illicit drugs; sell drug paraphernalia to a minor; advertise drug paraphernalia, knowing that the purpose of the advertisement is to promote the sale of the object for use with illicit drugs.

Pampered campers not allowed at Cohasset Community Center

A camp especially for preschoolers, will begin its first session on July 7. This special summer camp is sponsored by the Cohasset Community Center and the program is designed to meet the needs and abilities of 3 to 5 year olds. Emphasis of the program will be on outdoor activities and physical development.

Camp Director Mrs. Sandra Putnam has directed the Community Center Nursery School program for the past five years and has served as a counselor in several camp programs including Camp Daniel Webster.

Three two week sessions will be held. Children will attend daily from 9 a.m. to noon. The minimum enrollment is two weeks. Children must be three years old and toilet trained. For further information call the Center daily at 383-0088 or Director Mrs. Putnam at 545-3002 after 3 p.m.

Play your cards right.

Business cards that is.

They're inexpensive, unobtrusive little things, but they make an impression and have a way of enduring. People keep them — just in case.

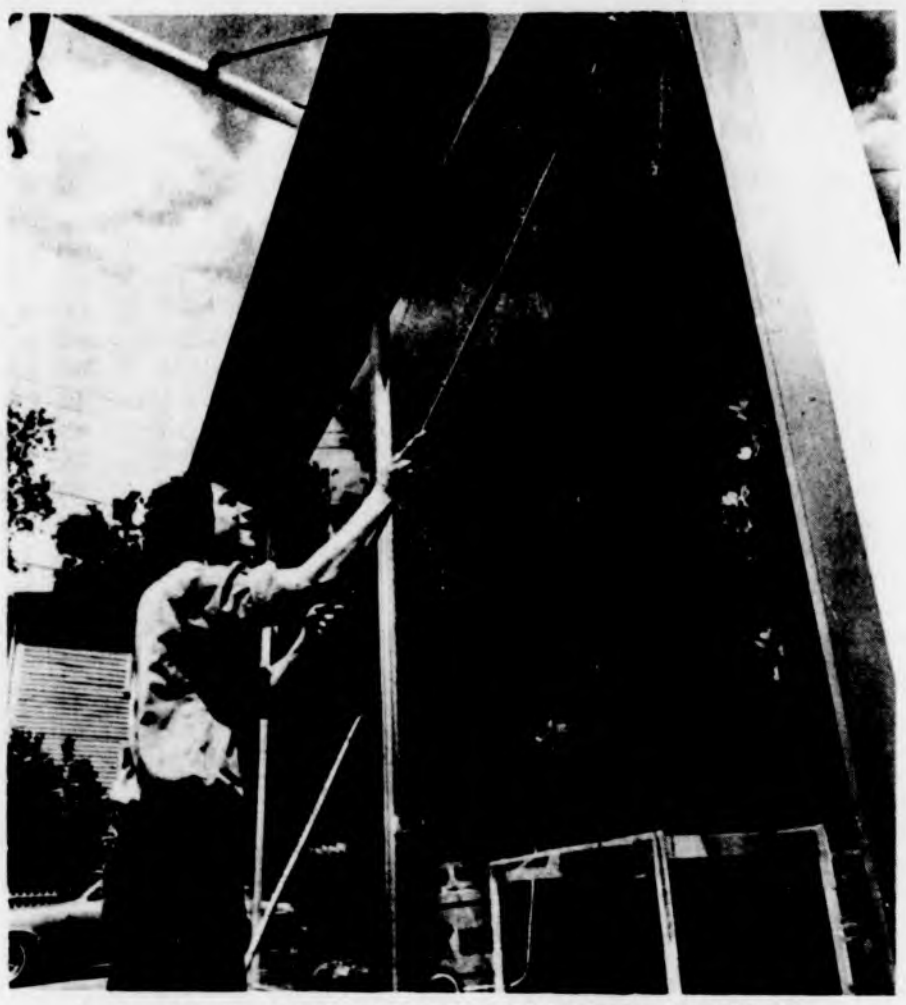
around town



ALL THE BETTER TO SEE YOU, COHASSET HARDWARE — Ed Marchesi washing windows on a bright, sunny day.

☐You are required to have a 1980 beach "permit" in order to pass through the gates of Sandy Beach as usual this summer. A small requirement that only takes five minutes to fulfill at the police station.

There is, however, a new, sportier Sandy Beach sticker this year and if you haven't replaced it in the envelope in which it came with a donation to the association that manages and maintains our sandy paradise, you should feel guilty! So don't — feel guilty — and mail a contribution towards your summer vacation!

☐Birthday candles blazed all over town this week. They probably do every other week, but June brings out the celebration in us and we "heard" about more than usual! (We love to hear about birthdays, babies, anniversaries, marriages, engagements, parties — you name it, we'll write it!)

•A new "match birthday" club was hatched this week when friends congregated at the Red Lion Inn to celebrate two June 13 birthdays — Tanna Kasperowitz's and Martha Sharpe's (they were both born the same year, but they feel that information is irrelevent!). It was learned, too late for the party, that Debbie Martin also shared the same birthday — next year!

Other friends who eagerly dropped everything to join the lunch party were Peggy Ramsey (born Jan. 28 — note: she had the afternoon off from her duties in the selectmen's office), Joan Bravo (Aug. 9 — Joan took a bit of the afternoon off from her duties at Cohasset Central Market; eat your heart out Lou!), Trisha Massa (March 11 — a quick lunch between appointments), Laura Doherty (December 12 — it took under a minute to talk her out of her weeds) and Karin Bartow (Dec. 9 — I, of course, was working!)

Ladies, if you can match any of those birthdays, come join us! Men are cordially not invited.

•Many happy returns also to Martha Eqi and Kit Bursk!

☐The high school jazz band has done it again! Another first prize trophy (and $300) for first place in the jazz ensemble division of the Heritage Music Festival held recently in Mystic, Conn. The Cohasset musicians competed against 17 other bands from the eastern states.

☐Eli Manchester of 61 Nichols Road has been presented a Dean Junior College Alumni Distinguished Service Award. He is president and chief executive officer of Boston Insulated Wire and Cable Company.

☐The following students have been named to the Dean's List for the spring semester at Fitchburg State College:

Carolyn Goodwin of Buttonwood Lane, in nursing, and Charles and Mark Patrolia of Cedar Acres Lane, both industrial arts students.

Dean's List placement requires an average grade for the semester of 3.20 or better and full-time attendance at the college.

☐More graduation notices:

•Susan Cahill, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Cahill of 405 South Main St., received a bachelor degree in biology from Boston University in three years! Susan entered B.U. as a sophomore after completing the equivalent of one year's college work through five advanced placement courses at Cohasset High School.

She just finished taking the GRE's (graduate placement exams) in order to continue her studies in biology. She hopes to be working soon in a research lab.

Although Susan is living in Boston, she is proud of the fact that she's a Cohasset "townie" (and we expect that means she'll be back to stay some day!).

•Sally and Fred Woods had two graduations in their family this year: Freddie, from Thayer Academy and Mark, from Mass. Maritime Academy.

•Patricia Guiggio received a BA degree from Boston College;

•Jean Sturdy graduated from Bryn Mawr College in Pennsylvania;

•and Richard McIntosh received a BS degree and 2nd lieutenant's commission in the Army Reserve from Norwich University, Northfield, Vermont.

Good luck to all!

Making the past seem new - Sea Heather Antiques

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Harbor tradesmen are in a bustling, flourishing state of anticipation over the promise of those lovely busloads of tourists, Music Circus patrons strolling the sidewalks, and day-trippers from everywhere sure to descend upont he narrow ways of Cohasset at any moment, now.

Greeting its first summer as a full-fledged Harbor merchant is Sea Heather Antiques, which is charged with a succession of marvelous events to widen the eyes.

Don't let the smallness of the shop fool you. Just about now the enterprising five young women who own the shop have completed a photo album of items stocked in various locations in town which can be personally admired by appointment.

Barbara Weisenfluh and Millie Mitman had originally thought they might open a tennis shop. But when Jeanne Repogle, Robbie Broeffle and Donna O'Connor joined in on the idea of a shop of their own, Sea Heather Antiques seemed a natural thing to do, all five women being collectors in their own right.

All merchandise is in moving condition, which means in shop-talk you can use it in you home immediately. It's been cleaned, polished, refinished, upholstered, repaired, whatever. And everybody is a buyer.

On a recent buying trip to Virginia, Millie happened upon a woman who makes hand-made gizzard baskets. She also found crocks.

The handmade placemats are from Pennsylvania, and they can be ordered in various colors. But the women do their major buying right in Massachusetts, at auctions and from individual sellers. And they follow the escapades of their friends, the Peddlars II with an eagle eye.

Barbara buys Victorian and oak pieces, while the rest of the group's tastes can only be termed "electric," according to Millie. You might find just about anything at Sea Heather Antiques. It's a surprise kind of shop.

Remember the bubble gum machines of the 1940-50 era? When you put you penny in and turned the key the bubble gum almost always invariably dropped on the floor if you didn't catch it in time. Sea Heather has one.

When we visited, there was a Haywood/Wakefield wicker potty/eating chair . . . a mother could put a baby in that chair for the first two years of its life, removing it for naps, only. It might make a nice planter, today.

THE HARBOR AREA welcomes Sea Heather Antiques, the little shop with decorating know-how. [Derr photo]

Hand-colored English prints of Boston from the Illustrated London News are charming. The wooden easle is not for sale. The sleigh seat could be used as a swing, candle sconces could be created from the cigar molds with a little ingenuity (Sea Heather always lets you think it was your idea, and not its.)

Toy collectors would go in debt to own the little primitive wooden oxen toy, but it's priced reasonably, so there's no need.

Oak tables, Chippendale Centennial chairs, a Sheriden diningroom table and chairs, pear-shaped ice cream molds, butter churns, a Choisonne enameled metal bowl . . . a hunting horn which could be used as a fire blower . . . six old ice cream stools . . .

Sea Heather's intention is not necessarily to break new ground . . .it's vision is to make the past seem new.

I think I've got to have that bubble gum machine.

Village shop talk

By Larry Fone

Trees will be planted in Cohasset Village. Two weeks ago Peter Laugelle and Harold Litchfield told the Cohasset Harbor and Village Association that the planting of three trees in the village will take place shortly.

Three trees were selected as a trial planting, to determine costs, placement, sidewalk areas, etc. The first trees will be planted according to Betsy Hoopes' fine plan for plantings in the entire village, with a continuing program for the fall.

Three trees may not sound like much, but a tree in the village has been unknown for many years. Anyone who wishes to donate a tree in memory of a family member should contact Gene Price. The cos is $135 — and an appropriate brass plaque will be made.

Kitchen stove...friend or foe

By Lois Martin

Few material possessions are more important to a woman than her stove. Not that she's longing to spend her life with it. But she knows what a good stove can do for her and what a cantankerous one can do to her.

So we have firm opinions about stoves. We swear by gas or electric, two ovens or one, deepwells or whatever. The older we get, the more unrelenting we are about what we want in our stove.

I could almost be persuaded to have one like Aunt Ruth had years ago in Brooksville. In fact I'd love it if I didn't have to use it all the time. Her's was a charmer, sliding doors up top to keep a cozy muffin warm for a late arriver, or supper for someone who wasn't home yet. But with schedules we keep now, we've surrendered much atmosphere in a stove for expediency. But I'm still unwilling to give up long-cooking, swell smelling recipes that serve to inspire the appetite of anyone who comes through the kitchen door.

PATCHES

I maintain you'll never make the time-honored cook into a thoroughly modern one. That is, she'll insist of browning her breads, her beans, her pastries and her pot roasts. That's going to be a whale of a challenge in some of the micro wave ovens.

I'll come right out and admit I favor a gas stove. I'm even looking into store model ovens at the new pilotless ones and I'm at an age and stage of discussing microwaves once they get the bugs out of there and assure me my skin won't crisp when I put my arm in there.

Perhaps 10 years ago you could have sold me on an electric range. I had a snazzy one but it was too close to the sink. And I had this habit of leaning a wet hand on the stainless steel sink while wiping around the electric burners. My hair was curlier back then but I like to think my eyes will light up without an outside energy source.

No, it was the Blizzard of '78 which solidified my choice of gas. That stove kept us warm, provided hot food, and it's knocked out all my sentimental reasons for having the electric variety.

Don't misunderstand me. Mine's no showpiece. I don't believe it ever was. It came with the house. I looked it over, knowing it would either be an adversary or an advocate. I soon learned it had its own temperature guage independent of what degree I chose with the dial. But it only aberates 25 degrees too hot. That's not hard to remember. And it has much to commend it — four burners and one big oven. The fan's never been much except noise. The clock gave out during a thunder storm last year. And I've never used the time set thing because I never understood how it worked. I had to rely on me to get her going and shut her down.

But on any stove there's been a feature which has haunted and embarrassed me since I first heard about it...the broiler.

I don't broil. I don't believe I know how to do it properly. So far as I'm concerned it's a flame thrower. It sets things on fire, smokes a lot and scares me to death. I've never been sure if I should leave the little door closed or open.

And I've given the whole thing up. Charcoal is the only kind of broiling I go for. And it's always bothered me. Broiling shows up a lot in classy recipes for tomatoes, steaks, hors d'oeuvres. And there am I still secretly baking when I'm supposed to be broiling. But I'm getting too old to keep singeing off my eyebrows.

I bring this matter forward, I suppose, based on some warped sense of guilt because I'm toying with the notion of replacing my old faithful stove. It saved the day in the blizzard. It turned out coffee cakes, pies, soups, and casseroles. It kept shoveling food into the mouths of cold snow shovelers. It was our mainstay. When nothing else worked, it did. On chilly days it'll bake a potato and share the warmth to spare the furnace. And for a thank-you in the summer it only gets a glance askance because it overheats a kitchen that's up to 80 degrees already.

But it's not a goner yet, no more than its mistress. In fact, that stove and I have a lot in common. We aren't as eyecatching as the svelte microwaves but we can still go full speed on all four burners. We never know what time it is; our fans create more noise and hot air than we get rid of.

It's true newer models have fancy features. But my stove and I, we're reliable. You can count on us to be there, old-fashioned, slow cooking and never broiling...under any weather conditions known to occupants.

Paul Pratt gets lots of 101 birthday gifts

Cohasset children are invited to a 101st birthday celebration taking place at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, which is in it's 101st year. A huge blue and white, multi-layered cake is being whipped up by library volunteer Liz Glasfeld. As each child reads 10 books another candle will be added to "Paul Pratt's Cake" in the children's room.

The object of the summer reading program is to keep children reading through the summer months — reading for pleasure, for information, to expand their reading background, and to keep sharpened their reading skills.

The summer reading program is an annual tradition, running from June 16 through September 15. Those young people who read 10 books are awarded a Reading Certificate and those who read 20 books are given a free paperback book.

These paperbacks are a special collection purchased especially for the program by the Friends of the Library. Reading cards to record the titles read at each child's reading level may be picked up in the children's room and must be endorsed by the parent.

So let the reading begin and may Paul Pratt's Cake glow with birthday candles!

The Trustees of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, Sheila S. Evans, chairman, are pleased to report the following recent gifts to the library:

— $50 for children's records and filmstrips, from Girl Scout Troop 581.

— Landscaping, from the Cohasset Garden Club; this includes new plantings, and special care for the dogwood trees given by the Amateur Gardeners of Cohasset many years ago.

— $228 from various individuals, toward the purchase of a dictionary stand in honor of Emily Gleason's 49 years as a library trustees.

— $450 for the purchase of the "New York Botanical Garden Illustrated Encyclopedia of Horticulture," from the Community Garden Club.

— From the Friends of the Cohasset Library: $450 for books, including the free paperbacks given to children during the Summer Reading Program; $1,030 worth of passes, which may be borrowed free of charge, to the Aquarium, the Children's Museum, the Museum of Fine Arts, the Museum of Transportation, and the Museum of Science.

To reserve one of these passes, call the library, 383-1348.

To join the Summer Reading Program, see one of the children's librarians, Marilyn Pope or JoAnn Mitchell, any afternoon.

Friends' membership forms are available at the library.

TONY HYDE

Representatives from the Cohasset Teacher's Association said the CTA will go to arbitration, if need be, to protect the job of CHS Music Director Tony Hyde. Recently, the school committee voted to not tenure Hyde next year.

The com- ittee spent 32 minutes in a closed session Monday with the CTA and its lawyer. School Committee Chairman Frank England said the committee has 10 days in which to respond to the CTA's grievance.

APPOINTMENTS

On a vote of 6-zip, Bryan Marks was reappointed and given tenure as vocal music teacher at CHS. Coach appointments were as follows: Varsity football, John Leone; cross country, Thomas O'Neil; varsity wrestling, John Leone; eighth grade boys' basketball, Charles Davis; boys' basketball, Paul Hogan, varsity head.

Also, junior varsity boys' basketball, Greg Jones; freshman boys' basketball, David Infusino; varsity soccer, Charles Mundhenk and girls' varsity soccer, William Fallon.

RESIGNED

Accepted with regret was the resignation of social studies teacher Kurt Rever.

CITIZEN COMMITTEES

In light of the recent success the school committee has and is experiencing with its various citizens committee, the committee agreed to look into appointing additional citizen committees in the future to puruse food services, transportation, and the role of the athletic program in the schools.

School Committee Chairman Frank England, who proposed the expanded use of citizen committees, noted "There are tremendous resources in this town — all kinds of talent we can use."

Sailing Club glides into new season Sunday

The Cohasset Sailing Club, which has provided instruction and recreational sailing to Cohasset residents young and old for 20 years, will open its 1980 summer season Sunday, June 22, putting on display its new clubhouse and launching its new fleet of 10 Cape Cod Mercury sailboats.

Members, friends, and indeed all Cohasset residents, are cordially invited to take part in a ceremonial tree planting scheduled for about noon on Sunday, and then to view the new building and the new fleet. The tree will be planted in the center plot of the parking lot to replace a familiar old apple tree that had to be removed to make way for the new structure.

"We hope many townspeople as well as our members and their families will join us on this landmark occasion," said Commodore Edward Atkinson. "We are very proud and grateful for this complete up-dating of our shore and seagoing facilities which are going to make it possible to carry out our mission of instruction and fun sailing so much more effectively."

The Cohasset Sailing Club developed out of a civic dream of the 1950's to make the best use of the Town's Government Island property in a way consistent with the town's maritime history and traditions. It was organized by a small group of dedicated people as a non-profit institution open to all Cohasset residents at minimum cost and began operations in 1960. Since then more than 3000 youngsters have taken part in its Junior Training Program and hundreds of adults have learned how to sail, and made use of the club's boats.

On hand Sunday to meet with parents and answer their questions about the Junior Training Program which will get under way the next day, Monday, June 23, will be Brian Cook, the new chief instructor, who comes to the Cohasset Club after extensive experience with the Charles River Community Boat Club. This program is under the general guidance of Vice Commodore Roger Porter.

The Hospitality Committee, headed by Joyce and Peter Conway, are preparing to serve hot dogs and cold drinks, proceeds to go to the Fleet Renewal Fund, but guests are welcome to bring their own sandwiches and snacks.

The adult training responsibilities will be shared again this year by Robert Davenport and Robert B. Smith, who are setting up schedules for Saturday and Sunday morning sessions.

The new clubhouse and associated landscaping was made possible by an anonymous gift of $60,000, while the Club has directed fund-raising efforts toward a matching renewal of its fleet. The clubhouse has an interior meeting room, workroom, rest rooms, and on its roof, a lookout post to assist in monitoring operation of the boats.

It is ringed by a wide pavilion porch with a concrete patio at ground level and concrete walkways leading to the ramp and floats. The historic brick kerosene house, which once housed the oil for the lamps of Minots Ledge Lighthouse, has been preserved, and another small building moved to a new location to form a cluster near the harbor retaining wall.

The new Cape Cod Mercury sailboats are 15 foot sloops of a type selected for both their sturdiness and challenge to sailors. They replace 12 smaller Widgeon sailboats which had served through ten years of hard instructional sailing.

Total cost of the new fleet was $39,868. Trade-in of the Widgeons brought a credit of $7,800; approximately $8,400 was raised in a campaign started last Fall, and more recently about $3,500 was added through a viewing of the Tall Ships Parade from the 14th floor lounge and observation deck of a Boston waterfront building, and about $500 proceeds of a fine gourmet dinner.

"We are continuing our fund-raising efforts and will be staging some events during the summer for that purpose," said Commodore Atkinson. "But we are definitely in business now with a fine new shore facility and a renewed fleet, and we hope many more Cohasset people will take advantage of these as members."

South Shore Art Center News South

Start marking your calendar for the special events and demonstrations which will appeal to the whole family at this year's South Shore Arts Festival on Cohasset Common, July 3-6.

Photographers of all ages and all levels of ability are encouraged to participate in a special workshop called "The Decisive Moment." Bring your cameras for a special opportunity to work with Peter Anderson, teacher and former Time-Life photographer, who will conduct this fun, FREE workshop during the Festival's 25th anniversary summer event. Billed as a Creative Photography Experience in candid portraiture, this delightful surprise happening will take place each day of the Festival.

If you miss one, come to another, or come to all three and get some added practice and experience, Friday and Saturday, July 4 and 5 at 2 p.m. and Sunday July 6 at 1 p.m.

There will be two puppet shows for children on the 4th. The Three Little Pigs and Jack and the Beanstalk. A roving mime will entertain on July 6th.

Two Cohasset residents will be among those doing art demonstrations. Claffy Williams will demonstrate acrylic stain painting and Douglas Orr will talk about his unique use of color and the origin of his imagery as he demonstrates abstract impressionist painting.

The Cohasset Town Hall will be converted into an arena stage for a production of Godspell by the Cohasset Drama Workshop, directed by Ron Emmons, July 4, 5 and 6 at 8 p.m.

SUMMER CLASSES AT SSAC

As the end of school approaches and we all breathe a bit easier and plan to do all sorts of wonderful things, why not include the South Shore Art Center in your plans? The Center will offer courses in drawing, painting and photography. Surely, in the following group there is a course to capture your imagination.

In July courses will be given both at the Art Center studios at 103 Ripley Road in Cohasset and at the South Shore Conservatory in Hingham.

"Drawing and Painting Landscapes for Teens" conducted by David Tandy, Creative Clay with Syma Korarin and "Creative Drawing and Painting" will be given at the Conservatory beginning the second week in July for three weeks. Also during this period John Lanza will be giving a course in "Art Anatomy Drawing" at the Art Center. Credit may be applied for in this course through the Massachusetts College of Art.

Other courses which will be offered in July are: "Outdoor Drawing and Painting Workshop" wiht Roz Farbush (another credit course); "Portraiture" with Clement Micarelli; "Beginning Photography" with Paul Fortin; "Intermediate Photography" with Linda Wasko; "Basic Drawing" with Virginia Moore; and "Watercolor Painting" with Virginia Avery.

On the agenda for August is another credit course, "Introductory Painting" with David Tandy; "Landscaping Painting Workshop" with Margaret Dillon and "Creative Drawing and Painting" with Louise Kalish.

Specific details on each course may be obtained by calling the South Shore Art Center at 383-9548. Advanced enrollment is very important as places are limited so register now! Participate in a program which contributes to the unique area in which we live!

CHILDREN'S ART WEEKS

As you make plans for your child's summer activities, the South Shore Art Center urges you to think creatively! For children 7-12 the Center offers a special class for two weeks.

The first session is from June 23-27, and the second from June 30-July 3. Serena Brundidge, an art teacher in the Hingham Public schools will conduct these classes which will explore a variety of media both inside and outdoors. For further information call 383-9548.

Skating honor

Kathy Jean Lucey of 51 Outlook Road, recently passed her second level figure skating test before a panel of USFSA judges at Pilgrim Skating Arena. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Lucey, Kathy is a member of the Skating Club of Hingham which makes its home rink at Pilgrim.

State blocks SS Hospital trauma center

Although the State Department of Public Health denied its initial application to provide a trauma center to serve its broad South Shore area, South Shore Hospital is appealing that decision and, at the same time, hoping that citizens in the area will mount public pressure to reverse the decision.

Barbara Thorn, head of the Hospital's Community Relations Bureau, reflected the surprise of Hospital officials, not only because its application was refused but even more because it has heard that the state does not intend to approve such centers on the South Shore.

"It's all up to the Department of Public Health to approve such facilities that would entail a cost of over $100,000," explained Ms. Thorn, "and also to make a determination of need which is a good thing because that provides the means to avoid duplication of services."

But at that point, Ms. Thorn parts company with the state is thinking in refusing South Shore's application.

"We are in proximity of both Rtes. 3 (the Southeast Expressway) and Rte. 128," she emphasized, referring to those high speed, heavily-trafficked and accident-prone arteries. "We have an average of 200 emergencies a day which certainly suggests a definite need."

What does a trauma center provide that's different from regular hospital emergency service?

Ms. Thorn lists requirements as including a surgeon on call 24 hours a day as just one provision. Another is for nurses trained specifically in emergency services. While South Shore has those services available, there is something it doesn't have but would if the state approval for a center was forthcoming.

That's a cat scanner, also called a head scanner, which is a highly sophisticated X-ray device used to determine more definitively the extent of head injuries which constitute many of the serious injuries incurred in car accidents. There also are body scanners available to trauma centers.

"The nearest such equipment is at the Carney Hospital in Boston," continues Ms. Thorn. "But we obviously are much closer to area communities than Carney is to Norwell, Cohasset, Scituate, Marshfield and other communities whose residents regularly are taken to South Shore in emergencies."

Since, as Ms. Thorn adds, "under such dire circumstances time really is of the essence, the value of a more convenient trauma center to local citizens is obvious."

South Shore, in its expansion program, already has a trauma room which expanded previous accomodations from six to nine beds.

But a trauma center with its broader range of equipment and skilled personnel would be an improvement beyond what is presently available that South Shore Hospital is willing and eager to provide area residents but so far, has been balked by the state.

Another requirement to qualify is for only EMT trained personnel to bring patients to the center.

"But that's the case now in almost every community I know of," Ms. Thorn declares.

Towards supporting chances of the appeal, South Shore officials have enlisted the aid of local state

Exercise for fun!

The Cohasset Community Center is pleased to announce that due to popular demand the Exercise for Fitness and Fun program instructed by Joanne Sheppard is continuing through the summer months. The next eight week session will begin Thursday, July 10 and participants may choose a two or three day a week program.

Arrangements were by the Sparrell Funeral Home, 1 Summer St., Cohasset.

Candidates

well be effective in running a hockey league, but they're not effective in state government.

Doherty, who has a BA in political science, and is past Vice Chairman for the Coastline Council for Children, is a realtor. Doherty stated the district has no effective representative at this time. He said he would be a more effective legislator as a result of direct mailing to residents, proposed constituent meetings, and by the creation of a legislative advisory committee which would look at specific areas of concern, in particular, elder affairs.

Ford, an economics specialist and former Peace Corps officer, sees the biggest issue facing voters as taxes. "Hull could lose more than 50 per cent of its revenue if two and a half proposition is passed." He added that Hingham could lose 24 per cent of its revenue, and "Cohasset would have to eliminate electric street lighting and schools."

The alternative to proposition two and a half, Ford said, is to bring tax systems in line with those of 17 other states. Counsel expressed opposition to two and a half, while Doherty supported it symbolically.

Transportation, social affairs, the elderly and increased spending as well as transportation are issues which Ford sees as major ones among voters.

For Hull, Ford proposed Maritime industries, which would be encouraged by tax incentives.

Conwell picked up on Ford's statement regarding Maritime industries, by noting that Hull's fishing industry is in its infancy.

Gambling in Hull, Ford felt, was a bad idea. "It wouldn't improve the tax base." He added that gambling would attack a bad element.

Doherty felt the gambling issue deserved more than passing interest as a result of the interest shown by citizens in a non-binding referendum question two years ago. But he said he felt gambling would be a short-sighted way to improve the tax base.

Conwell said he didn't think gambling would ever happen in Hull. "I have a reasonable belief that any major casino would not seriously consider Hull — when the Cheateau de Villes are set up like casinos. I suggest casinos may view New Hampshire as a focal point for gambling.

However, Conwell too, said home rule considerations should be heeded.

Conwel said he would drastically restrict his practice if elected state representative. While Doherty and Ford said they would be full-time representatives.

Doherty would support a moratorium on nuclear energy at this time, in order to study the safety aspect and cost effectiveness of nuclear power.

Regarding abortions — Conwell said "Any representative who spends time on either side of this issue is not representing his district. On wetlands legislation — he said "There are state concerns and issues that go beyond the limits of the town."

Doherty also would not feel comfortable with having selectmen or any town board being completely in control of wetlands. "CZM has a lot of problems." However, he said he did support home rule in this area. (?)

Ford believes in the protection of the coastline, and Doherty feels the state has been naive in dealing with chemical waste disposal. Conwell said he supported increased statutory remedies against corporate entities dumping wastes in rivers and streams. But Conwell said he could not effectively debate the long-term effects of nuclear power. "Newer nuclear plants may be safer."

According to Ford, federal legislation must tackle the issue of toxic wastes, and Ford supports the ERA. "I had a male secretary in my last job — he was great."

Doherty stated the ERA was a foregone conclusion, and said he supported it. Conwell agreed with both men.

If elected, Ford would try to get appointed to taxation and ways and means committees, while Doherty would institute advisory committees and create a network system. Conwell would seek out problems. "There's a difference between active and passive representation."

Town officials on expanded insurance coverage

A while back Frederick Wood of Petersen Realty and Insurance Agency took issue with the town's insurance coverage, and town officials have since that time responded to his criticisms by showing renewed interest in getting the best buy for the money.

Selectmen, at Arnold Jenks' request, recently expanded the Cohasset Insurance Committee from one (Jenks) to three members. And Monday, the school committee appointed Galt Grant, corporate insurance manager for Polaroid, as one of its own experts on school insurance coverage.

In June, Town Accountant William Signorelli, CHS Business Manager John Raftery, Jenks, George McCullough and Jack Skala, the town's insurance broker, met to discuss town insurance in various areas.

As a result of school committee concerns, Signorelli said Aetna Insurance Company has agreed to amend the town's existing policy at no additional premium to include coverage from suits resulting from athletic accidents.

That expanded coverage will have a sub limit of $100,000 per individual for athletic participants. Under the town's present policy, non-athletics have $100,000 limit per individual and $300,000 per occurance.

Signorelli said discussion at the June meeting revolved around the possibility of increasing the $100,000 for athletes to the same amounts as for non-athlete injuries. The group has asked Aetna for a premium quotation for the increased coverage.

Signorelli was quick to point out that the town has regular insurance for all events; this additional insurance would be coverage for the town's liability on itself.

Also under consideration is an umbrella liability policy of $1, $3 or $5 million, and accordingly, a quotation has been asked for.

Insurance coverage on town-owned buildings was also discussed, as per Wood's letter. At present, insurance coverage on town buildings is based on the cash market value of those buildings. Building contents are insured at $13,488,000 — with no co-insurance. "It has been suggested that we insure buildings on the basis of repairs and replacement costs. It's also been suggested that we continue to insure older buildings at cash market, and insure newer buildings on repair and replacement," Signorelli said. Again, quotations are being requested.

Cohasset recreation department news

Tuesday evening, July 1, at 7:30 p.m. on the Cohasset Town Common, the first in a series of six Band Concerts will be held. Performing will be the South Shore Concert Band, under the direction of Mr. Richard Whitmarsh. The 30 piece band consists of musicians from a number of South Shore communities.

SUMMER YOUTH CONCERT BAND REGISTRATIONS

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registrations beginning Monday, June 30, thru Thursday, July 3, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. daily, for Summer Youth Concert Band.

The program, taught by Ms. Kathryn A. Fox, Deer Hill School Music teacher, will be open to children grades 4 thru grade 8. The fee for the six week program is $5 per person with a 50 per cent discount for second or subsequent children from the same family.

The program will meet Monday and Wednesday evenings, from 6:30 p.m.-8 p.m. at the Deer Hill School, beginning Monday, July 7, continuing six weeks thru Wednesday, August 13. The youth concert will provide extra instruction and continuity of instruction to those students who are involved in the school band programs. Also, the youth concert will perform on the Cohasset Common at some point during the summer.

Smith

"My personal feelings of Douglas Smith after several interviews and after reviewing his records, is that this man will be an asset to the U.S.N.R. because of his past experiences and the knowledge that he has gained from them.

Police Sgt. Richard Barrow, Cohasset Force: "I was Douglas Smith's immediate supervisor for approximately one and a half years of the time Doug was on the force. At no time while under my supervision did Doug ever use alcohol while on duty. I feel Doug would be an asset to our department and I would be more than pleased to have him return."

Sgt. John Rhodes, Cohasset Force: Rhodes said that the week of March, 1980, Selectman Arthur Clark allegedly stated he would not be opposed to Smith's returning to the police department if Civil Service ruled accordingly.

"In my opinion, I personally as a sergeant and superior officer on the force, feel I would not be opposed to Smith's returning to our department. I believe that because of his participating in the Boston Police Stress Program and his membership in AA, his knowledge would be an asset to the force."

Cohasset Niners high-spirited lady golfers

By Karin Bartow

The game of golf is 18 holes. It takes approximately four hours to play. It requires skill, competitiveness, stamina, and if you haven't got any of that, there's still a place for you in the sport of golf.

The Cohasset Niners are a serious, but high-spirited and fun-loving group of about 60 women golfers, ranging in age from 26 to 80. For one of several reasons, they prefer to play nine holes. The rules are the same, but it only takes them about two hours to play. For those who find walking the greens and fairways nine times exercise enough, the Niners offer all the same amenities and activities of the 18-hole group.

Many Niners are beginners and find it easier to get going with golf in a group where handicaps are higher, and the emphasis, though always on golf, is also on companionship and sociability.

Janet MacLure, the present Chairman of the Niners, used to live on Lamberts Lane, near the first hole of the Cohasset Golf course. It was a natural course of events that she would wander over to the club and begin lessons.. After finishing her clinic, she decided to start a group for beginners like herself who needed more practice and confidence.

One of the Niners earliest new members was Ann Young who remembers her first day. "I had such a headache when I finished, I thought I'd never go out again!" She recalls that Janet was the tournament chairman that day and she awarded her a pin for "trying hardest." She still has the pin and she's played golf some 20 years; she's chairman of the 18 hole ladies group now. She ended up spending three years with the Niners getting acquainted with other players, the game and the club.

Mrs. Young says the Niners are very important. "They give everyone a start; many would be timid about joining to play 18 holes."

Grace Tuckerman, who is Co-Chairman of the Niners, has been playing nine hole golf for six years. She chips, putts, drives and sees her friends several times a week, in addition to the Niner's regular organized play day, Wednesday. She takes her game seriously, but not herself. "I always feel so good when I see that 9th green," she candidly admits!

Barbara Froio, a newer nine hole player, finds it a perfect game to sandwich in between her family and job with Peterson Realty. Both women support the Niners enthusiastically and feel they "get more members interested in our group since it's ideal for beginners who want to learn while playing."

Last year the Niners insituted a field day and invited nine hole members from Scituate and Duxbury to Cohasset. Players were reluctant to sign up because they didn't feel their game was good enough, but once they got on the greens together, thunder and lightening didn't keep them from enjoying the play and making new friends.

The three groups will play together again June 12 in Scituate.

The Niners offer prizes each week for most improved, best effort, high score, etc. They also dot the six month season liberally with various tournaments that mix players of different skills for game improvement and wider companionship. They are in every way a real "support" group for the game of golf!

Gene Peterson, golf pro at Cohasset, thinks highly of the "nice" ladies. "They are a very active, dedicated group who take the game more seriously than you might think. Niners is needed because it is a good way for ladies to begin and to return to when they are older."

Niners is also for those who always meant to play nine holes! You'll know them by the button they wear, proclaiming "Nine is Nice"!

Gridiron club presents scholarship awards

The Cohasset Gridiron Club presented annual scholarship awards at high school ceremonies on class night in May. Bud Howorth, vice president of the club, presented the awards.

Recipients were: Richard J. Young, $500; James E. McNeill, $500; Charles D. Coe, $400; Robert M. Gunville, $400; Mary F. Frugoli, $400; and James M. Brown, $300.

The Gridiron Club also announced a new slate of officers for 1980: President Bob Walks, Vice President Pat McCarthy, Treasurer Bob Donahue and Secretary Rob Devin.

C.H.S. Lamplight Co-editors selected

Cathy O'Brien and Philip Dormitzer were recently named as co-editors for the Cohasset Lamplight, the Cohasset High School newspaper. Selection was based upon qualifications in the areas of writing, leadership, organizational ability and dedication. Cathy and Philip are seniors for the 1980-81 school year and both have previously worked on the paper.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

More and more men are invading the kitchen, territory once privileged for women and "sissies." Men are flocking to cooking schools, knowing they will eat better if they're "batching" it and many are making a career of the culinary arts. Few women are as fortunate as Jane MacDonald Hardy, a great cook in her own right, but blessed with a son and husband who love to cook. Says she: "I'll be thin when I'm an angel." Nineteen-year-old Jim is revelling in one last, lazy summer before his final term at Johnson and Wales Culinary School and says of their Ferry Hill home, "life is just one long party." When only seven, Jim got his start in the kitchen, producing a perfect batch of Jane's mother's brownies. Jane confesses that her mother has been at her elbow often, watching her step-by-step, trying unsuccessfully to reproduce her mother's recipe for brownies. See how you can make out with

GRANNIE MAC'S BROWNIES

2 sq. baking chocolate, melted with
1/2 stick butter
1 c. sugar
1/2 c. flour, sifted with
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1 tsp. vanilla
Speck of salt
2 eggs
1/2 to 1 c. nuts

Beat eggs with sugar and vanilla on high speed for 3 min. Add sugar gradually, beating another 3 min. Add butter and chocolate. Fold in flour and baking powder and nuts. Bake in greased 9 x 9" pan for 30 min. at 350 degrees.

When Stan Hardy, Jane's husband, was considering a change of career, he recalled his days as a seminarian and the pleasure he derived from cooking. He, too, studies at Johnson and Wales and since graduation has been the pastry chef at the Barnside. Now he tells us the Assinippi restaurant also expects to be doing retail baking. Jane and he cook together in their home and one way of preparing this recipe is to have Jane pass him the ingredients as he does the actual cooking. You'll see why this is a good system if you try their

CHINESE CHICKEN

1 c. walnuts
2 whole chicken breasts, boned and skinned
1/2 egg white, beat and divide
1 T cornstarch
1/2 tsp. sugar
1/4 tsp. MSG
1 c. vegetable oil
3 slices ginger root, peeled
4 cloves garlic, flattened
1 T dark soy sauce
1 T dry sherry
Snow peas, or sliced green pepper

Cut chicken into ½" cubes. Place in bowl. Add egg whites, cornstarch, sugar and MSG. Refrigerate at least 30 min. In a wok, or large skillet, heat oil. Add chicken. Cook stirring and flipping over high heat about 45 seconds. Remove chicken from pan. To the oil add vegetables. Cook no more than 30 seconds. Remove vegetables. Add walnuts and stir until golden brown. Remove walnuts and discard all but 1 T of the oil and reheat. Add ginger and garlic and cook 1 min. Remove and discard seasonings. Add soy sauce and chicken. Toss over high heat about 10 seconds. Add wine, vegetables and walnuts. Toss over high heat about 10 seconds. Spoon into serving dish. Serve with rice.

Never before have there been so many young people, young men especially, going into food as a profession. Stan says that probably sixty per cent of his two-year class at Johnson and Wales were men. Someday we hope to catch up with these young people, professional cooks all: Laura Fait, Don Fait, Bruce Binda, Tim Myers and Laura Erickson. Working with their hands and being creative is part of the appeal as you'll see if you try the Hardy's recipe for

SCRAMBLED EGGS A LA ROSELLI

1 small can sliced mushrooms, simmered slowly in covered pan
1 T mixed vegetable flakes
1 tsp. parsley flakes
1/4 tsp. basil flakes
1 T margarine

Simmer above until the flakes are softened. Beat together

6 to 8 eggs [2 per person]
Stir in
1/2 c. dry sherry
1/2 tsp. salt
1/8 tsp. pepper

Add to mushrooms. Stir slowly over low flame until eggs are done. Eggs scorch easily and are tough if cooked too rapidly.

Angler's Corner

By Lindy Blaisdell

The stripers are back!

Reports from Snug Harbor Fish Market in Duxbury say 30-pounders along Brown's Bank at the entrance to Plymouth Bay. Angler's Den in Plymouth weighed in a 48-pounder Saturday. Also some schoolies are around.

Live Lining, using a live Herring or Pogey as bait, is best for larger bass. Drifting a big bass sea worm in the channels at low tide usually worked on the schoolies.

Herring are spotty. Pogies are in but in small schools. Worms are good. Moon tides produce the big ones. Some plugging action from Plymouth Beach but it's slow.

A few big bass should be along the rocky shore off Fourth Cliff.

Try trolling large fish imitating plugs parallel to shore. Cruise into the Gut, fish the sand spit and the sand bank leading into the South River.

Vineyard fishermen talked of a successful spring.

TUNA

The first (to my knowledge) tuna, an 800-pounder was brought into Duxbury last week.

RULE CHANGES

The Mass. Division of Fisheries & Wildlife announced two law changes to take effect in 1981.

The size limit on large and small mouth bass will be increased from 10" to 12". Bass don't mature til their third year, usually when they reach that 10" size. It's hoped the rule change will give more bass a chance to spawn.

Also chain pickerel size limit will be increased from 14" to 15".

FATHER'S DAY

My Father's Day present from Woody this year was a rise and shine, early go fishing, spend the day with dad trip.

Woody and I along with Tim Farrell of Scituate left Duxbury at 4:30 a.m. and were fishing the fog on one of Plymouth's many ponds for small mouth bass by 5:30 a.m. We used Rebel minnows. Both Tim and I went fishless. Woody boated four nice bass and lost another. Now wouldn't you think that on Father's Day he'd let me catch the fish?

We changed ponds three hours later and tried for Large Mouth Bass. Using plastic worms, Mann's 6" Black Jelly worms rigged weedless Texas style I brought in three nice Large Mouth. Timmy landed one nice one.

We found the bass healthy and almost fully recovered from the rigors of spawning. Most bass should be off the beds now with healthy appetites.

VS.
ROBERT S. HAWKER, THOMAS J. HAGAN, ROBERT S. HAWKER AND THOMAS J. HAGAN, DBA HAWKER-SALISBURY CO., THOMAS S. HAWKER AND THOMAS J. HAGAN, AS GENERAL PARTNERS OF HOTEL RAYMOND ASSOCIATES

To Robert S. Hawker and Thomas J. Hagan, general partners of Hotel Raymond Associates, DBA Hawker-Salisbury Co.

Residence unknown,
GREETING

Whereas a civil action has been begun against you in our Superior Court by Charles M. Moran wherein it is seeking to recover $52,945.00 for services rendered

We COMMAND YOU if you intend to make any defense, that on Monday, the 7th day of July or within such further time as the law allows you to cause your written pleading to be filed in the office of the Clerk of Courts at Worcester, in the County of Worcester, in said Commonwealth, and further that you defend against said suit according to law if you intend any defense, and that you do and receive what the Court shall order and adjudge therein.

Hereof fail not, at you peril, or as otherwise said suit may be adjudged and orders entered, in your absence.

It appearing to this Court that no personal service of the complaint has been made on the defendant, a deputy sheriff having made a return on the summons that after a diligent search he can find no one upon whom he can lawfully make service, a copy of which is hereto attached and made part of this notice, it is ordered that notice of this suit be given to them by publishing a copy of this order once each week for three successive weeks in the Cohasset Mariner, a newspaper published in said Cohasset, the last publication to be at least 20-days before the 7th day of July next.

Witness, JAMES P. LYNCH, JR. at Worcester the 22nd day of May in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty.

Loring P. Lamoureux
Assistant Clerk

☐Goodness gracious! Another Pratt? That's what the yellow unsigned note said. Kathy M. Pratt of King Street, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Mulcahy of Pond Street, is the mother of Carolyn, born June 2 at South Shore Hospital, weighing in at five pounds, three ounces. Carolyn's father, Glenn, is reported to be from a prominent Cohasset family.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Pratt and Kay and Bernard Mulcahy, all of Cohasset. Albert Andrews of Florida and Cohasset is great grandfather.

☐The Weisenfluh's of Summer Street, Al, Barbara and their children, Pam, Kurt and Bart, hosted a 50th wedding anniversary reception for friends and family of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Weisenfluh of 60 Elm St. a week ago Sunday. The Fred Weisenfluh's who have lived in Cohasset for the past five years, were married on June 11, 1930 in Pennsylvania.

☐Joanna (Snyder) and Josiah (Joe) H. Drummond, Jr. were married on April 19 at the Unitarian Church. Joanna and her children, Bart and Caleb Snyder, 11 and 9 years old, respectively, have lived in Cohasset for four years and they will be missed by many friends and family (including her sister, Penny Redfield and her family) when they move to Cumberland Foreside, Maine this month. Congratulations to the Drummonds!

☐Kristin Rauhauser, age 12, won a Gold Medal recently in an Intermediate Ladies Freestyle event at the Braemar-McCandless Spring Figure Skating Competition held in Edina, Minnesota. She also won a Bronze Medal in an Intermediate Ladies Compulsory event.

Kristin, a sixth grader at Deer Hill and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rauhauser of Forest Avenue, is a member of the Silver Blades Skating Club, the Eaglettes Precision Team and is coached by Paul McGrath of Burlington.

☐James Conby, a student at Deer Hill School, will attend the Ted Williams Baseball Camp in Lakeville, Mass. in August. James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Conby of Holby Lane.

☐Amy Roebuck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Roebuck, Jr. of Beechwood Street, has been named to the Dean's List at Ithaca College for the spring semester. Ms. Roebuck ranked among the top 10 per cent of the students in scholarship in her major. Her term average grade was 3.73.

Historical Society celebrity auction set

Celebrities in government, entertainment and sports throughout the United States have and are becoming aware of the Cohasset Historical Society and its restoration of the Caleb Lothrop House on Summer Street, as a result of a fundraiser brain-stormer thought up by Drexel Gibson.

As a reward for his idea, the historical commission named Gibson as chairman of the celebrity auction which will take place on the morning of August 30 at the South Shore Music Circus Tent.

The first round of requests for a personal item or memento went out in April, while requests to sports groups were sent two weeks ago. In the meantime, Gibson is making a public plea to all Cohasset residents who might know a "somebody" famous to send him their address. For instance, he has no address for Miss Piggy of the Muppets. Perhaps some tot has a line on her. Call Gibson at 383-9745.

Although it's early, "Every day is like Christmas," Gibson, who along with his wife Mary, have the delight of opening all the surprise packages. As of last Friday they had received over 45 items, all of which are being safely stored in various locations in town.

Constance Parker, president of the historical society, said they will need approximately 200 items for a successful auction, and she has no idea what to expect as the final outcome.

What would you bid for a Bancroft tennis racket cover autographed by Billie Jean King? Go For Broke, an autographed book from Arnold Palmer?

How about an orange dress from Rita Hayworth? Commission members are still attempting to discover what movie she wore it in.

Paul Newman and Joanne Woodward sent a stainless steel celery tray, the Baltimore Orioles a signed baseball. Letter-openers from Barry Goldwater and Howard Baker. And from Gov. Edward King, a genuine Louisville slugger baseball bat. From Gary Player a used golf glove.

Shortly after we suggested it, Ms. Parker got on the phone and asked Selectman Arthur Clark for the selectmen's old chairs (town meeting voted funds to buy new ones in July). Clark will check it out. And there are a lovely pair of turn-of-the-century bronze figurines on marble bases depicting two 18th century ladies. The figurines are used in Phoebe Tyler's library in the TV program All My Children.

Gary Trudeau sent Domesbury, autographed. Brian Donnally, a congressman from the 10th district, sent a house of representatives plate. There's a penant from the Bulls, and Richard Valerians sent an autographed copy of Travel with Henry.

Better Homes and Garden sent its Heritage Cook Book, full of both stories and recipes. The Smithsonian Institute Press sent a copy of a book: Capital Losses: A Cultural History of Washington's Destroyed Buildings — "The subject of this book seems particularly appropriate to your cause," the letter writer probably wrote with a smile.

From George Bush, former U.S. Ambassador to China, there is a framed rubbing. Paul Szep, Pulitzer Prize-winning Boston Globe cartoonist sent an original cartoon pen, caked with ink. There's a puck

25th annual S.S. Arts Festival starts next week

By Bernie Quigley

Back in 1952 Tom Lucas, Roz Farbush, MacIvor Reddie and a few other Cohasset artists were looking for a decent place to hang their paintings. There was nothing quite available, and since it was a warm summer day, they went down to the Common and hung them on the trees. And that was the rude beginning of what would soon become the annual South Shore Arts Festival.

From July third to the sixth, the South Shore Art Center, Inc. will celebrate the 25th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival on the Cohasset Common, and a lot of changes have taken place since that auspicious beginning.

"We have all grown, that's for sure," says Rox Farbush. "We were just painting at that time . . . raising families . . . it grew to a larger part of our lives. Now painting is the most important part of my life."

Farbush recalls sharing a studio with MacIver Reddie over the Cohasset Savings Bank before there was any such thing as the South Shore Art Center. She and Reddie painted and taught art classes there.

Down the road by Hugo's Lighthouse, Lucas had begun the Cohasset Workshop, a gallery where he taught art classes and brought the first craft center to the South Shore. The only problem there was the building was being eyed by the Historical Society that eventually acquired it, put it on a truck and moved it up the road to become the costume museum. So Lucas went and hung his paintings on the trees.

This year's entries will not be hung on trees, but under tents, where they have usually been hung, barring hurricanes, four days of rain or other itinerant catastrophies . . . such as a shortage of funds. Last year the Art Center needed a paint job and repairs, and someone had the Yankee wisdom to hold the festival there, just for that one year, and use the cost of the event to fix up the building.

Now it is back under the tents, and this year's cochairmen Janet Tooker and Mary Russell have planned a few special events for the 25th anniversary.

Paul Szep, Pulitzer Prize winner cartoonist for the Boston Globe will be the target of one, when he goes on the receiving end of the artist's eye to model for five area artists who will compose his portrait as they see fit. Roz Farbush, Clement Micarelli, Ruth Ferrara, Mary Good and Gail Bryan will work in their

Hull gambling hearing

Thursday, June 26 at 8 p.m. the Hull Planning Board will hold a public, informational hearing on gambling at the Damon School, 26 School Street (across from the Hull Town Hall on Atlantic Avenue).

Hull Planning Board Chairman Robert Burns said last week an attorney from MGM Gant Hotes-Greylock will be present to answer questions with regard to the building of a casino/hotel on the Hall Estate — near West Corner in Hull.

Also, an architect will present site plans for the Hall Estate.

A representative from the Hull Board of Selectmen said Sunday at that time there was no official response from the board of selectmen on the gambling issue.

Several years ago the community voted 2-1 in a non-binding referendum to support gambling in the town.

Nazarenes question church sale

If there is a positive story to be told about the eviction of the Nazarenes by the Methodists from the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road . . . then that positive story must be the strengthening of the religious community . . . at least among Nazarenes and Catholics.

Early this Spring, the Methodists signed a purchase and sales agreement with the South Shore Hellenic Church and Cultural Association, which must raise $30,000 for a down payment by July 30 in order to take possession of the church.

In a phone interview Sunday, Rev. Roberta Bressler, of the Methodist Church, said Methodists are not anticipating any problems with the ultimate sale. But Nazarene minister, Rev. Scott Newell, said Sunday he doesn't feel the Methodists can legally sell the building to a non-Protestant association.

Newell said the original deed granted by Colonel and Mrs. Albert Pope as a memorial to their son Charles, who died at the age of 17, stipulated that only Protestant church services should be conducted for North Cohasset residents at the church site.

"The precedent has been fairly well-established since the turn of the century," Newell said. "Although I imagine the deed can be broken if no viable Protestant church wishes to buy it."

Rev. Bressler disagreed. "The Pope Memorial Church was not originally a protestant church — it

Eight candidates for school supt.

During the first two weeks of July the school committee hopes to complete interviews on all eight candidates recommended to be interviewed for the position for CHS school supt. by the citizen's screening committee.

Monday, the school committee said it would probably commence interviews, beginning Wednesday, July 2, and interview two individuals per evening through Wednesday, July 9.

The eight applicants, six of whom are schoo. superintendents in their present systems, and two of

Cohasset's week

Water billing

There will be no increase in water rates this year, William Montuori, water commission chairman said this week. But commissioners recently voted to institute a late payment charge, beginning July 1.

Pending town counsel's ok, quarterly water bills not paid within 90 days will be charged a 14 per cent late charge.

Montuori said, "Account receivables keep growing, and money which comes in after the fiscal year has ended creates a problem. It must be put into the general budget and voted out by town meeting in order for it to be used for the water department.

Presently, the water bill goes on the tax bill as a lien, with no late interest being charged. And most people pay it at the end of the year.

CEIP funding supported

Sen. Allan McKinnon, D-Norfolk and Plymouth, has supported the oil spill contingency planning funding with a strong recommendation to the Coastal Energy Impact Program during the Coastal Regional Advisory Board review of proposed grants for CEIP funding.

McKinnon also supports the Cohasset Harbor study Government Wharf Project, recently submitted to the Coastal board for review. "Both oil spill contingency and the wharf project are important and are clearly within the scope and intent of the CEIP funding criteria."

No sand

Recently, the conservation commission voted 4-2 to not allow Muriel Kasdan of 88 Beach Street to cover her rocky beach with 30-50 cubic yards of sand. Commissioners felt sanding the beach could possibly damage an adjacent salt marsh, blue mussels and soft shell clams in the area. It was noted that no feasible precautions or safeguards were included with the plan. It was also felt positive action could set a precedent.

Details asked

Contractor Wayne Sawchuk has been asked, by the conservation commission, to provide more details regarding his proposed eight-unit condominium development on Pleasant Street.

The conservation commission, during a recent meeting, noted that the proposed development is located in a flood-prone area, and want plans showing how the structure would affect existing flooding in the area. Commissioners feel drainage capability should be based on the impact of a 25-year storm, and want information regarding a 100-year storm.

Dump threatened

According to Selectman Chairman Arthur Clark, a dump report by SEA Consultants prepared for the board of health, has been rejected as not acceptable by the State Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

William St. Hilaire, head of DEQE's solid waste department, told selectmen and members of the dump study committee that DEQE would be willing to consider a proposed solution which could allow the town to use the dump for another five years.

Hilaire said the dump had been in violation of having filled the wet and swamp dumping grounds with wood brush and stumps — a fill not acceptable to DEQE, because it settles easily and could allow refuse to eventually sit in the water.

Clark said the solution appears to be the town's hiring of a registered sanitary engineer to do a study of the area. "They don't want us to spread refuse laterally anymore — they want us to pile it on top until another solution is proposed and accepted," Clark said.

Clark also said according to DEQE, "Out of 73 towns, only Topsfield is doing it right."

The town was notified in time for it to appeal DEQE's decision, Clark said.

More families needed

So far eight Cohasset families and seven familes from the surrounding area have signed up to act as hosts and hostesses to 15 college-age English speaking Japanese students for three weeks in August.

Margot Cheel, coordinator of the Japanese exchange program, said she recently learned of the availability of 10 additional Japanese students who wish to come and study us in "our natural habitat."

Accordingly, families able and willing to share their homes in August should call Margot at 383-6845. She'd like to have students assigned to their families by July 1, if possible. Don't procrastinate — call her today!

Interestingly, Margot said the teacher she recently hired for the program, Joseph Lieberman, learned about the Japanese exchange program and the need for a teacher from a recent Mariner write-up while he was on vacation in Texas. Lieberman is a Quincy teacher who speaks four languages. His aunt, Margaret, owns and operates the Cohasset Dog Grooming Shop.

Teacher resignations

Monday, the school committee accepted resignations from the following individuals: CHS Nurse Gail Marshall, Nicholas Montuori, CHS instructional aide, and the retirement/resignation of Harriet Pippenbrink, effective June 1980. Mrs. Pippenbrink, a third grade teacher, had been on leave during the 1979-80 school year.

Bowling hours

The Community Center of Cohasset has announced that the summer bowling hours will be seven days a week from 3 to 5 p.m. and Friday, Saturday and Sunday evenings from 7 to 10 p.m. The new rates for the summer season will be three strings for $1. The alleys have been newly decorated and refinished and are now fully air-conditioned. Everyone is welcome to come and have some fun and escape the summer heat.

South Main St. horse owner asked for new plans

In the second case in a few months involving the stabling of a horse, Lawrence Mitchell presented an appeal to the Board of Health for a variance of a zoning law, to keep two horses on his property on 271 N. Main St.

Marilyn Sweeney, Board chairman, put off plans to discuss the reorganization of requirements for keeping horses until next week, as discussion of the event at hand went on longer than anticipated.

As the law stands, a stable must be 50 feet away from all abutters, and Michell's proposed stable will have only a five foot clearance from his neighbor, Marjorie Richards.

Richards has no complaint against Mitchell, and appeared on his behalf to offer to lease him the land to comply with the law. However, five other neighbors showed up to register their protest.

Rod McKinnon of 281 N. Main Street claimed that there is a danger of a particular form of encephalitis that could be spread if horses were brought to the area, but Dr. Charles Michael Bliss of the Board assured the group that this is not possible.

McKinnon also stated his opposition on the grounds that where grain is stored rats and mice will develop, and animal excretions would be carried in the water runoff. "I wouldn't have bought the property if I knew there would be horses there," said McKinnon, a third-year medical student, who bought his house last year.

Other abutters claimed that horses would decrease property value, decrease "quality of life," draw flies and create odors.

Bliss explained that of 18 paddocks in town only two actually satisfy the requirements of zoning laws due to a grandfather clause that has not adjusted to the changes of the present, and next week the Board will begin to update the regulations.

Next week Mitchell will present the Board of Health with a new plot plan showing total square footage of paddock area, and during the week the Board will take a look at the proposed sight.

In further business Eleanor Cooney and Jim Tyeryar of the Dump Study Commission presented the Board with a report stating that there are only three months of dumping time left for the town dump.

The board discussed emergency measures such as requiring recycling of bottles and paper until the situation is alleviated. The dump has water seeping through and creating pollution along the edges, a violation that has stopped extensive dumping at the site. "Over the next three months, the only place it can be dumped is on top," said Tyeryar.

The complexity of the situation may demand hiring an engineer to solve, he said, as older methods of solving pollution problems, such as capping the polluted area with clay, are against the rulings of Department of Environmental Quality Engineering and the orders of the Attorney General.

The Dump Study Commission was created last year by the Board of Selectmen to consider the future of the dump, which now has 5-7 years usage left.

Nazarene organ concert Saturday

An organ concert by Warren Whiting of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., active in home mission for the South Florida Nazarene district, will be held Saturday, June 28, at 7 p.m. in Cohasset Community Nazarene Church (Pope Memorial), Jerusalem Road at Rte. 228 on the Hingham-Hull-Cohasset line.

Whiting, a native of East Wareham, Mass., will also tell of his volunteer mission work in the Bahamas, Haiti, Dominican Republic, St. Lucia, Barbados, Jamaica.

The congregation will observe its first anniversary in Pope Memorial Church the week of July 6-13, with summer bible school conducted mornings, Monday through Friday. Nellie Weiss of Braintree is director.

First birthday services will be held Sunday, July 13. A singalong is planned with music by church members and guests. All persons who have visited the church in the past year are invited to join the

Hellenic Church plans fund-raiser

The South Shore Hellenic Church and Cultural Association announces plans for the "Greek Taverna" have been completed.

The "Greek Taverna" will feature barbecued whole lambs roasted over charcoal, shish-ka-bob pouch sandwiches, rice pilaf, Greek salad, and spinach pie. Pastries will be baklava, finikia, and thiples. For the younger set there will be hamburgers, soft drinks and watermelon.

This event is one of many happenings planned with the ultimate goal being the purchase of the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road, Cohasset.

The date for this gourmet's delight will be Saturday, July 5, rain or shine. Serving hours will be from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. on the Church grounds. Co-chairmen for this Greek food cook-out are Michael Vallas of Cohasset, Mary Menakos and James Bournazos of Scituate.

Notes & comments

. . . .It's summer . . . Tis is starting to sound like a poet. School's over, the pool's open . . . summer school begins next week. The recreation program began Tuesday. It's summer . . . but somehow nothing has slowed down yet. Years ago, things used to come to a halt in the summer. Our Mariner calender shows appointments, story ideas and important dates way through August.

. . . If someone could ever figure out what to do with old aluminun lawn chair frames they'd be billionnaires.

. . . Connie Parker got us out of bed (we needed to get out) Tuesday, press day, to tell us all three downtown museums will open this weekend.

. . . Over the years the Pope Memorial Church has received little and no notice . . . now there are two congregations vying for it. Apparently churches can still get mortgages. Glad someone can.

. . . Artists gather colors . . . for winter is gray. Next week at the South Shore Arts Festival we will be treated to the colorful winter renderings of many a fine artist and craftsman on the Cohasset Common. They're 25th anniversary . . . and for scheduled events, it looks like it's going to draw not a few crowds.

. . . Looks like Cohasset is in the market for a dump . . . in the near future.

. . . This week Bob Gohl started his educational TV column, and we'd really like to start receiving some notes from readers about good books they're reading or have read. We just finished The Woman Who Lived in a Prolgue . . . an excellent novel! By the time you're reading this it should be back in the new novel section at Paul Pratt.

Old PA bell peals for Bursks

By Karin Bartow

Today — perhaps as you are reading this article on June 26 — the bell on top of the Bursk's Sheldon Road home will ring 51 times.

There was a time when Kitt Bursk tugged the rope-pull on the school bell and it summoned children to the Maple Grove School in Salunga, Pennsylvania . . . where Kitt taught school for two of the happiest years of her career. The school had two outhouses, a pot-bellied stove, and of course, "the bell."

But today it will not be ringing to summon children to school . . . it will herald in the Bursk's 50th wedding anniversary — and all three sons, wives and eight grandchildren were expected to be on hand to help. It will clang an extra time for good luck.

BURSK'S OLD SCHOOL BELL rings out Happy Anniversary messages throughout the week.

How did the bell get from Salunga, Pennsylvania to Cohasset, Massachusetts? Kitt's grandmother, mother and her uncles and aunts all attended the Salunga School. And it was Kitt's grandfather, Henry Hertzler, who donated the bell to the Salunga School.

The Hertzlers were simple, hard-working Mennonites. Henry was a prominent blacksmith with large land holdings. The bell, which was cast in Germany and brought to Lancaster County around 1870, was a gift from Hertzler, Kitt believes. Hertzler was upset over farmers in the area having sold the railroad a right-of-way through Salunga.

The bell was stationed in the school building and remained there until 1964 when the Burks had it shipped to Cohasset. After all, little red school houses don't last forever, and the Maple Grove School was no exception.

It was Kitt's husband, Edward, who came up with the idea of building a replica tower on their house in which to hang the bell. Ed drew a sketch from the original school building, and Earle Higgins constructed the tower, which you can see from Sandy Beach.

"We wanted it to look as though it always belonged here," Ed said. "The tower is anchored right through the house. If the tower ever blows over, the whole house would go with it."

Steps from a second floor deck lead up to the roof where the tower securely straddles the roof pitch. In the tower are four corner seats where the Bursks can contemplate the ocean vista.

Both Kitt's and Ed's family are tied to education. Ed's great grandfather, Dr. Elnathan Elisha Higee, founded public education in Pennsylvania. His picture used to hang in the Salunga schoolhouse.

Two of the Bursk sons, Chris and Jack, are teachers. Edward taught marketing and business for 30 years at the Harvard Business School and was the editor of the Harvard Business Review for 25 years. He presently publishes a monthly business newsletter: "Advanced Management Report," which has world-wide subscribers.

Christopher, who teaches English and poetry at Bucks County Community College in Pennsylvania, has published a book of poems entitled Standing Watch.

And so, the Maple School bell continued to call children . . . but now it calls the Bursk children and eight grandchildren. It also peals out during family celebrations, birthdays and Independence Day. And on this particular day, it is ringing for Kitt and Ed Bursk.

CHS not so bad, afterall

By James Cahill

Going off to college is often a frightening experience. We spent many years in high school preparing for our college days.

After successfully completing one year away at college, we now have the opportunity to reflect back on our high school days and decide whether or not we were really prepared for that big step into college.

Recently the Cohasset Mariner asked some 1979 graduates of CHS whether or not they felt that CHS had prepared them for college, emotionally as well as scholastically.

Gerda Cahill, 19, is presently attending Simmons College in Boston. She felt that, "scholastically it gave me a basis for college work, but high school isn't anything at all like college. A lot of kids I've met from different schools have not had the quality education that we had. But, we did not have as much of a course variety as other kids from other schools have had. Emotionally my parents prepared me more than anything."

Caroline Goodwin, 18, is attending Fitchburg State College in Fitchburg. "CHS did prepare me for college," she said, "but I don't know about emotionally. College is a big jump. High school was

Citizens & students ask for Hyde's reinstatement

(ED.'S NOTE: At Monday's meeting, the school committee was petitioned by 38 parents and 34 students to reinstate Anthony Hyde as instrumental music teacher at CHS for 1980-81 and to give him tenure with his appointment.

School Committee Chairman Frank England said the committee would respond to a grievance filed by the Cohasset Teacher's Association Monday, June 30...but again, offered no reason for Hyde's firing.

We have printed the names of the first several signers of the petition below).

We the undersigned, parents, voters, and taxpayers in the town of Cohasset respectfully ask the School Committee as our elected representatives to rescind its previous vote not to reemploy Mr. Anthony Hyde for the 1980-81 school year, and secondly to reappoint him to his former position as instrumental music teacher in the Junior and Senior High School for the 1980-81 school year.

Our petition is presented to you in light of Mr. Hyde's three years of highly successful music programs as well as his formation of a new Junior High School Jazz Band. Mr. Hyde has brought honor, respect, and dignity to Cohasset High School.

Under his expert direction, the band has won numerous awards including the recent achievement of a first place trophy and a $300 prize for the performance of the Senior High Jazz Band in the competition at the New England wide jazz festival held in Mystic, Connecticut.

It seems unconscionable that this School Committee would even consider not reemploying a man who has continually brought notable success to the Cohasset High School.

It is about time that the Cohasset School Committee stop catering to the whims of a few dissidents and now listen to the majority of the band parents who are outraged at the injustice being done to a highly skilled and trained instrumental musician and teacher.

Dog owners sit, stay & heel after 1st lesson

DIDN'T KNOW Pam Tillotson had Golden Retriever puppies in her backyard when we went to interview her on obedience training.

When they showed up at the first class they were non-believers — united by their common despair to have their dogs respond to simple verbal commands, such as sit and stay, heel, come.

"Al's in New York and I'm here with this dumb dog — our other Dalmation was a drop-out too," Barbara Weisenfluh said at the beginning of her first class last week.

"I had a Pekinese last year who wouldn't be trained, we had to leave the class in disgrace," Mrs. Fran Walton said. Last week she was with Fergus, a yellow Labrador.

But after constant promptings and instructions from instructor Pam Tillotson of Forest Avenue, Fergus and the Weisenfluh's dog, Mr. Vincent . . . along with Max, Hilton, Bruno, Jenny and others, had picked up something. They were beginning to learn — masters and dogs alike.

Canine commands on Common

The 18-20 some dogs who attend the Cohasset Recreation Department's weekly sessions range from small Boston Terriers through Irish Wolfhounds. And their masters range in various sizes also. Noted by their absence, were several infamous dogs of Cohasset. But we won't go into that here.

Pam Tillotson, a senior psychology major at the University of Vermont, plans to get her MA in biology and then become a veteranian. She has 10 years of practical experience with her own pets, and has been a member and instructor at various dog obedience clubs since 1973. Presently, her mother, Cynthia, is the president of the South Shore Dog Training Club — an interest she developed through Pam.

Pam said she finds that child trainers at her classes tend to listen better than adults. "Maybe that's because they're used to taking instruction. Some people get a lot out of classes, if they practice with their dogs on their own time."

Dogs are not unlike children, and a first class can oftentimes turn into a social meeting. They have to see who's there, before they can get down to business. But after one hour of exhausting instruction, the dog begins to learn it's there for business.

Dogs, like people, have a wide range of intelligence. Pam conducts personality tests with her own Golden Retriever pup litters. "I can tell the pick of the litter by giving a series of tests," which are not unlike the tests used to test infants.

Last week's class was not without its humorous aspects . . . a woman with an Irish Wolfhound, which outweighed her by not a few pounds, refused to heel at her side. So she heeled at his. "He's pretty much going to do what he wants to," Pam admitted.

Pam advises owners to use thin, choke chains and use quick, short pulls to keep the dog on track. "Be vocal about heeling — say it with some sort of effort," she continually told her classes.

"Until a dog can be taught to sit, obviously he can't be called. Don't threaten the dog, don't point at him. And don't say his name — that's calling him. Say sit, and walk around him. Give him praise. You only "hang" him when he gets up. And don't keep saying stay if he's already staying."

At the end of an hour, dogs and masters together tended to want to lie down, exhausted. But when they walked away to their various cars, they did so with some dignity, now.

Ford clarifies positions

To the Editor:

I would like to clarify two remarks attributed to me in the June 19 Mariner article on the Democratic candidates for State Representative.

The article reported me to say that adoption of Proposition 2½ would lead to a closing of schools in Cohasset. My actual statement was that adoption of 2½ could result in a reduction or elimination of school bus service and street lighting in Cohasset according to a town selectman. While I am opposed to 2½ I believe strongly in the need for fiscal restraint at all levels of government and I favor the implementation of wisely drafted conservative tax laws.

The second remark attributed to me concerned legalized gambling in Hull. I actually stated that it was a bad idea which would attract the worst elements (e.g. organized crime and prostitution) to the town. A better approach towards improving Hull's economic situation would be an effort using tax incentives to attract desirable light industries, possibly pleasure boat construction and fisheries related businesses.

Sincerely,
Ted Ford

Red Cross

To the Editor:

The 1980 "March is Red Cross Month" Campaign has drawn to a successful close. Thanks to the support of your newspaper, Red Cross chapters throughout the Mass Bay area are assured of continued community services for the coming year.

We appreciate your support in helping tell the Red Cross story. As you are aware, we depend on the public's generosity for volunteer services and financial contributions.

Your assistance is gratefully acknowledged — not only during March and April, but throughout the year as well.

Best wishes,
Kurt E. Edgren

Not so bad

fairly easy, at least for me. I went into college with the idea that I was going to get killed with work, but I did alright. Emotionally my family prepared me more than high school did. Also, at Fitchburg, they had an orientation mini-course on what to expect. That helped me a lot."

David Gunville, 18, is at Stonehill College in North Easton. His feelings were that, "yes, CHS did prepare me for college. They made us do a lot of work on our own. The school prepared us as much as they could scholastically, but emotionally we had to prepare ourselves."

Marianne Burke, 18, is at Bridgewater State College, and was also positive about her preparation. "I was made to study. You couldn't get along easily. You had to make yourself do the work. My first year at college wasn't what I'd call easy, but I did well, and I feel CHS had a lot to do with it. I think the strongest department of CHS is its English department. This is what helped me most during my first year of college. CHS is basically a college preparatory school as opposed to some others that I've heard about from schoolmates. Since it is a college preparatory school, I feel it has also helped me emotionally."

Mark Young, 19, is presently attending Stonehill College, and he believes that CHS prepared him well. "I took three advanced placement courses in high school and I received college credit for two of them in college. For the most part, a lot of freedom was given to us in junior and senior years to choose courses we wanted to take that might help us in the future. I never had any problems, but I felt the faculty and guidance department were always there is needed. I think my family prepared me emotionally for school.

CHS seemed to make the transition from high school to college a lot easier than another school might have made it. These people all seem to feel that CHS prepared them for that transition."

I guess high school wasn't so bad after all.

James Cahill, a graduate of CHS is entering his sophomore year at the University of Massachusetts, Amherst. Ed.

☐Patrick Joseph Hurley, Jr. is here! Actually, he's old news...having been born June 4, 1980 at 8:57 a.m., at St. Margaret's Hospital for Women. Don't know why we got the release so late.

Patrick's parents are Cynthia (Carolan) and Patrick Hurley of Ledge Way. And we're sure he'll keep them busy this summer.

☐Last Saturday Heidi Brown left to participate in a Voyaguers Rendezvous sponsored by the Greater Minneapolis Girl Scout Council. Highlights of the event include serving as an intern to the historical interpreters of Old Fort William, Ontario, Canada, and the Boundary Water Canoe Area in Northern Minnesota.

Heidi is one of 56 participants, representing 25 different states and Girl Guides from France and Canada. She'll return sometime after July 11. Hope she gives us a report!

☐Cohasset residents making the Dean's List at their respective colleges were Theresa Infusino of Hull Street, a student at Bentley College, and Paul McKeough, a student at Fairfield University.

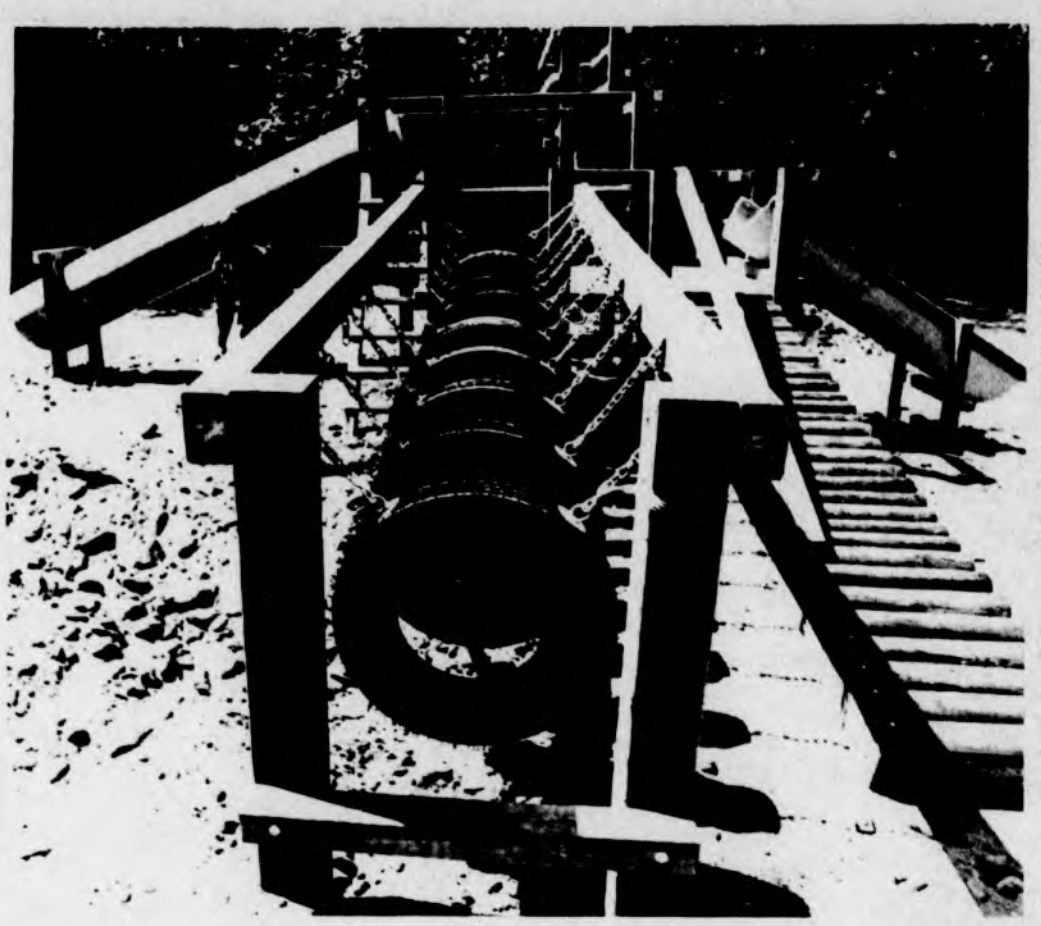
☐Gerry MacLean joined Petersen Realtors in May. Gerry's real estate career began in 1968. She is the current president of the Women's Council of Realtors, Eastern Chapter, and she is a million-dollar member of the Plymouth County Multiple Listing Service.

☐Girl Scout Cadet Troop 300 left to explore Washington, D.C. late last week. Scout Leader Jess Steel and chaperones took the 32 girls, who have raised funds ($2,200) for the trip by holding bake sales, lasagne dinners, car washes, craft sales and by serving lunches at lengthys town meetings. They planned to spend five days in Washington, touring the FBI, Smithsonian Institute, Mount Vernon and other institutions peculiar to Washington. They also hoped to run into Congressman Gerry Studds.

Recently, eight cadets received First Class awards (equivalent to Eagle Scout rank) by having met four scouting challenges. The nine grade girls receiving the award were:

Alison Broeffle, Susan Collins, Susan Hobson, Susan LaVange, Vicky Keane, Teri Finegan, Joy Pratt and Laurie Steel.

☐Via the grapevine...heard Bridget Cox had a very large gathering at her sixth grade graduation party. Laurie Doherty held another one of those parties...and we imagine there were several more celebrations throughout the town. None of which made the police log.



RUMORS AT OSGOOD SCHOOL are that it's a new playtoy for "the girls!" Principal Jack Creamer has already tried it out and it's fun! [Derr photo]

☐From her father, we learned that Lisa Montuori is working on a Tucker Foundation Fellowship this summer through Dartmouth College. She's with an environmental group called the Black Hills Alliance.

In her senior year at Dartmouth, she was one of 12 students selected to do energy resource research in the Black Hills. She will continue research activity throughout her senior year.

☐Teachers — what are they doing this summer? We're still in the process of collecting their replies, which we will run over the next few weeks. So far we've learned they're no lazy slouches.

☐Shirley Manna is going to build a log cabin. Ronna Bingham, CHS librarian, works 12 months, but on her two week vacation she will attend two separate photographic workshops, one with Sam Able and the second with Freeman Petterson.

CHS teachers Doris Lahage and Virginia Burbank are planning a trip to Italy. Maureen Alcott will take a course on the history of the English language at the University of Massachusetts. Don Reed is off to Middlebury College for a time, for language studies.

Joseph Federia will spend some time interpreting and translating at the Mass. General Hospital in Boston. CHS Band Director Tony Hyde will play professionally Saturday evenings in Maine, judge music competitions and field shows throughout New England and Canada (drum corps and marching bands).

Joan Wool will teach swimming part-time, garden, and spend some time with her family. Allan MacDonald, CHS alternative school director, will attend an energy education workshop, an environmental education workshop at Tufts, paint his house, tend his vegetable garden, meet his family and recharge his batteries!

Edwin Leach is planning a motor trip through Canada but otherwise will be resting at home. John Packard will draw and paint, cut wood for the winter, relax and have fun and participate in summer workshops with another teacher in developing a spelling and vocabulary program for grades 7-12.

Tom Lucas, art department, will spend some time in Guildford, England as a result of a house exchange. And, he will return in September with all kinds of paintings, drawings and photos to inspire young art students.

CHS social studies teacher Joseph Bouchard will be program director at Camp Marist, Center Ossipee, New Hampshire. He will be in charge of 300 boys, ages 7-15.

CHS business education teacher Al Flynn will attend advanced workshops in economic education at Northeastern University, he pointed out that the course is fully funded by the Financial Executives Institute. (Perhaps that was a note to the school committee). He will be preparing case studies to be used in high school economics classes.

Physical Education teacher Everett Dorr is going to visit friends, play a lot of golf, go fishing and swimming... "And then paint the house." Special Needs Aide Nick Montuori will work as a counselor/supervisor in Randolph and an office clerk at Stop and Shop. In September he'll be returning to school to get his master's degree at Boston State College.

Lisbeth Koopman-Wyman, art teacher at Osgood, will be going to Europe with The Fine Arts Chorale. Concerts will be held in London, Austria and Vienna. A group from Minnesota and Japan are also participating. She ends her note with: "Tra-lala and mi-mi-mi!" Guess what she will be talking about in September!

Jack MacInnis, music teacher at Deer Hill and Osgood, will sing with the Tanglewood Festival Chorus and the Boston Symphony Orchestra at Tanglewood. And Joseph Becher, Deer Hill science coordinator, will do some writing for Allyn and Bacon publishers, and run his sailing school — Windborne Sailing. (Free advertising plug).

More on teachers next week... should be noted some of their writing was difficult to decipher.

25th annual arts festival

own styles and mediums during this special event on Sunday, July 6, at 2 p.m.

For photographers there will be two stimulating events. Peter Anderson, a Life-Time photographer for over 20 years who teaches in the area and is on the faculty at the South Shore Art Center, invites photographers of all ages and abilities to participate in a workshop called "The Decisive Moment!": A Creative Photography Experience in candid portraiture. Another workshop, "Seeing: photography with Gail Bryan" will use the camera as a vehicle to expand visual awareness. Each of these workshops will be held more than once and their results will be shown at the Art Center.

The work of nearly 200 craftspeople will be among the six ongoing exhibits which will constitute the heart of the Arts Festival. The green and yellow tents will house the annual juried and members shows, sculpture by Denis Kowal and Michael McNabb, and an exceptional Invitational Show featuring works by 14 members of the Guild of Boston Artists.

A jurors exhibit will feature the work of photographers Amy Cain and Gail Bryan and artists Dietmar R. Winkler, SMU's Dean of the College of Visual and Performing Arts, who has exhibited internationally.

Cohasset's Linda Summers has lined up some wonderful children's activities which include two puppet shows by Marshfield's Marcia and Walt Littlefield and their Boston Lamplight Puppet Theatre: The Three Little Pigs and Jack and the Beanstalk will be shown on the fourth. Children can have their pictures taken at the photo-boards of Superman or an Old-fashioned Child which were designed and painted by Cohasset high school students Bonnie Whittemore and Barbie Gurnie who are also organizing crews for face-painting and a graffiti board for youngsters.

And for kids who love Rotten Ralph books, Jack Gantos and Nicole Rubel, author and illustrator of those books will appear dressed as Ralph and Sarah to read to children and to autograph their work which will be on sale.

Marilyn Pope, children's librarian at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library, will present a display of library materials on arts and crafts suitable for children and adults.

Other entertainment will include folk-singer Kenje Ogata and mime, Lisa Thompson. The Cohasset Town Hall will be converted to an arena stage for a production of Godspell, presented by the Cohasset Drama Workshop, directed by Ron Emmons, on July 4,5 and 6 at 8 p.m. Admission will be charged for this performance, all other events are free.

Jeanne N. Armin, publicity editor for the Festival says there may be an "environmental art project" with kids from the Deerfield School. "Each kid will be made up and will interact with the environment," she explains. This conceptual movement will be filmed at the Festival and the movie will be shown at a later date at the Art Center. "However," says Armin, "this is not yet a fait accompli."

As in past years, there will be three large tents housing the show, with a smaller children's tent. The 20 craftspeople will spread their wares between the tents on the grounds along the pond.

The special crafts arrangement of the 25th anniversary will include lamp shades, pottery, illustrations, wind chimes, soft sculpture, coin jewelry, stained glass, woolens (by a weaver), decorative minerals and baskets, to mention a few.

The range of painting styles is equally broad. A fine, simple store front painting, verging on the primitive by Roberta Grassie is, unfortunately, not for sale, but most others carry a price tag. They are real and super-real, abstract and surreal, and subject matter ranges from portraiture to city-scapes, from darkness-on-the-edge-of-town to traditional Cohasset landscapes with lighthouses, done in water, oil and acrylic.

Janet Tooker and Mary Russell are particularly pleased with the special sculpture show of Denis Kowal and Michael McNabb.

Kowal works in acrylic and steel and McNabb in marble and wood. "The difference between the two," says Tooker, "is that Denis's forms are built up, and Michael reduces his to essentials.

"There is something for everyone," says Margaret Dillon, Director of the Art Center, and the dynamo behind the organization since its early days, "and it is of very high quality." It is important to realize says Dillon, that the show is put on completely by volunteers, and paid for by dona tions."

The South Shore Playhouse Associates was one of the original financial supporters, and the Art Center officially came into being when the Playhouse Associates took it under its wing in 1955. The tree hangings of Lucas and company gained wide and rapid support, and there were more painters and sculptors in town than anyone had realized. The current cost of the Festival is $8,000 and the Playhouse Associates will give their support.

The present home of the Center is a rambling wooden wedge-shaped building located in downtown Cohasset. On the first floor it has two galleries and an office and on the second floor there are two studios. A Gallery membership in the Center was offered in January of 1976 to professional artists who exhibit in the galleries on a continuous basis.

Year-round classes, both daytime and evening, are held four terms of ten-week sessions. The wide variety of classes have included painting, drawing, sculpture, leatherwork, jewelry making, silkscreening, decorative ware and ceramics. The students, mostly adult, although there are classes for children too, come from towns throughout the South Shore to receive instruction for the Center's experienced, professional teachers.

Activities go far beyond class instruction and gallery activities. They include tours of Boston galleries and museums through an affiliation with the New England Cultural Education Colloraborative and a three-part semester on Business for Artists. During 1979 and 1980, Sunday at the Center has featured programs of films and speeches.

The Art Festival is the main event at the Center, and in the past 25 years the quality has come up, says Lucas, but not as high as he'd like to see it. "I'd like to see it be the really big art center from the South Shore," he says, "with big artists as well as local people." It is important to have both, he says, and in the past it has gone both ways.

Mary Russell and Janet Tooker are presently more interested in the immediate dynamics, hoping that the spirit that is guiding the tent truck from Maine is in better frame of mind than the last time. Two years ago the truck rolled in to Hingham, found a grassy plot and started putting up the tents.

When they took them down and got to Cohasset, a vigilant citizen realized after 23 years that all along they had been breaking the law. The compressor that pounds the stakes into the ground is attached to the truck, and no trucks are allowed on the green. So they had to find some sledge hammers and bang them in by hand from 7 a.m. to 2 p.m. Right about then they realized something was missing. They ordered three tents, and only received two and a half.

With the current economic crunch they just managed to scrape together the funds for this year's three tents and the children's tent, but they are worried that next year will be worse. Mary Russell fears they might have to go with two and a half tents again.

Schedule for Arts Festival events, July 2-6, 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., July 3-6. The public is invited.

Wednesday, July 2, 7-9 p.m., opening preview.

Thursday, July 3-Sunday, July 6, ongoing exhibits. Juried Show, Invitational Show by members of The Guild of Boston Artists, Invitational Sculpture, Judges Show, 18 craftspeople.

Friday, July 4, 10-12 a.m., children's activities.

10:30 a.m., Three Little Pigs, Boston Lamplight Puppet Theatre.

1:00 p.m., Jack and the Beanstalk, Boston Lamplight Puppet Theatre.

2 p.m., "The Decisive Moment!" A Creative Photography Experience in candid portraiture, conducted by Peter Anderson, Life-Time photographer for over 20 years. For photographers of all ages and levels of ability. Bring your cameras!

3 p.m., Stain Painting demonstration by Claffy Williams.

4 p.m., Folk singer Kenje Ogata.

8 p.m., Godspell, Town Hall. Admission charge. Presented by the Cohasset Drama Workshop. Ron Emmons, director.

Saturday, July 5, 10-12 a.m., children activities.

10-12:30 a.m., calligraphy.

1 p.m., abstract impressionist painting, demonstration by Douglas Orr.

Children's Books. Jack Gantos and Nicole Rubel, author and illustrator of the Rotten Ralph books will appear as Rotten Ralph and Sarah, to read to children and help children write and illustrate a simple book. They will also autograph their work, which will be on sale.

whom are assistant superintendents come from New Jersey, Kentucky, New York, and five individuals are from Massachusetts.

The committee said it would further check educational backgrounds and references through the mails, which could delay the commencement of interviews somewhat. It also said it was highly unlikely it would interview anyone other than the eight individuals selected for screening by the citizen's committee.

The following individuals are "mini-finalists" for the school superintendent position in Cohasset: Robert V. Antonucci, assistant school supt. in Leominster, Massachusetts; Vincent Carbone, assistant school supt. in Springfield, Massachusetts.

And the following six men, all of whom are school superintendents in their system: Eugene Crowell, West Peabody; Philip Devoux, So. Orange, New Jersey; Nap DuFault, Elizabethtown, Kentucky; Richard McKay, Stoughton; Nick Muto, East Orleans, Massachusetts; and Armand Vertucci, Snyder, New York.

On the Cohasset waterfronts

By Rob Tis

Summer's here and with it the annual flocking to the waters at Cohasset.

Since the arrival of the warm weather Sandy Beach has been packed. Saturday the lifeguards began work.

Once again this year the infamous Mark St. John, a name which has become synonomous with the beach, will be back along with John Ayer and newcomers Linda Curley and Scott MacKinnon. There are many other familar sights at the old watering hole this year.

Officer Paul Yocum made his appearance Sunday afternoon and used up close to a whole book of tickets on the cars without the extremely valuable 1980 beach stickers. One ice cream truck has made definite stake at the beach grounds this year: it is run by enterprising CHS grads Lance Norris and Bob Gunville.

The regular beach bums have already made their long awaited appearances. So far it looks as if Dave Gunville has claimed the best tan. Good work Dave!! Dom Campadelli, of ice hockey fame, has been spotted constructing some fine sand castles.

There are quite a few young ladies who are in contention for the absolute best bathing suit. The evidence is just too skimpy for anyone to judge.

Rocky beach has changed very little, sun catchers have been trudging out to the beach and crawling up on the rocks like basking walruses ala Wild Kingdom.

The waves come in a bit bigger on this beach and it is likely you might see a novice surfer skimming the waters. Still, Sandy Beach is your best bet for beach lounging because as inferred by its name, Rocky Beach is blanketed with a profusion of stones, and is just no good for sand castles.

For the boating set, Bassing Beach is perfect. The vastness of this beach at low tide and its seclusion make this seacoast strand one of the choicest beaches in town; in fact it gets the B.B.B. . . Bob's Best Beach.

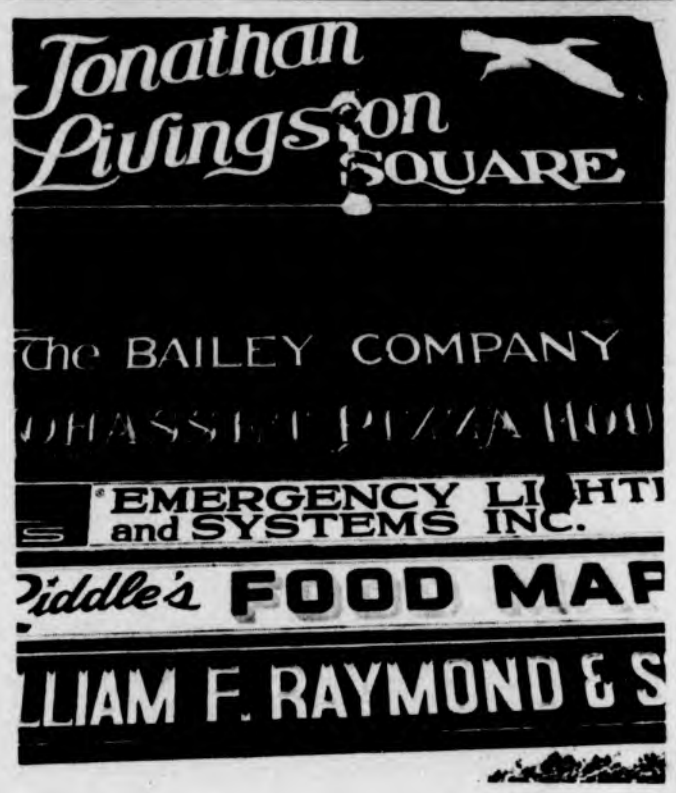
Mill River and Cunningham Bridge, although it is illegal to swim there, have been getting good crowds among the daring younger operation.

Lily Pond, although it is rumored someone took a late night dip last weekend, is not open for swimming. I suggest you don't break this law unless you want a snapping turtle to take up residence on your leg.

The ocean water is growing steadily warmer. Water skiing, sunning, surfing, sailing, power boating, bridge jumping and just plain swimming are now moving into full swing. The tide will be high this weekend and the long range forcast looks good.

I hope to see everyone out on the water doing their own thing.

P.S. Don't forget your beach stickers.



Riddles opens for business Friday

Elaine and Ray Riddle, owners of Riddle's Food Marts located in Sand Hills, North Scituate, and Hingham will open a fourth store in Cohasset. Friday, June 27.

The newly renovated store is located on Rte. 3A in the "Jonathan Livingston Square" shopping area.

The store will offer a large variety of foods at competitive prices including beer and wine and will be open seven days a week including holidays from 6 a.m. to 11 p.m.

The very popular "Buddy" Karlberg of Scituate will be manager of the new store.

Deer Hill School graduates 139

The speeches and the students were shorter, but Sixth Grade graduation exercises were not without pomp, ceremony and serious graduation speeches.

Special awards were given to Kristian Hublitz and Virginia Nussdorfer, co-winners of the athletic/scholastic/citizenship award.

And Head Custodian Robert Barrow was presented with an E pennant from Jack Langmaid, school committee vice chairman, which he received from the Massachusetts Association of School Committees for having been the individual most responsible at Deer Hill School for reducing energy consumption.

John Raftery, acting school supt., invited the now seventh grade students to be participants, not spectators, in the various programs the high school has to offer. "Cohasset High School is people, not just a brick building. From this day on you will be Cohasset High School."

Essayists were Susanne Tehranian, who said "Education cannot be borrowed or sold . . . it can only be achieved by learning." Kara MacDonald spoke of setting educational goals, and the importance of confidence, patience, and friendships along the way.

James Cameron spoke about friendships, and how friends can make a life special. And Kurt Weisenfluh spoke about boldness, saying he supported President Carter's recent attempt to free the American hostages in Iran.

Thomas O'Brien spoke about enjoying each day, and Robert Shultz noted: "Today is the first day of the rest of your life."

Deer Hill School Principal Kenneth Ekberg said "Parents and schools can both be right." But he stressed that while parents may be free to make martyrs of themselves, "They are not free to make martyrs of their children."

He added: "If we eliminate the pathological extremes, we are largely seeing an incredible range of parenting . . . different situations." He asked parents and teachers to seek to understand the needs and expectations of the child before rendering conclusions, stressing that parent and teacher

SQUEEK CAUGHT IN MOUTHTRAP
Q. It sound stupid, buy my mouth squeeks ever since I had a number of new fillings. Have you ever heard of such a thing?
A. Yes, and you are definitely not alone with your problem. It is not uncommon for patients to complain of a "squeeky" sound after having silver fillings. This occurs when the contact between the teeth is not very tight, and allows the fillings to rub against each other causing a squeeking noise. It usually goes away, but sometimes you may need a new filling wedged closer to its neighbor to solve your problem.

had no church community. It has changed demoninations many times over the years, but the stipulation Rev. Newell refers to is not in the present deed." While the stipulation has appeared in other deeds, Rev. Bressler is not expecting any complications with the sale.

Asked if the Nazarenes might challenge the sale legally, Rev. Bressler said "They can't sue. They have no legal standing I know of."

This spring, when the Pope Memorial Church officially went on the market, two congregations and various others inquired about the purchase. "We had offers from everywhere," Rev. Bressler said.

She added the trustees had never received a formal offer from the Nazarenes to buy the church, although they had informally offered $50,000.

Rev. Newell said the Nazarenes are "still interested" in purchasing the church.

In the meantime, the Hellenic Association recently held a fundraising dinner at the Golden Rooster restaurant in Scituate which was attended by more than 250 people. Local religious and civic leaders attended the dinner to show their support.

How one class of '35 sees issues of '80

By Lois Martin

We're knee deep in reunion season. That's the time of year that can send cold chills down the spine of someone who's gained 25 pounds in time for the 25th get-together. Usually the mirror is meaner than the reflection seen in the eyes of classmates. Most of us are tickled to death to find survivors of a class that only members remember.

One woman in our midst got a long distance phone call from Alabama last week. She's been asked to speak about the famous people in her class. And she's not sure there are any. Well, let's face it, Walter Cronkite can only graduate from so many schools. We who have reunioned a lot are well aware that there are entire classes of people without philosophers, inventors of miracle drugs, Nobel Peace prize recipients. In fact, I suggested to her she treat her classmates as they are: famous all b themselves for the rest of the class for the rest of their lives . . . as welders, managers of independent grocery stores, raiser of wonderful children.

PATCHES

Anyway the most intriguing report I've seen on reunions is an official one, based on a questionnaire sent to 1935 graduates of Harvard. Now that's 45 years, folks. Those graduates are in a unique position. They've seen a lot and are as eligible as anyone to be viewed as sage and knowing (notwithstanding their auspicious alma mater). Moreover they're still on Cycle 3 so to speak if not Cycle 2 as I'll claim when I've "been out" 45 years. Thus they keep an eye on the dwindling 20th century, contributing still to its character while offering comeuppance as needed.

This questionnaire is a doozy. It addressed personal tastes, political support, and position on topical issues. In fact the answers have almost stripped the Class of '35 of mystery. They graduated during the Depression and Hitler's Heydey and after Hoover's chicken in every pot. These opinions were gleamed during a Recession, while there's still chicken in every pot but seldom roast beef. I've gratitude that Hoover's way instead of Hilter's prevailed.

Anyway here's how Harvard '35 stands on some issues.

— They like Bush (37 per cent) for all the good that did them. They put Reagan at 5 per cent; Kennedy at 2 per cent and President Jimmy Carter at 15 per cent.

— More than 80 per cent say they have no regrets about their lives but the tabulation report indicates members "enjoy some fantasies." Thank goodness! I was afraid we'd have to give those up along with salt and sugar.

— A classy crowd, 75 per cent visit at least one art gallery a year and one classmate went 50 times (makes one wonder about his favorite picture and if it was at all related to the fantasy response . . .none of our business to be sure).

— They're not wild about sports, games or pets. No distinction was drawn among those three things, events or people.

— They endorse Thomas Jefferson, a bit late for any political activity. But they liked his lifestyle. But Tom didn't get all the votes. Some went to Aristotle, Satchel Paige (2), and Groucho Marx among other pace setters.

— They show active support for: ban on smoking (56 per cent); restrictions on valium (57 per cent); aid to Israel (67 per cent) and volunteer army (61 per cent).

And they'll have nothing to do with: PLO or the IRA. They are split on the Women's Liberation Movement and psychiatry, easily confused issues as well as consuming ones.

They don't give a hoot about: gay liberation, cohabitation, coed dorms or health foods.

I wish I could say you heard it here first, but I'm afraid we're the second publication to make known these results, the Harvard publication being the first.

But I believe we've helped. You'll know a Harvard '35 Grad now when you see one.

It'll be the woman in the art gallery or at the Pops who doesn't go outside for a cigarette and who is overheard to say she'll support Bush in '84 . . . But then that too may be one of the random fantasies reported in the questionnaire. Happy Reunion!

You can pay-by-phone at Cohasset Savings Bank

Cohasset Savings Bank will offer another modern banking service to depositors beginning July 1 when it inaugurates Pay-by-Phone, a system that enables customers to pay bills directly by telephone rather than writing and mailing personal checks.

The addition of Pay-by-Phone service marks another first for Cohasset Savings as the only local bank offering this convenience. Cohasset Savings' Sea Bank 24 at it's North Scituate office is the only round-the-clock automatic banking service in the area and its mini-computer in its main Cohasset office is believed to be the only one in use by any bank or business locally.

The bank will feature the new service at a booth during the Scituate Heritage Days July 4-6, with prize drawing for those showing an interest.

"We are pleased to be able to offer Pay-by-Phone and believe that people in our service area will soon find out how much easier and less expensive it is to handle their bill paying this way," Osborn F. Ingram, bank president, said in making the announcement. "We are certain too, that local merchants will see important advantages in participating."

Pay-by-Phone is a new service that enables customers to call a central, toll-free number any time of the day or night seven days a week and give instructions for paying bills. Using codes that assure accuracy and security, the caller specifies the amount they will to pay each merchant and that amount is automatically recorded. Funds are then deducted from the customer's NOW account and credited to the merchant on the next business day. Statements are issued to both the customer and the merchant, and the customer gets a monthly statement of the account.

There is a small monthly charge for the service, which in most instances is considerably less than the cost of checks and postage. There is no charge to participating merchants and funds paid to them are guaranteed by the bank, thus eliminating the substanial problem of returned checks.

Pay-by-Phone is an aspect of the growing system of Electronic Funds Transfer embracing such conveniences as direct deposit of Social Security checks, payroll checks and various check-cashing and automatic banking services.

C of C Sponsors 12th Annual Heritage Days

By Ann Fogg

1980 is the 12th year the Scituate Chamber of Commerce has sponsored Heritage Days. According to this year's chairman Paul McCarthy, the program has grown tremendously since it was initiated by William Muller, a naval architect/marine engineer and history buff who liked new ideas and thought Scituate needed something to develop interest in its heritage.

Jeannette Muller says her husband started the event because he wanted to give the townspeople and their visitors something to do in the summer and interest them in the history of the town. He was happy to see younger people with new ideas coming into the Chamber and considered the greatly expanded number of activities "just marvelous."

This year's Scituate Guide and Program of Events, dedicated to his memory, lists activities that have become traditional, like the Historical Society and Coast Guard Cutter Open Houses and the dory race, and some new ideas, like the lobster crate race and the commercial fishing exhibit. "The emphasis has always been on the history and the sea," says June Merrill, who has been involved from the beginning.

Traditionally held in August on a weekend when the tides allowed the Coast Guard boat to get to the Town Pier at noon, Heritage Days has been moved to the Fourth of July weekend this year to coincide with the large number of people who remain in town or visit town at that time.

McCarthy defines the purpose of Heritage Days "to provide an interest in our town and business community." But the number of people involved, he adds (over 210), goes far beyond Chamber of Commerce members. "It's a truly community project which involves the entire town to a greater extent than it did originally."

This year the Chamber has spent considerable money on promotion and prizes. What they gain back through the entry fees and raffle tickets, beyond expenses, will go toward such civic projects as the Santa phone and visit and the Welcome to Scituate sign on Route 3A.

Heritage Days is attracting out of town attention this year, and McCarthy expects many out-of-town visitors. Channel Four's Evening Magazine will promote the event on Thursday, July 3. Scituate's giving an open party.

Memorable mimers are the sassy performers above, readying for Heritage Days. L-R: Kim O'Shea, 11, Trisha Gasbarro, 12, and Colleen O'Shea, 9.

81 prizes to be awarded for woodcarving

A total of 81 prizes will be awarded this year in the Scituate Heritage Days championship woodcarving competition and exhibition, to be held July 4, 5 and 6 at St. Mary's Hall in the harbor. All woodcarving aficianados in professional, amateur and novice (under 16, carving less than one year) categories are eligible.

All entries in the eight classes will be voted on by public ballot during the three days of the exhibition. Pieces will be classified as follows: sculpture, quarterboards, tavern signs, eagles, birds, animals, relief and functional. $50 cash prized will be awarded to those gathering the most votes overall in each of those classifications, as well as ribbons and rosettes in other categories.

A registration fee of $5 for the first piece and $1 for each additional entry is required; each entry must be labeled with the carver's name, address and the date completed on the botton or back. Deliver all pieces to St. Mary's Hall Thursday, July 3 between 4 and 9 p.m., or pre-register at Paul McCarthy's Carving Place, 132 Front St., Scituate Harbor.

Annual dory races begin July 5

Once again, the Annual Dory Races will highlight Scituate Heritage Days 1980 on the water, with preliminaries set to begin at 10 a.m., Saturday, July 5.

Finals will be held at 3:30 p.m. that day.

Registration fees are $4 in the senior category, $2 for juniors, and all interested rowers can pre-register at Paul McCarthy's Carving Place.

The dories which will be used in the races have been handcrafted and donated for use by Roger Crawford of Humarock. According to Crawford, the Finestkind 15-foot racing dory is a very light, very fast craft. "You can row the Finestkind about twice as fast as you can paddle a canoe."

VOLVO ANNOUNCES

28 EPA est. mpg 38 EPA est. hwy

The Volvo 4-door GL diesel sedan with manual transmission and overdrive. Use these numbers for comparisons. Actual mpg may differ depending on speed, trip length and weather. Actual highway mpg will probably be lower than EPA highway estimate.

If you wondered where Volvo was when they handed out fuel-efficient diesel engines, you can stop wondering. You'll find an economical, smooth-running six-cylinder diesel in both our four-door Volvo GL sedan and our Volvo GL wagon. So, if you're determined to stop buying gas, it's time to start thinking about buying a VOLVO.

HERITAGE DAYS

JULY 4·5·6

Rudy Mitchell and Doug Tatreau, co-chairmen of the Scituate Heritage Days Photo Contest announced recently the following rules for the 1980 competition:

With the exception of the judges, all persons are eligible to enter the photo competition, regardless of age. Entries must be submitted by June 28; they may be mailed or delivered to Tatreau's Card and Camera Shop, 99 Front Street, Scituate Harbor, Mass. 02066. An entry fee of $2 per print is required.

There are no restrictions on subject matter, but the original exposure must have been made within the past 24 months; no transparencies (slides) will be accepted.

Prints must be mounted or matted on suitable material (no frames will be accepted), the overall size is to be no smaller than 8 x 10 (10 x 8) or larger than 16 x 20 (20 x 16). All prints should be titled on the back of the print, and the photographer's name and address must be printed in the center of the back of each print. No information of any kind may appear on the front of the photograph.

Photographs improperly mounted, identified or submitted without a title will not be judged.

All prints will be on display for public judging on June 29.

Awards will be announced on July 6, with three prizes awarded by the public and three awards according to popular vote. The Chamber of Commerce and the Heritage Days Committee cannot assume responsibility for damage to entries during the exhibition.

For complete rules and information, contact Rudy Mitchell, 545-2137 or Doug Tatreau, 545-5976.

DRIVE UP YOUR NET WORTH IN A RABBIT.

Part of Rabbit appreciation is its depreciation. Take the '78 Rabbit. It's actually increased in book value through the years. That's performance unmatched by the '78 Toyota Corona, Peugeot 504 and Cadillac El Dorado.

Of course, you don't have to get rid of your Rabbit to appreciate its value. While you own it you can enjoy surprising spaciousness, perky acceleration (0 to 50 mph in 8.3 seconds), and remarkable braking (50 to 0 mph in under 4 seconds).

And when the day finally comes to take your Rabbit to market, if you've taken good care of it, chances are it will take good care of you.

That's why many people think the Rabbit isn't just a car but an excellent investment vehicle.

Historical Society to hold historical tours

By Yvonne Twomey

The Scituate Historical Society each year takes a highly active part in Heritage Days. On July 5 and 6, the Society will hold historic tours both days from 1-5 p.m.

If you start promptly at 1 p.m., you will be able to make the complete tour and learn how our forefathers lived, worked, and played.

The Society's booth at Cole Parkway is the center for information, brochures and maps, publications on Scituate history including Deane's History of Scituate, old and new scenes on postcards, certificates for the Old Oaken Bucket land, etc.

The heritage/history of Scituate — that is, the legacy of previous generations combined with an interesting story — is undeniably present in the six sites totally different from one another.

The Old Oaken Bucket Homestead and the Stockbridge Mill are situated near Old Oaken Bucket Pond (Rte 3A and 123). The Stockbridge Mill, built by Isaac Stedman in 1640, has a long varied history as the earliest water-driven grist mill in the U.S. with its original grinding stones from England in operation today to grind corn into cornmeal for sale whileyou in 1980 watch the process.

What a step back into time that experience is! But the mill also was the focus of a vicious Indian battle on May 20, 1676 when Scituate was nearly wiped from the face of the earth — 32 heads of families were slain (women and children were not counted in the final tally!).

Then the Mill became famous along with the Old Oaken Bucket through the poem/song "The Old Oaken Bucket" by Samuel Woodworth. The Old Oaken Bucket Homestead is 1/4 mile from the mill and a "must" to see. There is a "new" old oaken bucket and the ell of the house now in the process of restoration has shown this building to be of great interest for its very early construction — worthy of several visits by experts from Plimoth Plantation.

This old farmstead is also the center of a growing collection of memorabilia of Samuel Woodworth, who became an important well-known American poet. So well known is this poem that requests for a 9x12 inch certificate, printed on parchment saying that the donation of $10 which "buys" a square foot of land, has helped preserve part of the Old Oaken Bucket Homestead for the future generations have come from Calif., Florida, Hawaii, Canada, to a total of 450 so far. A wonderful gift for anyone.

The purchase and restoration of the Old Oaken Bucket Homestead has been a major project of the Society for two years and is a continuing one.

Within a mile of these sites on the corner of Greenfield Lane and Stockbridge Rd. is the Mann Farmhouse and Museum. The old classic Cape farmhouse of Percy Mann who was the last of five generations living in this house has cellarstones laid in the 1600's, the main house rebuilt in 1749, and the ell added in 1825 — making it a three-century house.

The collection of artifacts in the house reflect the many occupations of this family from sailmaking to cobbling. There is also a slide presentation showing the restoration of this property to its present perfect state. The Mann House is open weekdays and Saturday during the summer months.

On First Parish Road in the vicinity of the Lawson Park and its famous elephant fountain are the Cudworth House and Barn and the Lawson Tower. The Cudworth House is the home of the Scituate Historical Society and is open also during June through September. This house and barn are a treasure chest of various collections — costumes, carriages, china, etc.

Here on the 275 year old large rough hewn loom in an ell of this early colonial home, Mrs. Laidlaw, president of the Society, will demonstrate weaving. She estimates that she's woven 175 yards of material on this loom over the years, including the curtains for the Cudworth House. Also in keeping with this house, the South Shore Spinners will have two of their members demonstrating spinning and have a display of the items they have spun.

The Cudworth House if featured in color photographs in Colonial Homes magazine (July/August, 1980).

Across the street from the Cudworth House is the Lawson Tower, built in 1902 by Thomas W. Lawson, the "Copper King", to cover the unsightly iron water tank that was in direct view of "Dreamwold" his fabulous dream house. He sent an architect to Europe to make sketches of different towers and turrets from which he made his choice. Today, topped by beautiful chimes which will be playing, and offering a breathtaking view often as far as Cape Ann, is the most unusual water tower in the U.S. — a National Landmark — and still used by the Town of Scituate. Counting the steps to the top is a favorite guessing game that Lawson never anticipated when he built the tower.

Another completely different tower is that at the Old Scituate Light. At the keeper's cottage you can see the various documents concerning the history of the Lighthouse and hear the story of the "American Army of Two", Rebecca and Abigail Bates, and walk in the steps of the many lightkeepers up to the Light tower.

The Lawson Tower towers still over Scituate. [Missing from photo is Rapunzel].

Learning New/Old Ways of Cooking July 5

By Ann Fogg

Have you ever eaten smoked whitefish? Deep fried squid that tastes like fried clam strips? Tarts filled with monk fish, a meat so tasty it's called poor man's lobster?

No? That's most likely because fishermen throw away many delicious and nutritious fish simply because there's not enough demand for them to make it worth while to bring them in. In a time when prices keep rising and food resources are getting scarce, such waste of perfectly good fish makes no sense to many people.

Three of these people are Captain Frank Mirarchi, owner of the Scituate dragger Christopher Andrew, and Don DePedro and Rebecca Fasske who run Steverman's Fish Market in Scituate Harbor. On Saturday, July 5, as part of the Heritage Days celebration, you'll have a chance to tour the Christopher Andrew and possibly other commercial fishing boats. You'll also be able to taste some unusual fish and learn new/old ways of cooking it from a number of expert seafood chefs. You may also win a chance for two adults to spend a day aboard the Christopher Andrew.

One of the expert chefs is Neil Murphy, head of marketing for the Massachusetts Division of Marine Fisheries. He's responsible for publicizing such underutilized species as whitefish, hake, dogfish, squid, mackeral, ocean catfish or wolf fish and monk fish. With his van complete with fishcase and fryolator, he will spend all afternoon in Scituate, cooking and serving samples on the Town Pier.

In addition, George Adams, a sport fisherman and part-time commercial fisherman from Cohasset, will demonstrate his smoker and serve smoked squid and fish. In case you wish to try any of your new recipes, Steverman's Fish Market will stock as complete an array as possible of the kinds of fish demonstrated.

This is the first year fishermen have been involved in the Heritage Days activities; the sacrifice of the day's fishing, however, is worthwhile to Mirarchi if he can use the time to develop a market for fish that now is wasted. He's trying to convince other boat owners to join him. This is also the first year the state has been involved in Heritage Days.

The idea started one day last November when Mirarchi and DePedro were trying to think of a way to increase public awareness of the wider varieties of fish that could be available. "Most people," says Mirarchi, "have a preconceived notion of fish as a firm, white, dry meat like cod, haddock, or flounder. Heritage Days seemed like a good vehicle, when we could capitalize on the crowds at the pier and introduce them to some new ideas."

Mirarchi defines as "underutilized" fish which are abundant in New England waters and saleable elsewhere but not in demand here. All that's needed is to expand that preconceived notion. Mackeral, for example, is an oily, dark fish for which people can acquire a taste. Squid is aesthetically unpleasing to many, but properly prepared it's delicious.

Some fish need special handling to retain flavor and consistency. Whiting and hake are both very soft and must be iced immediately. Dogfish decomposes quickly if it's not handled properly, but in France it's a delicacy.

According to Mirarchi, there are five bills before Congress now to obtain federal funds to provide loan money or tax incentives for boats and processing plants to adapt to handle and promote underutilized species. "If whiting sells for seven or eight cents a pound, it's hardly worth bringing it in," says Mirarchi. It goes back over the side, but not to swim; decompression, temperature change, crushing have killed it, and it's food for gulls and other fish.

But if people can't get it, they won't demand it. The cycle must break somewhere. Mirarchi, DePedro, and Fasske invite you to the Town Pier Saturday afternoon from 11 to 4 for some new an unusual taste treats from the sea.

"If it works, we might get Julia Child next year."

Mann house yields up some ...

Ann Fogg

The old cape sleeps in the spring sunshine, its face turned to the south because its 17th century foundation was laid by a builder who knew the value of those slanting winter rays. The site of three centuries and seven generations of one Scituate family, the Mann House has in the last 10 years yielded up some of the secrets of its past.

New England has been for many families a jumping-off place from which to settle the rest of the continent; few houses here have amassed history from one family for so long.

The Town owns the house today because of a confrontation 55 years ago between two stubborn, immoveable forces: the Town government and Percy Thomas Mann, an independent, cantankerous old Yankee, the last surviving member of the Scituate branch of the descendents of Richard Mann who settled here in 1636.

If you're an old Scituate resident, you've heard the story many times, but if you're new around here you might be interested in this tale of characteristic Yankee intransigence.

The land with the Mann House once reached from the corner of Stockbridge Road and Greenfield Lane all the way to Third Cliff (and thereby hangs another tale) and included a gravel pit that is now part of the Driftway Planned Development District. Percy, a farmer and furniture refinisher, also sold gravel from this pit. In 1925 the Town took the gravel pit by eminent domain for use on the roads.

Percy considered the $450 the Town voted him insufficient recompense for the potential future income that gravel pit would have provided. He refused the money, fought the taking in court but lost, then decided to win in his own way.

He must have known the house was a potential goldmine to historical enthusiasts, and he determined to live in it the rest of his life, do absolutely nothing to it, and refuse to pay taxes. "When the Town gets it, it won't be worth anything."

And that't exactly what he did. Until December 7, 1968 when he died at the age of 93, he lived there with no electricity, no central heat, and no running water, wrapping his bitterness around him like a cloak and barricading himself into several smoke-blackened rooms piled high with newspapers and refuse.

Yet his cantankerous independence won him admiration from many who knew him. Phoebe Mulligan, who knew him the last 10 years of his life, calls him a "dear, cranky old Yankee."

He lived in the kitchen, the back part of the ell that is now the caretaker's apartment, and in the winter it was always warm there from the wood stove when she'd go over with his tea and oatmeal in the morning.

He always had an amusing tale or comment, she says, and she always left there laughing. Once when she cleaned off a corner of the table to set a place for his food, he cracked, "What is this, urban renewal?"

Turned down by the Army in 1917 because he was a farmer and he didn't pass the physical, he turned out to be tougher than most. People today know again what it means to heat with wood and coal, but few still do it at 90. Three years before his death he built a storage place for the hay for his horse, Zebbie, digging the post holes himself. And the summer before his death he cut his lawn with sheep shears.

Proud, he supported himself thriftily on Social Security payments procurred for him by his Hingham friend John Sewell and on payments he received for refinishing furniture. Pheobe Mulligan says that she's heard from others that if he'd coorporated with the Town, he could have sold them the gravel by the load. But he was too independent to have anyone telling him what to do.

Kathleen Laidlaw says that when the article to restore the Mann House was presented to Town Meeting by the Historical Society, the Town voted unanimously to spend $750 a year for five years to do the work. In addition, the Garden Club, the PM Club, the Women's Club, the Harbor Merchants' Association, and other groups raised more money, and people bought shingles for $7 a bundle.

The house is a monument to more than Percy's independence; its 17th century foundation, 18th century main section, and 19th century ell are evidence of the development in construction. Many people go there to study ways to restore old houses. And the collected family antiques give us a clear picture of how this New England family lived in this house.

From mid-June to mid-September the Mann House will be open Wednesday through Saturday from two to five o'clock. The Cudworth House, with the genealogical records will be open Monday through Saturday from one to five.

In addition, the Historical Society has planned five open tours during which both the Mann and Cudworth Houses will be open as well as the Old Oaken Bucket House, the Lighthouse, Lawson Tower, and Stockbridge Mill, the oldest operating water-powered grist mill in the country. Each tour will include demonstrations of spinning, weaving, and corn grinding.

The first tour was Sunday, June 8. If you missed that one, the others are July 5 and 6, August 17, and September 14.

That other tale? Kathleen Laidlaw's busy writing that one for the Historical Society Bulletin, and if the Mariner scoops her, we're in trouble. Suffice it to say that it pertains to the fact that the land once went all the way to Third Cliff and to the Spanish coin that Percy Mann always wore around his neck. "Theres more where that came from," was all he would every say.

Executive Board of Singles Group meets

The Executive Board of Directors of On Our Own Singles Group, met at the home of Jan Palmer in Plymouth recently.

Details and programs for the summer months were outlined and planned along with new membership acceptances.

On Our Own is a non-profit singles organization serving the South Shore area. It consists of four main chapters; namely the Hockomock Chapter, Oceanside, Marshfield and North River Chapters. Each chapter meets weekly in the home of club members, offering a group discussion and social outlet to meet the needs of any and all adult age single people.

Social activities are planned a month in advance and many are designed to include the children of the single parent.

For more information and details of the Chapter meeting closest to your area, please call the office at 826-8903.

Hunter. The Original Olde Tyme Ceiling Fan.
This is the original. Since 1886 one standard of quality. In appearance. In performance. No short cuts. On the power for one light bulb, it can make a room at 78° feel like 70°. And in winter, it recirculates rising warm air to save on heating costs. Repels insects, disperses odors and smoke. Two speeds. Easy to install even on 8' ceilings. Light extra.

Diet Pepsi 10,000 meters series better

By Nancy Burns

This year's Heritage Day road race has gone big this time and become the Diet Pepsi 10,000 Meter Series and its expected to be bigger and better than ever.

The Diet Pepsi program began in 1978 with 33 separate events; swelled to 95 events in 1979 and now it ranks as the largest series of organized road races at any distance in the world.

A whopping 130,000 runners from all parts of the country have discovered the uniqueness of this massive running program by joining in.

Big time runners such as marathon king Bill Rodgers regularly participate, 28.36; as does Randy Thomas, 28:37; Mike Slack, 28:56 and Bob Hodge, 28:59; all of whom logged their sub 29-minute records for 10K races at the Diet Pepsi Series.

"Runners are very results-conscious," explains Bill Rodgers, pacesetter for the Diet Pepsi Series. "And why not? A finish time is like the big pay-off whether you sprint or drag across the finish line."

To meet that need Diet Pepsi provides every participant in every race with a personalized results card regardless of finish time or place.

The official finish time, age and sex of every runner in a Diet Pepsi race is computerized. Within a few weeks of each event, the runner receives personalized race results comparing his or her achievement against a national standard in the appropriate age/sex/ability group.

The card also includes a record of pace per mile — essential data for the road racing strategist. A new addition for the 1980 Diet Pepsi Performance Rating is the total number of runners in the race and the total number of runners in his/her category, making it easier for the racer to know how much he/she has improved on the road.

Every race produces a male and a female winner in four age group categories: under 20, 21;35, 36-49, and over 50. The youngest Diet Pepsi racer on record is five years old (several Scituate youngsters aged five and up raced last year); the oldest finisher is 72 years of age.

All eight winners at every qualifying race are invited to compete in one of five regional competitions, this year held in Houston, St. Louis, New York, Denver and San Diego. Many regional winners earn an expense-paid trip to Purchase, New York, for the October 4 running of the second Diet Pepsi 10 K Road Racing Championships and a shot at the record books.

2000 runners expected to participate in Pepsi Road Race

The Diet Pepsi 10,000 Meter Series Road Race, hosted by the Jolly Tinker Athletic Club in conjunction with the 1980 Scituate Heritage Days celebration expects close to 2,000 runners when the gun goes off July 6.

There will be three water stations along the race course: at the Clipper Ship Motel on Front Street, at the Scituate Harbor Yacht Club on Jericho Road, and on Beaver Dam Road before the hill.

Trophies and awards are scheduled for presentation at 1 p.m. in front of Central School on Branch Street.

Refreshments will be provided by the Pepsi-Cola Bottling Company to all participants at the finish line.

The Diet Pepsi Series is part of a national series; it's AAU sanctioned; and finally all participants receive an individual rating card.

The Scituate race is a local qualifying event, and is part of the national Diet Pepsi 10,000 Meter Series. Last year's race was held in Newton with 2,800 runners and thousands of spectators.

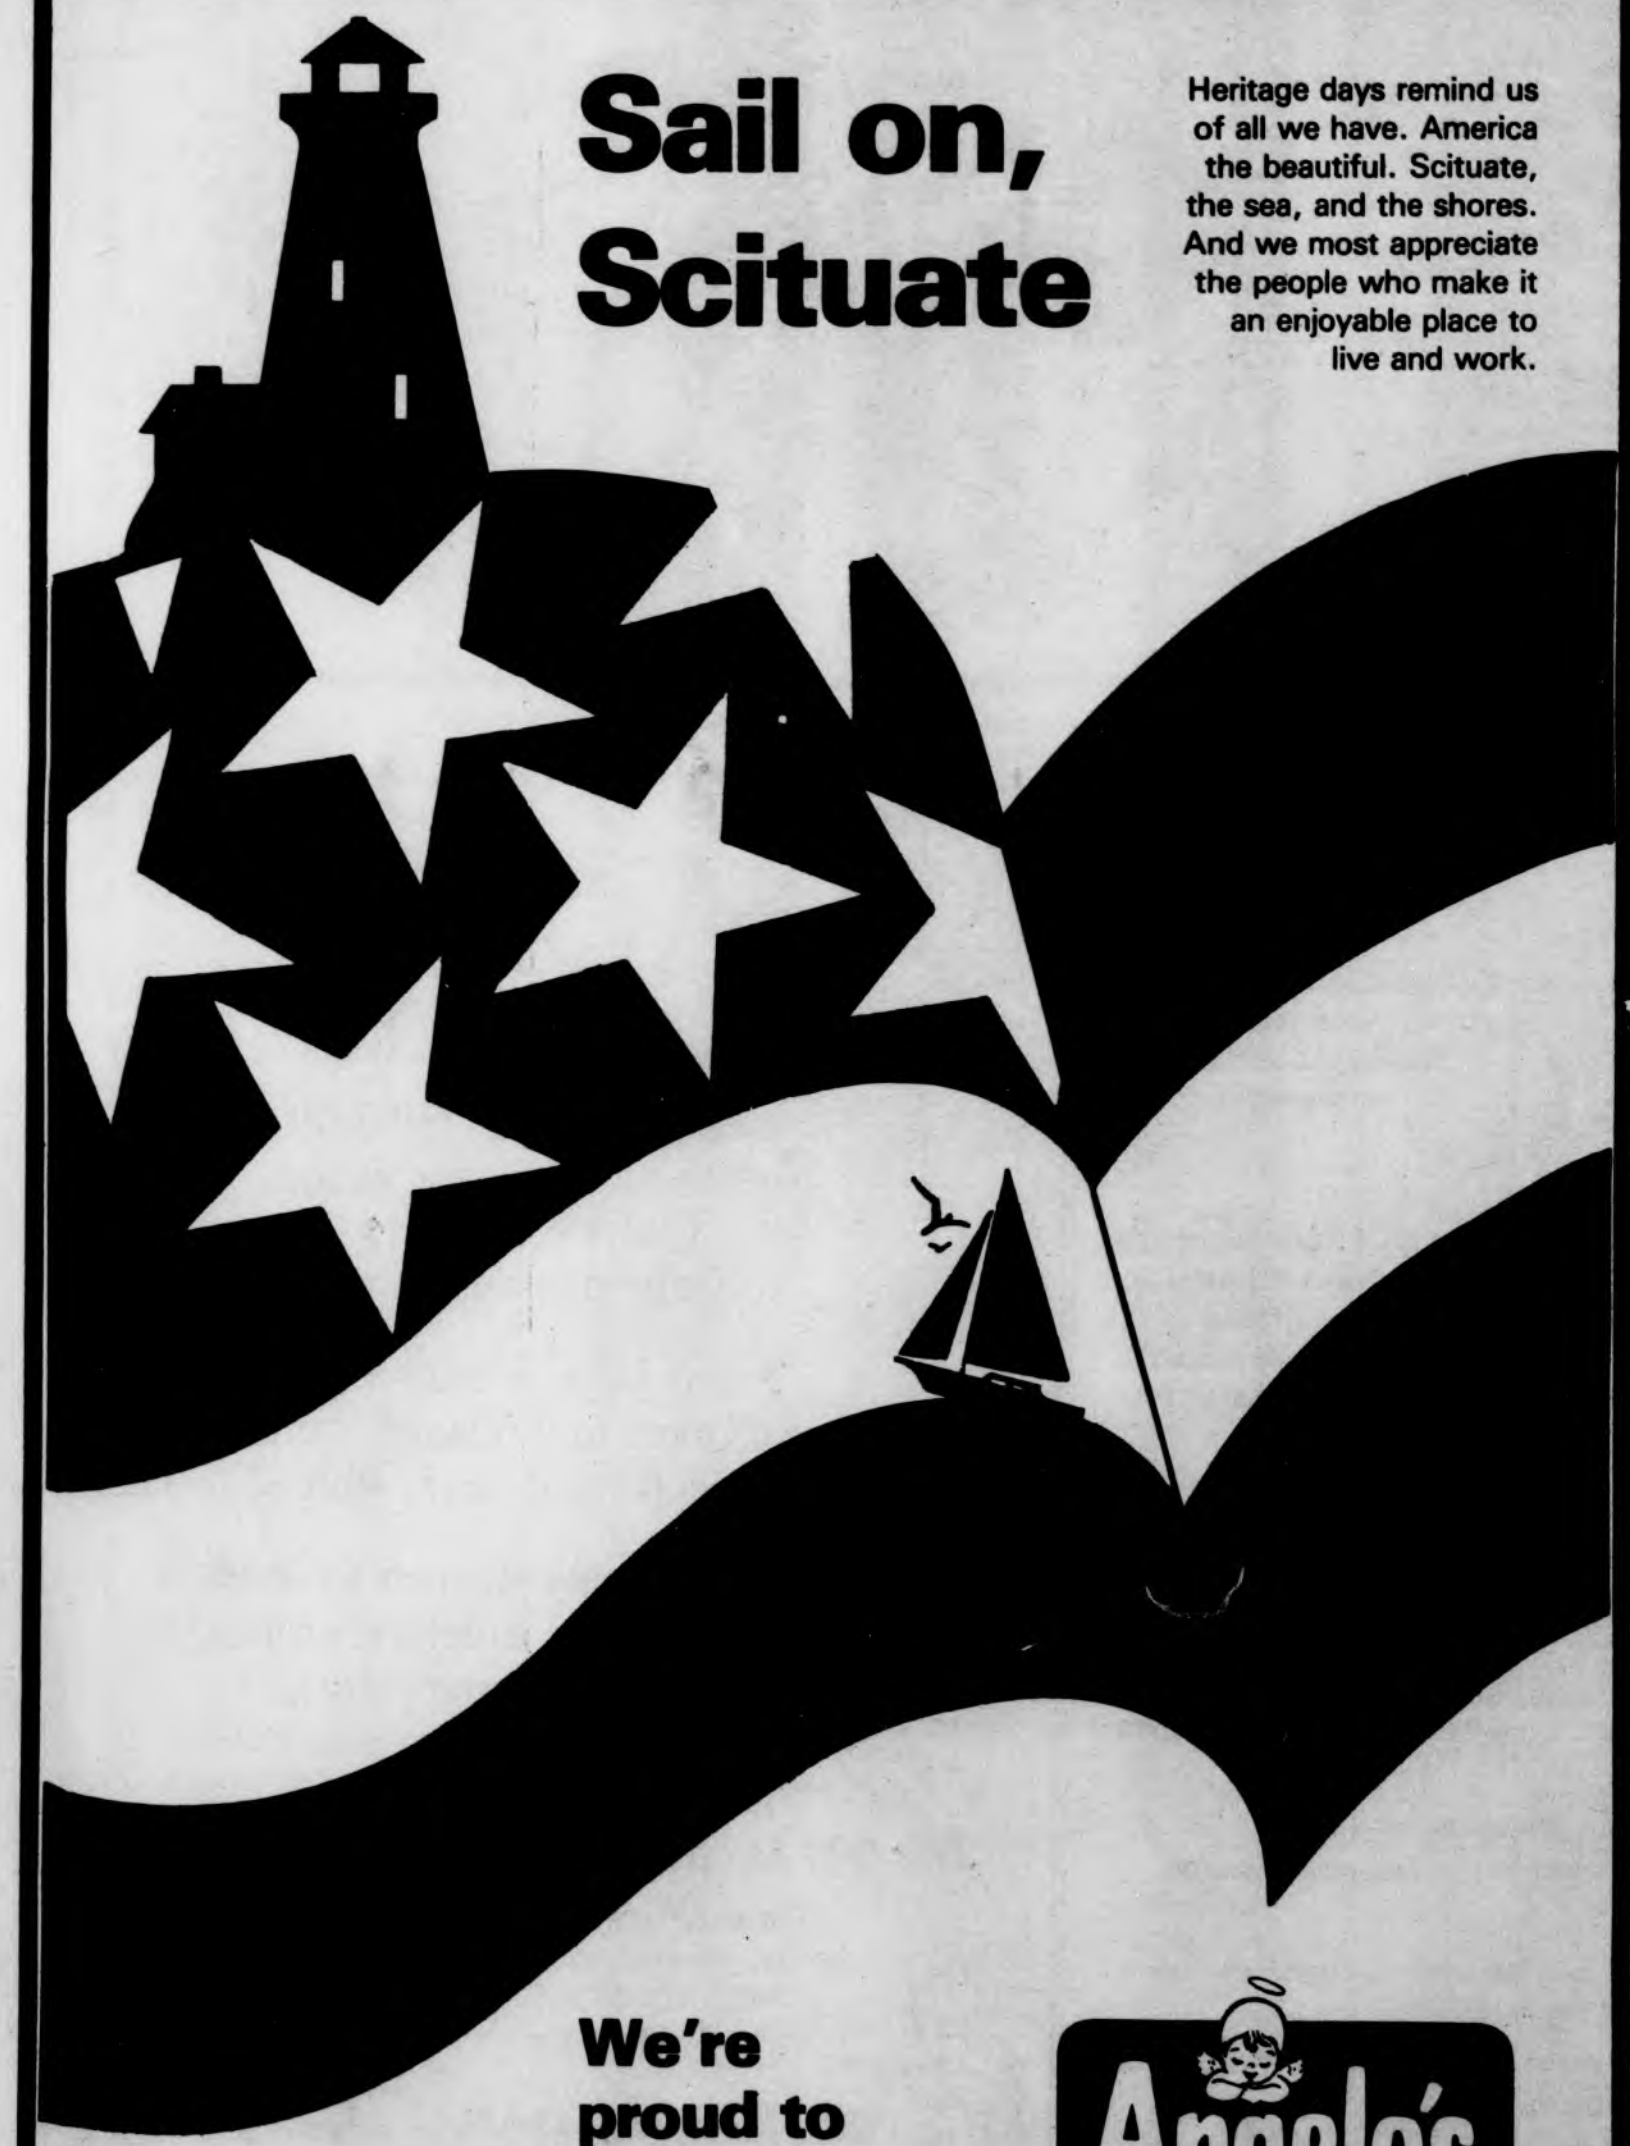
The race is not limited to professional runners... it is open to runners of all ages and abilities. The age categories are: ages 13 and under, ages 14-20, 21-35, 36-49, and 50 and over. There will be medals awarded to the first three male and female finishers in each category.

All runners will receive a Diet Pepsi 10,000 Meter T-shirt.

Over 130,000 runners have participated in similar Diet Pepsi races.

The race will begin at 11 a.m., Sunday, July 6 from the Central School, at the junction of Branch Street and Beaver Dam Road.

Registration forms are available at any Stop and Shop Courtesy Booth. Late registration will be held the day of the race from 8 to 10 a.m. Race packets can be picked up at the staging area from 8 to 10 a.m.



When time is short, we can help

If you're behind; can't always plan ahead; have to wait for last minute information; just plain forgot, etc., etc., we can help.

We can usually give 24 hour service on camera-ready copy, anywhere from 25 to 2,500 copies of your original.

If your copy needs typesetting or if you want more copies, we're happy to do that, too. Just give us a little more time.

Selectmen interview super cops for chief

Captain Stankiewicz

By Bernie Quigley

A cop or a soldier must be good at thinking on his feet, but Stanley Stankiewicz is equally good at thinking in his car. He's been driving up to Southern Vermont College from Pittsfield for years now, a couple of nights after work, pursuing a bachelor's degree which he will finally receive in August.

He must have had a lot on his mind when he came to Town Hall last Thursday morning, and he had a five-and-a-half-hour drive to think it over.

Stankiewicz was the last of three candidates to appear at hour-long grillings by the Selectmen, who will decide which of the three will be the new Police Chief. He was scheduled last because he had the longest way to drive.

John A. DeBassio came from Brockton and Edward Haraden came from Hamilton, so they too had a lot of time to think.

"Culturally and aesthetically Pittsfield has the same flavor as Cohasset," said Stankiewicz, responding to Selectman Arthur Clark's question on why he wants to work here.

"Culturally and Aesthetically," said this cop. Once upon a time if a cop talked like that he would have been thrown off the force. Once upon a time cops talked with their nightsticks, and some were most eloquent.

But the words came out smoothly when Stankiewicz said them. He had earned them and they belonged to him. He made good sense when he spoke, and once he got going the questions became shorter and the answers were lectures—lessons—in police method since the bad old days when cops spoke with their sticks.

"Crime is a social phenomenon," said Stankiewicz, "that involves the whole state; it involves all the people." He spoke of crime prevention committees in Pittsfield that he began as a neighborhood watch program to protect wealthy neighborhoods from burglary. The idea was to make the police accessible to the people, and it spread to other areas of crime.

The program took hold and a strange thing happened.Crime went up. Or it appeared to go up. In fact, it had previously gone unreported.

This he learned in police school at Amherst, and the results were the same in his town as in other towns that had instituted the programs. And this he would like to apply to Cohasset.

"There are basically four steps," he said, when asked how he would improve services here in Cohasset. "First, analyze the situation to find out where the weak points are. Second, train the police; third, let the people know what's going on, and

Cherry sheet shows net loss of $40,000

Cohasset taxpayers may see red over newly-released Cherry Sheet figures which no matter how you figure it, add up to another increase in the tax rate.

According to Cherry Sheet figures released by the state, Cohasset will receive $25,075 less in reimbursements than it got last year. At the same time, state and county assessments reflect an increase of $15,127 — meaning Cohasset taxpayers will sustain a net loss of $40,202 for the '81 fiscal year. That translates into an increase of about 40 cents on the tax rate (presently $49 per thousand).

County assessments for 1981 have decreased by $10,662.84 from $129,037.59 in 1980 to $118,374.75 in 1981. However, state assessments increased by $18,201.71 in 1981. The town's MBTA assessment went from $76,198 to $94,400. Other increases were in state recreational areas outside metropolitan areas — this figure will go from $39,000 in '80 to $45,000 in fiscal '81.

Assessor Warren Pratt was unable to be reached before deadline this week. But according to Town Accountant William Signorelli, Cohasset taxpayers can plan of an increase of from $5-$6 in the tax rate this year.

Signorelli said any increase in assessed valuation could reduce that final tax rate figure. For instance, if assessed valuation should go up $1 million, the tax rate would show a decrease of 55 cents.

Hyde denied grievance—petitioners outraged

Late last week Tony Hyde, instrumental music director at CHS, was informed by letter that the Cohasset School Committee had voted to deny his grievance over his firing.

Committee Chairman Frank England said Monday the committee was advised by its attorney that it was not required to vote in public on the matter. The committee did announce its vote at Monday's session.

As a result of the committee's action, the Cohasset Teachers' Association (CTA) will take the issue of Hyde's firing to arbitration. Hyde had completed his third year of teaching this year. His reappointment would have put him on tenure.

Over the last month or so the school committee has been plagued with Hyde supporters saturating meetings, and pleading on his behalf. Parents and students alike have attended and spoken at these sessions in great numbers.

Monday's session was no exception. After a week-long phone call campaign, approximately 50-60 supporters, bearing a reinstatement petition with 171 names, again asked the committee to rescind its previous vote. After the meeting, several Hyde supporters said that to date, approximately 500 original signatures had been collected on Hyde's behalf.

Hyde's reappointment had been recommended by his department head, building supervisor and former school supt. John Maloney. It was alleged he had also received good evaluations over his three year assignment at CHS. Simultaneously to the committee's having fired Hyde, a letter was received by the committee from 26 parents who expressed the thought that Hyde was not fulfilling the musical needs of all CHS students.

The reasons the anti-Hydes gave for supporting the committee's firing of Hyde, seemed flimsy to many. One parent expressed displeasure at the quality of music produced at a Christmas concert. She felt it was not up to snuff. Others said their children had been driven out of band by Hyde. The school committee never publically gave any reason for not reappointing Hyde. And under law the 200 lb. owl missing

There are different types of crimes.

There are impulsive crimes — that's when a kid casually swipes a $5 gas cap from a car or pushes over a rubbish can on the street. Those are moments-of-madness crimes.

But stealing a 200-lb. stone owl requires not a little premeditation. You'd need several strong bodies to lift a 200-lb. owl and a truck, possibly, to spirit it off. If the theft of the stone owl was a prank, it certainly was a heavy one.

Ros Farbush, artist, owns the owl. She lives across the street from a Cohasset policeman, but he was on-duty at the time of the recent theft so she can't blame him for not catching the thief (somehow that rationale doesn't make sense).

The owl was a Christmas gift from Ros' daughter. It was so heavy it took Ros three months to plan how to get it to her yard.

She's offering a small reward for the owl's return or for information leading to its return. Call her at 383-9567.

Sign vandals

As quickly as the town puts up No Parking signs, vandals remove them... which is making it difficult for the police department to give out parking tickets on Sandy Beach and other areas of the town.

Police Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge met with selectmen regarding the problem last week. One possible solution might be the use of steel signs, which would be cemented into the ground.

Ice cream truck

Class of '80 grads Lance Norris and Bob Gunville met with selectmen about their ice cream truck business and some of the problems they've been running into at Sandy Beach and The Little League (Barnes) field.

Gunville said Officer Brian Cogill said he'd take their license away if they parked inside (on the parking lot) at Sandy Beach. And...they were thrown off the outfield at Barnes field.

Selectmen said they would feel better, traffic-wise, if the ice cream truck parked in the Sandy Beach parking lot. And they saw no reason why the truck couldn't park on the outfield at the Barnes field. Selectmen did show some concern over the fact that the Little League concession stand had not applied for a common victualler's license.

Fire chief car

Fire Chief Charles Pippenbrink is mulling over bids received for a new sedan for the fire chief. High bidder was Spensley Chevrolet, $6,376.00 including trade-in for a Malibu.

Paul Young submitted a bid $5,995 for a 1980 Dodge...and put in the low bid of $5,495 for a Dodge Aspen. Selectmen and Pippenbrink have taken all three bids under advisement.

Uniform award

Canterbury Clothing of Watertown, low bidder, was awarded the dress uniform contract for fire department dress uniform and accessories with a bid of $106.50 for a complete uniform. High bidder was B. Skoler, Co. of Quincy, who put in a bid of $123.

Hearing

Wednesday, July 9 at 8:30 p.m. selectmen will hold a hearing to void the wine and malt license for the Wine and Cheese Importers owned by Richard Dailey, and to take action on the application of the new owner's application for the same. New owner Carol Rhilinger plans to operate a similar business at the address.

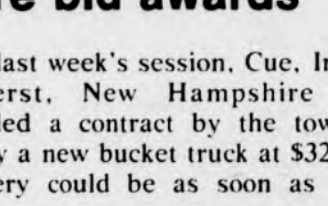
Good idea!

It sounds like an answer to many of the town's problems, and selectmen plan to hear the results of a two-week quick-study by various town departments on a proposal by Lot Bates, chairman of the fire station study committee, to purchaseCohasset Motors.

Howard Schramm, owner of Cohasset Motors, is offering the building (7.1 acres) to the town for $650,000 — less fees. Schramm would keep 2.1 acres for the operation of a used car lot. And 25 acres of town land abutts the property.

The former auto dealershlip would be used for a fire department substation — which would mean the town could close down the two inefficient fire substations in Beechwood and West end — a school bus storage facility, and garage space for the highway, tree and park, and wire departments.

If selectmen vote go next Wednesday, a special town meeting would be called for after Labor Day at which voters would be asked for affirmative action. Rennovations to the building, making it practical for town use, might run in the neighborhood of $60,000.



Dog restrained

Harry Silvia's dog has been ordered restrained on a unaminous vote of the board of selectmen.

Airplane control

Last week a lady called the selectmen's office and wanted to know if each individual town had control over the planes flying over it.

Jurors

Eleanore James (who moved away a year ago), Thomas Lucas and Joseph Mello were drawn as jurors August and September sessions. James and Lucas were drawn for the August session.

More bid awards

At last week's session, Cue, Inc. of Amherst, New Hampshire was awarded a contract by the town to supply a new bucket truck at $32,688. Delivery could be as soon as early 1981.

Ed McLaughlin, low bidder, was awarded a contract to pressure wash and paint town hall for $7,840.

School Committee briefs

TOMA TO TALK

Dick Conley, spokesman for the Cohasset Citizens forDrug Education, received permission from the school committee Monday to invite David Toma, a former police officer and ex-drug addict, to speak to CHS students during the 1980-1981 school year.

The drug education committee will underwrite the $5,000 cost of the three talks, which will be given to students.

Persons wishing to contribute to the parents and a scaled-down talk to fifth and sixth graders. In addition, Conley said, the community has been offered, free of charge, in-school follow-up counseling after Toma's talk by a South Shore Counseling Association.

Nancy Clapp, chairman of the health advisory committee, said her group supported Toma talks.

talk should write a check to the Cohasset Citizens for Drug Education c/o Cohasset Savings Bank.

CUSTODIAN'S CONTRACT

After a lengthly executive session Monday, the committee voted to sign a three-year contract with school custodians, with custodians to receive a 7 per cent increase for each of those three years.

APPOINTMENTS

Jane Corry was appointed kindergarten teacher at $12,849; Elizabeth Cisneros was appointed fifth grade teacher at $14,238; Nancy Gilmore was appointed fifth grade teacher at $12,849; Ruth Nefrow was appointed fourth grade teacher at a step to be determilned when her educational experience has been determined.

Susan Wilkes was appointed science teacher at CHS at $14,585.

Celebrity auction items pouring in Celebrity auction items are still arriving daily... and Drexel Gibson, chairman of the historical commission auction to be held August 30 at the South Shore Music Circus Tent on Sohier Street has agreed to give the Mariner a weekly accounting of new arrivals.

The following 26 items bring auction items to a total of 106. Proceeds frolm the auction will go towards the renovation of the Caleb Lothrop House on Summer Street. If you have a famous item, or know a famous person who might donate an item to the celebrity auction...call Gibson at 383-9745 pronto. The auction is only 10 weeks away!

From Julia Child, The French Chef, two bookplates "bon eppetit" personally autographed. James Fixx, author of Running, sent Badge 2568 worn by Fixx in the 1979 New York City Marathon. Fixx said: "It was a beastly hot day so at the end both it and I were the worse for wear."

Art Buckwald sent the first draft of his column entitled To Cuss A Diplomat, which ran April 13, 1980 when a State Department official said: "B...S...." Gavin McLeod and six regular crew (cast) autographed a script from TV's The Love Boat. If it's the one on which Charlie's Angels appeared we bet there will be some police officers bidding.

Another script from Hart to Hart, personally autographed by Robert Wagner and Stefanie Powers ¶ who was recently featured on the cover of TV Guide. Bill Cosby sent an autographed picture and a colorful embroidered clothing patch of a Cosby caricature.

From Williams...

A demonstration record The Way We Were, personally autographed by Andy Williams. Jack Lemmon sent a key ring, black embossed on silver metal, engraved Jack Lemmon on the back. Joan Baez sent a personally autographed photo. Bidding will probably go high on The New York Rangers' yearbook, 1979-80 — also included, individual pictures of Coach Fred Shero and 18 hockey players.

The Toronto Maple Leafs sent two yearbooks and photo postcards. From the Pittsburgh Pirates a baseball bat autographed by Williw Stargell. The New York Giants sent a wooden wall plaque with color photo of team and staff and signatures of over 50 players. The signatures are reproduced on metal.

From the New England Patriots — four tickets to a game to be played Sept. 7.

Tea Men jerseys

Soccer jerseys worn by Cantillo, Carr and Turner of the New England Tea Men. Ed Asner signed a shooting script of Lou Grant. Michael Landon signed a shooting script of the Little House on The Prairie episode "I'll be Waving As You Drive Away."

Dr. Radu Florescu, Cohasset's own, autographed his The Essential Dracula book. The Cincinnati Reds sent a shirt: Driessen #2. Foster Brooks — a picture teen-shirt entitled The Lovable Lush. And the Miami Dolphins sent an autographed football.

MGM speculating Hull waterfront property

MGM Grand Hotels-Greylock wants to invest $40 million in a gaming casino in Hull on 46 buildable acres of the Hall Estate (near West Corner). All that's stopping the group at this point is legislation — which is being actively worked on by lobbyists and union groups at the state level.

Since mortgage rates dropped recently, Hull relators say there has been a definite surge in house-buying in Hull. Ginger Silbert of Silbert Realty in Hull, said this week she has had some calls from investor-type groups in Boston. "But whether that's a result of the gaming influence, I don't know. I'd say yes, there's a small trend, a trickle of investment groups looking for multiple housing. But at this point it's just that — a trickle."

MGM-Greylock is also speculating about other Hull properties, according to Hull Planning Board Chairman Robert Burns, whose board has spearheaded the gaming movement in town from the onset. "I know MGM is interested in the Warwick Mansion (West Corner) and the aquarium hill property and several other sites. But you've got to remember, there's not a lot of land available in Hull."

At last week's public hearing on the subject, only one Cohasset investor-type was present...with the rest of the 40-50 present being from Hull. At the hearing MGM associates made it known they're going for the only waterfront property available in proximity to Boston.

Greylock architect David Jacobson, presented a plan by which twin towers would be constructed, which could accommodate 700 guests — or approximately 1,200 persons a day. The resort hotel would be reached by public transportation: bus, mass transit — with a bus terminal at the casino site, boat service, perhaps a heli-port.

Sherman Kendricks of MGM said gambling legislation is in committee, with a final form to be considered by both branches of government. Kendricks and others are predicting favorable action. Should gaming legislation be passed, the local community would then have to approve it. It is doubtful that any approvals outside Hull would be required.

Regarding impact on the town, MGM noted Hull is already a recreation-orientated community. "This is the same type of industry," an MGM spokesman said. He added: "This industry is best for local unemployment — it's better than manufacturing. Negative factors are within the management of the town as well as MGM." Any casino would have its own security force, which would probably be twice the size of the Hull police force.

Depending on the type of legislation which might be approved, gamblers would have qualifications to meet. Interestingly, an MGM spokesman said, "Waterfront property would be nice," and among Hull residents, there is speculation that Paragon Park might at some point in time be that waterfront property.

From the time gaming legislation might pass, it would take a period of 18-24 months to construct the proposed twin-tower casino.

MGM and planners said they foresaw little and no impact on surrounding towns. On hot summer days 100,000 people and more have been known to visit Hull. Casino guests would not be day-trippers, it was stated.

And undoubtedly, casino guests would dine and shop in surrounding communities.

Public Documents

Once a board's or a committee's or a department head's mail is received it becomes a public document...unless the correspondence falls within an exemption to the public records definition. Under Massachusetts law it is not relevant whether a board or a committee has either seen or acted upon its correspondence. It's still a public document.

Under that same law, all boards, committees and department heads are required to designate a custodian of its public records.Correspondence becomes a public record under the law when it is received by the custodian so designated (a secretary, a clerk, a member of the board).

Under the freedom of information regulations, the custodian must provide access to public records. If a denial is made, the reasons for such must be set forth in writing and include the specific exemption or exemptions on which the denial is based.

Correspondence, whether sent to a board or a committee which is subject to the open meeting law or to a departmental administrator who is not, should be treated in a uniform manner. Under Massachusetts law, when a letter is received by any officer or employee of any agency, executive office, department, board comission, bureau, division or authority of the state, or of any political subdivision thereof...it becomes a public record. And access must be provided upon request.

We bring this information to light after having experienced several incidences with citizen's committees and town boards and committees in recent months. Town government officials are elected and appointed to serve the public...not to keep from the public what it has the timely right to know.

The Mariner will expect to be permitted to peruse correspondence received by various boards and committees throughout the summer months and always. Boards and committees who need more information on the matter should notify town counsel's office or John McGlynn, supervisor of public records, McCormack State Building, One Ashburton Place, Boston 02108. Phone: 617-727-2832.

We sincerely believe the difficulty we have experienced in the past is because officials are not knowledgeable of the public documents law and the freedom of information regulations. In the future, we expect that all town government officials and custodians of public records will be informed of both the public's and the press's rights in the matter.

This does not mean that we intend to daily go rummaging through the public records of the town. We much prefer to get our information and our news from town officials by phone or in person. But unless correspondence falls under an exemption to the public records law, we will expect to be able to see that correspondence.

Earning the right outside Civil Service

By Eric Pearson

It's time to ask ourselves why the majority of the population (most of the beneficiaries excepted) wishes to leave the Civil Service and teacher tenure systems.

Slowly, we are coming to realize these systems are basically self-serving.

Federal and State laws now protect employees from unfair actions on the part of management (i.e. discrimination in hiring, etc.).

Civil Service, in particular, has established a track record of foot-dragging political patronage. Its indecision has cost taxpayers untold hundreds and thousands of dollars, and has served to prevent towns from governing themselves.

In addition, Civil Service breeds a protectionist attitude that makes it difficult and sometimes impossible for department heads to discharge employees who are lazy, indifferent or troublesome. It also makes it so complicated and involved that many department heads won't take the time to wade through the mountains of paperwork and hearings that are required to fire an individual.

The same types of employees local government retains for the above reasons are "discharged for cause" in private industry. Under unemployment regulations, employees discharged for cause are prevented from collecting unemployment benefits.

Is there an alternative to Civil Service ? I believe so. Any employee of the public or private section is entitled to protection against politically-motivated actions on the part of employers.

Protection could be in the form of a solid and realistic "job description" which would be written for every position in local government. This job description would become the employment contract, and would clearly and specifically spell out the requirements of the position and the responsibilities of the employee.

If the employee fails to live up to this employment contract he could be discharged for cause, and would not be eligible for unemployment benefits.

Conversely, the municipal unit could not fire that employee unless he or she violated the employment contract. The benefits of this system are obvious.

Each promotion to a higher level would require its own job discription as well as the complete fulfillment of the previous contract description.

Applicants would have to qualify for a specific job description, written around the specific needs of the employment unit and not the loose and sometimes vague Civil Service examination.

The employment unit would also be able to evaluate the emotional stability of the applicant, which is almost impossible to establish under Civil Service. Each decision to hire would have to stand on the merits of the applicant and not some political motivation. And each decision to fire would have to be justified by contract.

In times of economic recession, when reduction of personnel becomes necessary, the employing unit could make an expedient decision to layoff excess individuals. That decision could be based on quality of performance as well as seniority.

Longevity in service without quality of service would not be rewarded under this system.

Employees who demonstrated the ability, work ethic and initiative would succeed while others — who demand the promotions based on "how long they held the job" would disappear.

Individuals who earned positions of leadership would then be considered for promotions. The town would promote its leaders from within town departments, and not feel it had to go outside to find new department heads.

Actions speak louder than words. Employers and employees must consider that their conduct outside of a job has a direct effect on the employing unit as well as on the morale of fellow employees.

Actions at town meetings which consider only a selfish viewpoint and not the town as a whole, are eventually doomed to failure. Rights, promotions, raises and respect have to be earned. They are not a God-given right to be demanded.

When the riots at Selma, Alabama and Watts, California were going on the media nailed the black U.N. Ambassador on the front steps of the U.N. building in New York City.

The question was: "What effect are these riots having on you?"

I felt the questions were insulting. His answer, however, was that of a true American.

"When I was very young, my parents taught me that when a person has earned the right to be somewhere and has earned the right to have something, he will be there and he will have it."

With that he left for home.

Cable TV on its way to suburbs

By Bob Gohl
CHS-Audio Visual Dept.

The decade of the 70's saw rapid and dramatic technological achievements in the home communications industry.

One area, cable TV, grew tremendously, and will climb to even greater heights in the 80's.

Originally, cable TV was designed for areas of our country located a great distance from a TV transmitting tower. Many mountain areas which never received a TV signal before were able to receive a crystal clear, distortion-free signal.

As the 70's came and went, the communications industry found ways to mini turize almost all of its components and in the cable area, designed cable that could carry up to a dozen channels at once.

Today, in the 80's, there are cables that can carry three dozen channels with TV signals from all over the country.

Cable TV is no longer just for rural areas. Cable TV is for everyone, everywhere. Companies are now being formed in many communities. They will offer local communities over 20 different stations, featuring programs from other cities and areas of the School systems will be tied into this station, allowing students to create and produce their own programs which can be shown to the entire country, 24-hour weather reports, instant ticker tape readings from Wall Street, consumer reports and

Several businesses make a full-time job for Doris

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Doris Golden is an enviable woman. Her talents don't torture her, they sustain her. She sticks out like a green thumb in a mass of clenched fists.

She might be a golden-curled gypsy, zipping into the Log & Line with her paper bag full of the latest fashions she picked up for a song to sell to her friends. On a moment's notice she can orchestrate a yard sale, a Christmas cookies exchange...and her friends attend not for the yard sale goodies or cookies...but because they like to be around Doris.

Although she is good-tempered, and although her voice is always well-modulated — she is hardly anybody's fool. She has been known to use that voice, that articulation, against both those who are self-exploiting and those who exploit — as a member of the school committee and it s chairman for five out of six years, as an unsuccessful candidate for selectman, and as an always-interested citizen.

She also operates a little hobby shop business called Colonial Art Guild. It's a bronze sign shop, and 95 per cent of her business is mail order. "I started out dealing directly with surgical supply houses...I didn't want it to grow into anything more than a hobby so I don't advertise much."

She has approximately 105 accounts, and that's nothing to sniff about. A foundry processes the patterns she creates, but after the processing it's back to the hobby shop for sanding, painting, baking (in an old pizza oven), boxing and labelling and mailing.

Exhausted? Doris isn't. In fact, recently she thought she'd start a new business. And that's the real reason for this profile testimonial-type article at this time.

Recently, a man named Reid from the North Shore who made those quaint one, four and six-titled "Cohasset tables" passed away. The tables have always been a popular item in Cohasset gift shops...but now there's no one to make them. Or so we thought until Doris pulled out the sketches for "her" tiles at the Log recently.

At present time the tiles are being processed, she's contracted with a blacksmith to do the wrought-iron work...and sometime this fall her tables will appear.

Her Tiles will depict Minot Light, the Common, the Bicentenial flag, the Lothrop House, the sailing club and Bassing Beach (all in one), and Cohasset Harbor and the bridges. She'll also do tile trays and mirrors. The business details have yet to be worked out, but she'll probably sell them directly and to South Shore gift shops.

Should the new business not keep her busy enough, she can always sit in on the Wednesday Bible study group which has been meeting at her home for the past year or so. "They were looking for a home to hold the class in and I opened my home to them. The people come from all over, they're all different denominations — it's probably one of the most rewarding things I have ever done."

Or she can pick up her knitting, antique a piece of furniture, do a little calligraphy (although she's not professional at it, she recently did wedding invitations for a friend).

Ten years ago her husband bought the sign shop business for her because he didn't want her to go back to work. But we think she did.

community.

C.A. TV (Community Access TV) is something that will effect all of us over the next 10 years. It does need to be legislated locally, to serve the needs of a particular community. Many North Shore communities have already installed cable TV and in the next year our Randolph neighbors, Quincy and Weymouth residents, and Cape Cod will have stations in operation.

☐Mariner Colunmist Peter Barnicle is home from a three-week stay in the hospital and is still more or less home-bound, to his chagrin. He's doing quite nicely now and would appreciate visitors. He rises at 5 a.m.

☐Joe Marks, owner of Marks Service Station, recently turned 40. His friends put a big Happy Birthday sign outside his garage two weeks ago, but he tore it down before we could make a big deal about it.

☐Californians Joe Corrado and his children, Robert, 11, and Carolyn 9, spent last week with Jane and Chet Ellis and family. Joe said he does what Chet does, only he's in computers. Sue Corrado, Joe's wife, is a famous California designer of silks and cotton knits.

☐Saturday night, the Ellis's held a surprise birthday party for Kathy St. Onge. Kathy's big gift was a mid-section dual-action motivator which will, presumably, help her to retain her already trim figure.

☐Winners of Anne Whelan's tennis round-robin last week were Jimmy Whelan and Pierce Cray.

☐Each year the George H. Mealy American Legion Post #118 sends two students to government camp held at the Nichols College campus in Dudley. Two weeks ago Patrick Duffy attended the session. Jane Higgins will spend a week at girl's camp sometime this summer. Both students are members of the Class of '81.

☐This spring Joanne Shannon of Cohasset receivedd a BA from Colby College in Waterville, Maine. She graduated with distinction in administrative science and also served as treasurer of her class. Joanne is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Shannon of Rustic Drive and a graduate of Cohasset High School.

☐Diane Maloney, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. John Maloney of Woodland Drive, made the dean's list for the third consecutive term at Northeastern University where she is majoring in physical therapy. Diane will enter her sophomore year this fall.

☐Here's a real first! Boston University recently won the North American Inter-Collegiate Sailing Team Race CHampionship for the first time in the college's history.

Brad White, a Cohasset resident, has been captain of the team for the past two years. He received an All-American Honorable Mention. Nick Bukrke, a Marblehead resident, was nominated for the All-American team. We mentioned him here because his grandparents live on Pond Street.

BU won the N.E. Championships in early May, and then went on to lose (by one point) to Tufts in the No. American Inter-Collegiate Championships, but won the NAIC team race against an undefeated Navy. Good show, kids!

☐Nils Gjesteby is starving on Hurrican Island, Maine...where he is participating in an Outward Bound program...a graduation present from his parents. The program's great, Nils wrote his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arne Gjesteby. But the food leaves something to be desired.

Accordingly, Nils' good friend Ron White, writes to Nils of the hamburgers he's eating at McDonalds...buttered lobsters he's downing by the dozens. Good friend, that Ron.

☐The Cohasset Community Center's Membership Drive ended this week. We'll report on the outcome next week. It's still the best buy in town: family membership $10, individual $5, contributing $20 and sustaining $35.

Mrs. Corry at Joseph Osgood will tutor mornings, and "hopefully do some gardening and prepare for teaching kindergarten in September."

Kate Neale, moderate special needs teacher at Joseph Osgood School...will be moving to Portland, Oregon. "The journey will include stops at Niagara Falls, Mount Rushmore, Yellowstone National Park and The Grand Tetons. If the ash proves too disruptive in Portland, I'll just pack my bags and head for San Francisco. Thanks, Cohasset, for a great three years. I'll miss you!"

When Deer Hill's Miss Moravec returns in the Fall, she will be Mrs. Sullivan. She's getting married this Saturday!

Ninth Grade humanities and English teacher Fran Cronin plans a trip to a beach cottage in North Carolina. She will camp, spend some time with her daughter, work on vaious house projects and paint, garden, etc.

☐If Around Town has seemed a little skimpy during these past two weeks, that's because the expert Around Town write, Car-in (sic) Bartow, has been on vacation. But she's back now, and we'll let her tell you about her travels herself in next week's mariner.

☐Navy Airman Dana MK. Ainslie, son of Cora M. and Sherwood C. Ainslie Jr. of 41 Church St., has departed on a deployment to the Mediterranean.

He is a crewmember aboard the amphibious assault ship USS Guadalcanal homeported in Norfolk, Va. While deployed, his ship is operating as a unit of the U.S. 6th Fleet.

A 1975 graduate of Cohasset High School, Ainslie joined the Navy in January 1979.

Paul Pratt summer programs

A new display of children's art is on view in the Children's Room of the Paul Pratt Memorial Library. The Tall Ships were the inspiration for Jane O'Malley's fourth grade class at the Deer Hill School which used various watercolor techniques.

Third grade students of Elizabeth Wyman at the Joseph Osgood School have contributed a display of nature prints.

The exhibit was arranged by Carolyn Horn, children's art exhibit chairman for the Friends of the Library. The exhibit will remain through August.

PRE-SCHOOL STORY HOURS

The Paul Pratt Memorial Library invites children ages 3 1/2 to 5 to a pre-school storyhour series which starts Thursday, July 10 at 10:30 a.m. and continues on Thursdays throughout the summer.

Storytellers who have completed the storytellers' workshop sponsored by the library will lead the programs of stories, fingerplays and songs.

Advance registration is suggested as the group will be limited to 15 children.

Call JoAnn Mitchell or Marilyn Pope, Children's Librarians, at 383-1348 any afternoon for more information or to register.

BOOK ILLUSTRATION CONTEST

Young artists are invited to an "illustrate a book competition" for children being sponsored by the Boston Globe and the Boston Public Library.

Children may choose their favorite medium to execute a scene from one of the following classics: Hansel & Gretel, Pinocchio, Robin Hood, Noah's Ark, Steadfast Tin Soldier, Pippi Longstocking, Treasure Island, Incredible Journey, 20,000 Leagues Under the Sea, Heidi.

Deadline for the competition is October 31, 1980. Prizes include exhibition at a library or a book fair. Winners will be announced during Children's Book Week, November, 1980. Entry forms are available in the Children's Room at the Paul Pratt Memorial Library.

CHANCES ARE 1 IN 10 YOU'VE GOT IT

This year alone, high blood pressure will help kill about 250,000 Americans. That's 5 times the number of people who are killed in car accidents or 1 out of 8 of everybody who will die from anything.

23 million Americans have it. That's 1 in 10 people. If you're over 50 or black, the odds are even greater you have it.

Get your blood pressure taken. Don't take the chance. You have to know hundreds of numbers to live. But if you don't know your blood pressure, and know what it means, your life could be in danger.

He didn't know there was an opening...never applied

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Mid-winter 1942 brought a change in our little village which was to make its influence known for 27 years. The school committee, six members then, also, did not conduct an indepth preparation for that impending occurence. Nor was a citizen's screening committee alerted.

In February, 1942 superintendent James W. Doyle told the school committee he had been called up to serve in World War II. The next day the chairman of the school committee told William Ripley that he was acting superintendent/principal of Cohasset Schools.

"I didn't even know there was an opening...and I never applied," Ripley said.

When Doyle returned from the war in 1945 he resigned from his position on the spot and Ripley's acting appointment became permanent. "He (Doyle) told me before he left he didn't intend to come back."

Exit Doyle. It's 1945 — after the war. And Cohasset's population is growing. Babies are being wheeled through the streets of the town, homes are being built. Finally in 1950 Cohasset voters respond to the cramped classroom quarters at the Osgood School (then on the site of the present fire station.)

Facilities were tight. "There was no gym, no auditorium...there were no labs." In 1951 CHS is built. Some of the older citizens of the town don't wish to lose the name of Joseph Osgood. "He had been instrumental in centralizing schools in the town.

"So when the town built CHS, the Ripley Road School was renamed Joseph Osgood School.

"There was also a movement among townspeople to call the new high school Osgood School. "But the trend at that time, among other communities building war-baby high schools, was to name it after the town, and to not dedicate it to any man, Ripley said.

In 1926 Ripley, a Hingham resident, graduated from Brown. "I was one of the first Hingham Ripley's in 200 years to get out of Hingham," he said of his appointment to teach in Cohasset.

Ripley's grandmother, Mary Jane Pratt, was from Cohasset. She married a Hingham Burr. "I can't find any connection to Noel and Sheldon Ripley and I can't understand why. William Ripley left Hingham, England in 1638 and came to Hingham, Massachusetts." According to Ripley, that ancestor is a common one, to both Cohasset and Hingham Ripleys. "But Noel and Sheldon can't trace it back that far."

In the Fall of 1926 Ovis K. (O.K.) Collins appointed Ripley to teach general science, biology, civics, commercial geography ("I didn't know what it was then and I don't know what it is now.") and business arithmetic. He had majored in chemistry and biology at Brown.

During the depression years there were 30-35 students in a classroom. And Ripley once had a general science class of 45. "You just did the best you could. The drop-out rate when I first taught was very high. One year I had 40 students in a homeroom in 9th Grade. Only 12 of those 40 graduated from high school. Most went off to farming, business, trades."

Former students

He said there was very little vandalism in those days. We had strict discipline. And there are hundreds of examples of adults around town who weren't inhibited by that discipline."

Burt Pratt was a good student. "But he didn't care much for my subjects."

"Henry Ainslie was very serious, a very hard-working student.

"Mary Jeanette Murray still claims I used to scare her...I'd bang my yardstick on the desk when she was talking.

"Ozzie Ingram was a serious-minded youngster who tended to business. But I remember finding him in lab one time after he took a sniff of an ammonia bottle; he was groping for the window. He eventually went to Harvard, worked for the Old Boston Post...and became an excellent school committee chairman.

"Chief Feola (police chief) and Chief Pipenbrink (fire chief) were both quiet, diligent students who did all of their work. Gerard Keating was also a good pupil."

Ripley married his wife, Alice in 1930. And after the war, in 1945, they made their home in Cohasset, where they raised two sons, Robert of Cohasset and William of Colorado.

Unitl 1955 "I was still both superintendent and principal of Cohasset Schools." Then that same year Anthony D'Antuoni was named principal of CHS, and Ripley was finally just superintendent — in a Summer signups at Recreation Dept.

The Cohasset Recreation Department will accept registration for adult, outdoor Tennis Lessons, to be held at varying times on Monday evenings, beginning Monday, July 14th.

Classes will be offered for beginners/advanced players. Beginner classes will be from 6:30-7:30 p.m., Intermediate from 7:30-8:30 p.m., and advanced from 8:30-9:30 p.m., at the Miliken Field Tennis Courts.

Lessons will be six weeks in duration and cost $10 per person. Classes will be filled on a first call, first-enrolled basis. Non-residents on a space available basis.

Teaching, will be professional Tennis instructor, Ms. Diana Breed, a graduate of Smith College, and Head Pro at Massachusetts Tennis Clubs.

To register please call the Recreation Department office 383-6791.

YOUTH GOLF

Registration will be accepted, via phone, for Youth Golf Lessons for ages 8-14 years. Class will be for beginners and held Monday evenings, from 6:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m. Registration fee is $8 for the six one your lessons.

Adult Classes are also reforming and registrations will be accepted for beginners and intermediates to be held Monday evenings at 7:30 and 8:30 p.m. respectively. The fee for this program is $10 per person.

If interested call the Recreation office at 383-6791. Mr. Rick Thibeault assistant pro at the Cohasset Golf Club, will be instructing.

COUPON SWAP BOX

The Cohasset Recreation Department has placed a coupon swap box in the lobby of the Town Hall. Individuals may drop off, take, or ideally, swap coupons of varying types. For instance, you may have a need for a specific coupon, if so drop off coupons that you are not going to use, and take those that you desire from the box. Anyone who has extra coupons that they do not plan to use, may leave them in the swap box for others who may use them.

Recipe for a happy Fourth!

By Larry Fone

Many activities are taking place over the fourth... the most impressive is the art exhibit on the Common, which celebrates the 25th anniversary of the South Shore Arts Festival competition.

To compliment this important milestone, many Cohasset merchants are providing fun activities in the village and harbor area. A sidewalk bazaar at many shops will feature special merchandise, some at special prices.

Traditionally, the weekend of the fourth has been family get togethers. Let's keep it that way. Encourage the kids to bring friends, invite your new neighbors and include the older folks in your family.

Walk the harbor and enjoy the offerings...take rubbings at the cemeteries. For purists...some of the restaurants will be offering salmon and peas, I hope.

Village shoptalk

Cards & Shards will exhibit artwork "papier tole" by Dorothy Schiff...also some fine photographs of the tall ships by "Clay."

The young folks at Cards & Shards will provide dogs and burgers with gourmet condiments.

The Cohasset Historical Society will have the doors open at the village historical buildings. I bet many of you Cohasset folk have never inspected the interesting items on display...do it and bring the kids...wonderful historic items and town history.

The Cohasset carillon will be heard at 4 p.m. daily, celebrating the Fourth of July, thanks to the Episcopal Church.

For you folks who want to enjoy a "down home" fourth stay in town, take the kids to the beach with a picnic lunch. If you want a special lunch for lobster lovers, go to the Strawberry Parfait. Its lobster rolls are just superb and you can enjoy a picnic in a comfortable Alfresco atmosphere. Good ice cream, too.

Beach run in Duxbury

The 6th running of New England's first and only beach run will be held on Saturday, July 26, 1980. The race will once again feature a 10,000 meter race and the popular 3000 meter (1.7 Miles) for beginners, joggers and children.

Both races will start at the same time (5 p.m.) and will begin on Duxbury Beach in front of the Gurnet Inn.

Entry blanks may be picked up at the Runnery in Hanover or by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to: The Gurnet Classic Beach Run, c/o The Gurnet Inn, Gurnet Road, Duxbury, Mass. 02332. Entries are limited to the first 600 paid entrants.

League All-Stars to play in Cohasset

Wednesday, July 16 at 5:45 p.m. the 12-yr. old Cohasset Little League All-Stars will play the Plymouth All-Stars at home.

Winners of this game will go on the greater glory.

In the meantime, Dick Ainslie and his crew are extra busy preparing the grounds at the Barnes Field.

fourth, ask them for their help. Find out what is best for Cohasset."

John A. DeBassio knew some of these lessons too, and a few others. He pointed out the specific problems the police would have if Proposition 2% went into affect. If this meant very serious cutbacks, the problem would be where do you start cutting.

Intermediate cars would be the first step, he said, and streamlining paperwork to save manpower would be the second. Economy is the barometer, and when the weather is bad, crime goes up. As DeBassio explained it, it would be best to lay off a police officer when the economic weather is good.

"What about youth problems?"all of the candidates were asked, and by that we mean drinking behind the sandpile. DeBassio said he would make periodic sweeps of the area, or if patrols were not so frequently available, hit the most likely spot at the most likely time.

He pointed out that in Brockton you don't have the same opportunity to communicate with the people as you do in Cohasset, and this would change the approach to police work in all areas.

Stankiewicz said on the first offense the youth should be brought into the criminal justice system; that would prevent a second offense. The first offense would be referred to a juvenile bureau.

He wasn't too clear on what exactly that is, but it sounded like something a lot less then reform school (from the bad old days) and something a little more than a phone call to the parents.

Edward Haraden doesn't have a problem with that, he claimed. In fact, to many questions in the interview, he said he didn't have that problem in Wenham where he is currently Police Chief.

He did have that problem once, a few months ago, when three youth were caught drinking on the beach. As he said, he "put a stop to it right there."

Perhaps youth in Wenham are not so thirsty, which may be the case, as 1,500 of them are students at a Christian college. Or perhaps there are no sandpiles. It's a dry town, so that could complicate possession of the foul substance, but Cohasset too is dry to "vouth."

In the unspoken vernacular of Old New England Men, Haraden seemed to make the Selectmen feel the most comfortable, and of course, Old New England Men are not to be underestimated.

Since Haraden took over as Wenham's Police Chief 21 years ago, no one in his department has ever used a firearm. He works in uniform and demands that his men groom their hair shor t, with mustaches no longer than the end of the lip.

Selectman Rocco Laugelle didn't flinch when he heard that, but his side-whiskers seemed to curl upward of their own will.

Haraden watches his department like a mother hen, he said, and has built it from scratch. "But the better they get," he said, "the less they need me." So he wants a challenge, and he wants to live in Cohasset. His family is not so sure. They trace back on the North Shore to the 16th Century and he hasn't yet convinced them to pull up roots.

All three of these men want to live in Cohasset. All three appear to be good, capable men, different in their method, but none of them know the town.

If it had to be tomorrow, one of them — Stankiewicz — would at least know where to go for breakfast. He's been there before on a visit with his wife, and quickly perceived it to be the cerebral cortex of Cohasset.

Then he went to the library and read through the town report. He read the newspapers for a few years back, and even took out a subscription to one.

Arthur Clark seemed pretty impressed by that, but Rocco Lauguelle was wrinkling his brow. "The selection committee did a whale of a job," he said, when the long-distance drivers had gone back down the highway.

Selectmen hope to choose their man sometime in July, after a further investigation into their backgrounds.

He never applied

growing system which would eventually require two more additions to CHS, a new middle school, and an addition at Osgood School on Ripley Road.

D'Antuoni's appointment as principal was fought by the school committee. "Three school committee members voted for his appointment, the other three wanted someone out of town. One of the committee asked who I would recommend and I said D'Antuoni and it was as simple as that. A committeeman changed his vote."

How did Ripley control his school committee? "Some were former pupils of mine," he laughed:

Harvard. "It was one of those summers. Saturdays, evenings, afternoons kind of things. I went into Harvard on the train and the subways because of the gasoline rationing during those years."

Bill Poland, Johnny Dean, Mrs. Catherine Stanton, John Crandal, Mrs. Prescott Low and others. "And we had excellent school committees. They never interfe red." Aside from continually trying to sell the town on bond issues for new additions and buildings, Ripley said: "There was never any big crisis."

Sometime during the war he got his MA from

Asked what he felt his biggest contribution to the school system might have been over the 27 years he was superintendent — he said he felt it was in his teacher appointment recommendations. "Four of the teachers I hired are now superintendents. Three are principals. "During the war years it was difficult to get teachers. "I guess I picked some bad teachers during the war years. There weren't that great a number to choose from."

Ripley retired as superintendent in 1969. In the next 10 years there would be five superintendents of Cohasset schools, including Ripley.

Coastal property lucrative

Scituate banker Russ Chandler referred to the South Shore coastal area as the most lucrative opportunity area in Eastern Massachusetts in remarks made before a real estate group.

The chief executive officer of the $33 million Scituate Federal Savings & Loan Association stated that the South Shore communities "offered the very best mix of fine living opportunities as well as being an area that welcomed solid growth business sites."

In making his remarks the assembled members of the Scituate and Cohasset offices of the Jack Conway Company at a breakfast meeting upstairs at the Satuit he called for "continued understanding by local planning board groups to further this growth opportunity.

"In order to capitalize on this growth we need a strong coalition of real estate people working closely in harmony with business and planning groups," stated the veteran bank executive.

He said, "the opportunity for solid,uphill growth is here — what a chance to balance magnificent living in a dozen great towns with sensible economic progress."

Mr. Chandler then talked directly to the real estate industry and stated that the good real estate agent in today's market "must have the patience of Job, must have exceptional intelligence and be really good problem solvers, have first rate follow through techniques and be completely up to date with all the new laws which protect the environment."

Chandler then made a special award presentation to Mary Pecce of the Cohasset office and JoAnn Haag of the Scituate office who were #1 in sales in their respective Conway Company offices during May.

Hyde

committee is not required to do so.

Hyde supporter Jean Berman, who has spoken on behalf of Hyde on various other occasions...tore into the committee Monday, reading a lengthy letter in which she expressed a personal vote of non-confidence in the school committee. Her lengthy statement was received by wild applause by those in attendance. And she also threatened the committee by telling them they could be replaced.

When she asked why the committee had not shown any response to the hundreds of petitioners in support of Hyde, and had instead chosen to recognize the "dissidents," School Committee-woman Diana Kornet said that she made her decisions for the maturity of Cohasset students. "I vote for the majority."

Ms. Berman said she could hardly agree that Ms. Kornet was acting for any "numbers."

June Simeone, Martha Conley and Jean Salvador, via a separate petition, said they supported a complete and open airing of all the reasons why Hyde was not reappointed. "Then we can make judgment for or against Mr. Hyde," they stated.

Obituaries

James O'Brien

James Albert O'Brien, 51, of Cohasset, principal of the L.L. Damon School in Hull, died Saturday at St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton after a lengthy illness.

He was a lifelong resident of Cohasset.

A graduate of Hingham High School, he graduated from Boston College in 1951 and received his master's degree from Bridgewater State College.

He was a member of the National Education Association, The Massachusetts Teachers Association, the National Elementary Principals Association, the Hull Teachers Association and the South Shore Country Club in Hingham.

He was a former lieutenant in the U.S. Army.

He leaves his wife, Maureen Catherine (Manning) O'Brien; his mother, Helena F. (Smart) Corrigan of South Venice, Fla.; three sons, James Albert III, Timothy Joseph, and Thomas Luke; three daughters, Bernadette Maryanne, Angela Catherine and Maureen Alana, all of Cohasset.

He also leaves a brother, Daniel W. O'Brien of Maryland and a sister, Kathleen Parker of California.

A Mass of Christian burial was held Tuesday at St. Anthony's Church in Cohasset. Burial will be in Hull Village Cemetery, Hull.

Violet King

Mrs. Violet May (Fillebrown) King, 79, a retired cashier for the Parker House in Boston, died June 27 at her home following an illness.

She was born in Boston and attended Boston schools. She lived in Dorchester before moving to Cohasset 15 years ago.

She leaves her husband, Theodore King and two sons, Peter Anthony King and Jeremy King, both of Cohasset.

Funeral services were held Monday at the Sparrell Funeral Home. Burial was in Forest Hills Cemetary, Boston.

Bugs make it clear what it is to be bugged

I've never met a bug I liked and I don't expect to. Makes no matter to me if it's a squiggly caterpillar with black and orange stripes, a horrible green tomato worm with an arched head, a fly, a spider or an ant in any color or size.

You can have 'em. It would be tough to know whether or not dislike of bug/insects/creepy crawling things is learned or genetically passed along. I doubt the latter because I remember my grandmother quashed a spider that was advancing toward my bed when I got home from having my out. That's when I was seven. And Gram could always handle bugs. I marveled at that because she was the most old-fashioned, unliberated woman I've met. So gentle and precious and yet she had what it take to deal with bugs.

PATCHES

By Lois Martin

Every year when the ticks threaten the dog's happiness, I cringe. If he had to depend on me to de-tick him, he'd be in trouble. But I know some women who've taken off ticks and disposed of them. There's no accounting for who will and who won't. You can't tell a bug mangler when you see one. I've always looked to men to tolerate bugs, that's something they should do, something Mother Nature allotted for, like changing tires.

And it's funny. As surely as people have bug preferences, bugs have favorites. Mosquitoes for example bite people who tan easily more than those who don't. That's my scientific observation. They view me as second choice. And that's a cut above my opinion of them. Anything that buzzes a B-flat in my ear when I'm almost asleep gets the best blow I can deliver that close to my head.

But black flies, midges, no-see-mes, gnats, whatever they're called, are wild about me. They no sooner spot my attic white upper arms than they head there for what is a potential feast.

Every summer one never knows if a herd of ants is marching through the kitchen cupboards. They're a bit whimsical where they choose to appear but they're a given factor here.

I can take that, given a good killer spray to go with the factor.

But I'll tell you what I can't handle. It's those tent caterpillars that have taken over our property. They fall out of trees on you. They chomp and clomp. I believe I'm a rancher of these, raising these personally to supply the fuzzy creepsters. Some see those coming and make endearing comments. They practically count their little feet. The other morning I discovered one on top of my bedspread, having jumped on it when the spread was on the line. I was forced to awaken a young person because of the "emergency." He was not pleased to get out of bed for the extermination.

And I found one caterpillar last week attemping to swim in the upstairs facility. I felt ambivalent about his being there. On one hand I was unhappy that he got in the house. But I was happy about where he'd got. Funny how much diversion there is in a phobia.

I'm trying to be cool about lady bugs because everyone else is. Some acquaintances all but pet them as they walk up a blouse sleeve. I have finished knitting a lady bug pattern in an afghan and that's how I like them best.

Most people aren't gracious to the little green worm crawlers they find in their lettuce. My father used to say they wouldn't take much. While I don't share his philosphy, I'll share his humor so long as the thing's not on my lettuce.

But there's a certain amount of swatting and squishing that is inherent in the season. I'm ready. There's a rolled up newspaper (Mariner of course) handy in various rooms. (Shot guns don't work well.)

And bugs are a small price to pay for the privilege of summer. Beyond that we know the origin of the expression, "This really bugs me."

Calling all runners

The 6th running of New England's first and only beach run will be held on Saturday, July 26. The race will feature a 10,000 meter race and the popular 3000 meter (1.7) miles) for beginners, joggers and children.

Both races will start at the same time (5 p.m.) and will begin on Duxbury Beach in front of the Gurnet Inn.

Entry blanks may be picked up at the Runnery in Hanover or by sending a stamped self-addressed envelope to: The Gurnet Classic Beach Run, c/o The Gurnet Inn, Gurnet Road, Duxbury, Mass. 02332.

Cohasset sidewalk sale in progress Saturday

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

It probably sounds positively medieval, but, to me, the night before the Fourth once meant sparklers, lady fingers, punk and rockets. Waiting for dark to fall was like Christmas Eve and Halloween rolled into one, for only after an interminable wait was it dark enough to set off our firecrackers. I'm not sure that Independence Day is as safe and sane as it was supposed to be after fireworks were banned, but it certainly is a time when backyards blaze instead with the gleam from the cookout grill. Entres range from the lowly hot dog to the chef's own creation, but everyone will leave the backyard in a happy mood if served Diane Kirland's dessert. Any one of her guests at a recent outdoor luncheon would tell you how delicious they found her

CHOCOLATE DELIGHT

3/4 c. melted butter or margarine
1 1/2 c. flour
3/4 c. finely chopped nuts
1 8 oz. cream cheese
1 c. powdered sugar
1 large cool whip
1 vanilla & 1 chocolate instant puddings
3 c. milk
Garnish with chopped pecans or grated chocolate

Combine butter, flour and nuts. Mix well. Place in 9 x 13 inch pan. Bake at 375 degrees for 15 min. Cool. Combine cream cheese, powdered sugar and 1 1/2 c. whipped topping. Blend. Spread over crust. Chill. Combine the two puddings in bowl with 3 c. milk. Beat for 2 min. at medium speed. Spread over cream cheese layer. Top with whipped topping and garnish. Serves 15 or more. Can be made day before.

Even "Gourmet" magazine advises us it's time to get out the grills and among their suggestions for a barbecue are these

GRILLED RED ONIONS

In a large dish combine 1 T. fresh thyme or 1 tsp. dried and salt and pepper to taste and stir in 1/2 c. olive oil. Add 6 red onions, halved lengthwise and let them marinate, turning them, for at least 2 hours. Arrange onions in a basket grill or a 12 x 8 1/2 inch hinged broiling rack fitted with a slide or driectly on the grill. Grill the onions over a bed of glowing coals about 3 inches from heat. Brush lightly with olive oil. Broil 6 to 8 min. on each side, or until tender and browned. Serves 6.

To some, the coming holiday weekend means a busy round of bon fires, parades, picnics and partying. For others, tide and the weather establish the rhythm of their three-day interlude. Clams are harvested when the mud flats are bared at low tide. Up to one's ankles in oozy mud and then bending down to dig whenever a spray signals another clam hole, results in a bucketful of delectable morsels. If you forgot your license, or can't get out to the flats, make tracks for your fish market. Seven dozen clams are suggested for six people, but there are those I know who would disagree, saying that would never be enough for

7 dozen clams
Cayenne pepper
1 c. water [about]
Melted butter and chopped parsley

Scrub clams under cold running water and rinse until free of sand. Add cayenne pepper to rinsing water. Place clams on a rack in a large pot with about 1 c. water, or enough to cover the bottom with 1/2 inch. Bring to a boil. Cover pot with a tight-fitting lid and steam over low heat just until the clams open, about 5 or 10 min. After cooking, pour out the broth. You can use a cheesecloth for this. Put the broth into one bowl and the melted butter in another. Sprinkle butter with par

Here is a dessert that would top off any meal, no matter how simple. It drew raves at a recent League luncheon and is called

EASY-AS-PIE

1 3 oz. pkg. cherry gelatine, dissolved
1 c. boiling water
1/2 c. cold water
1 c. whole berry cranberry sauce.

Stir. Cool till slightly thick. Stir in 3/4 c. sour cream. Pour into two prepared graham cracker pie shells. Chill until firm. Top each pie with 1/2 c. sour cream mixed with 2 T confectioners sugar.

Angler's Corner

FISHERMEN'S LUCK

Some say there is no such thing, good fishermen create their own good luck and not so good fishermen suffer from self inflicted bad luck.

It is also said that 10% of the fishermen catch 90% of the fish. That may have been true at one time but with today's exceptional equipment and true to life lures it should read more like 25% and 75%.

Good luck follows those who know how to get the most out of their equipment and have an understanding about the fish they are after. Bad luck follows those who never replace line, oil their reels or know the names of the fish they are trying to catch.

Preparation is the key to putting you among the 25% catching most of the fish. Washing down salt water rods after use should be #1 on your list. Washing all lures, sinkers, jigs, and even hooks will make your next trip much easier.

Proper boat care and clean up after each trip enusres a speedy get away next time out.

Luck does step in and take over as happened this past weekend.

BAD LUCK

Bob Law of Marshfield along with Jim Maurer, Dan Hay, and Jack McLaughlin experienced some bad luck. Bob, a good fisherman with a well kept 23' boat loaded with nicely kept tackle and a good knowledge of blue fish went to Provincetown on Saturday. They started off Wood End trolling. Bob uses wire line, fishes for suspended blues 40 feet down in 110 feet of water. Using two oz. orange hoochies rigged with pork rind they went fishless. Thinking things might be better elsewhere all reeled in and moved down into Wellfleet. Again they went fishless. They then returned to Wood End and managed to pick up four blues.

Only four blues off P. Town is considered by most to be a bad day. Bob says it's bad luck and I agree.

WORST LUCK

Roger Hare, one of the best blue fishermen I know had a whole season of bad luck in just one day. Roger's boat and gear are always ready to go. He picked Sunday to travel across to P. Town. About eight miles out the water pump on his engine on his engine went, leaving him and friend . Bob Milardo stranded in Mass. Bay for three hours. The Coast Guard eventually had to town the Happy Rabbit back to Green Harbor.

GOOD LUCK

A good friend, John Murphy, from Kingston, went trout fishing for the first time, using a fly rod he knew nothing about. John managed to catch and land a seven pound brown trout, a stroke of good luck (Murphy's Law in reverse).

GOOD AND BAD LUCK

On Saturday Tim Farrell had three and a half pounds more luck than I did. His large mouth bass was the only one we caught all morning.

NO LUCK

Luck — both good and bad — follows all of us around but some times nature intervenes and the fish just won't bite for any one.

Tent City tradition turning to tenement city

One of the larger bonfires on Bassing Beach was watched carefully, from afar, by both Cohasset and Scituate Fire Departments. (Derr photo)

Problems at Bassing Beach

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Tent City is a tradition on Bassing Beach during the July 4th weekend this year and years and years past who knows how many? In Burt Pratt's Narrative History of Cohasset (Page 1) it is said that a storm in 1898 destroyed more than 20 buildings on Bassing Beach.

It is not explained whether the buildings were recreational cottages or fisherman shanties. In any case, there are only two cottages, now. A third cottage up closer to the Scituate line was felled by a storm last year. Its rubble was made ready for burning and it was supposed to have been torched over the Winter of 1979-80. Harbor officials were waiting for a protective covering of snow to protect the surrounding grasses from possible sparks.

The snow never fell...and beings unknown set it on fire July 4...if the wind hadn't been soft and easy, the whole island might have been set on fire. Speculation. Both Scituate and Cohasset Fire Departments kept a close watch on the spectacular blaze...which could easily be seen from Government Island.

There were rumors of a knifing in the harbor last week. A man claimed he put his hand through a boat windshield, but our source said he doubts it. He thinks the man was knifed. Teenagers were making merry on the island...stealing a cooler of beer from one tenter, a dozen eggs from another. And leaving their trash everywhere.

Faulty equipment blamed for diver's death

By Bernie Quigley

At 8:21 p.m. a message was lost in the static gobble on CB channel 11 and the controller in the Quincy Police Underwater Recovery van leaned out toward the ocean. He shouted into the microphone: "Do you have a message? How about it Sweathog?"

Then clear as a bell it came again from the rescue boat a hundred yards offshore at Rocky Beach: "We have a recovery."

John Blackdar and his team of divers had only been out there half an hour when they recovered the body. Night was coming quick and they didn't have time to set up a grid. They just dove and swam. In 20 minutes more they would have called it off, when they found Daniel A. Yalowchuk anchored to the ocean floor by a 60 lb. bag of sea clams.

Yalowchuk, 21, of 925 Middle St. in Weymouth went out diving late in the afternoon of July 5 with Tom Dunn, 21, of 601 Granite St. in Braintree. They came out together when they found a bed of sea clams, Dunn said, then he checked his tank and they went back in. When it was over he said on the beach he wasn't sure if Yalowchuk had checked his equipment. He said he hadn't noticed if he blew into the air hose to the air vest, to see if it was working properly.

When Dunn's air was out he came to the surface. By then it was 5:00 p.m. and he saw no sign of Yalowchuk. "You couldn't see ten feet down there," he told the Medical Examiner later on the beach. At 5:13 someone called the police.

By 5:30 p.m. a Coast Guard cutter had arrived, and as traffic built on Atlantic Ave. and a crowd gathered on the wall, a helicopter circled between Black Rock Island and the shoreline. A Coast Guard official quietly asked people in the crowd if they would mind walking along the shore to look for a body.

When they found him his knife was out of its sheath lying beneath him in the sand. Diver Dave Clancy of the Underwater Recovery Unit cut the clams loose with his own knife and the team lifted him to the surface. Blackdar said that the knife was dull and incapable of cutting the rope that held the clams.

Dunn was the more experienced diver. At least he was certified. But he hadn't made a dive in five years. Yalowchuk had only dove three times before, and he wasn't certified.

Had he been certified he might have discovered what Blackdar and his crew — code name Sweathog — found when they brought him onto the beach in a litter. That he had a hole in the rubber pipe leading from his mouthpiece to his air vest, which should have carried him safely to the surface. If he was certified he might have had a gauge on his tank to tell him how much air he had left, but he didn't have one. He might not have had an air tank with a rusty valve that looked like it had been in a car wreck. He might have used a flag marker, and he might have stayed in contact with his buddy. But he didn't.

At 10:33 p.m. Medical Examiner Roger A. Pompeo ruled that the death was caused by accidental drowning. With Pompeo's permission the Quincy Police Underwater Recovery Unit analyzed Little Leaguer All-Stars picked!

For North River competition series

Over the next four weeks Little League All-Stars will play a total of 15 games in the North River All-Star Competition series, with 12-Yr. old Cohasset All-Stars playing in the South Shore Tournament against Plymouth All-Stars Wednesday, July 16 at 5:45 p.m. at the Barnes field in Cohasset.

Cohasset All-Stars are as follows:

12-YEAR OLDS

10-YEAR OLDS

Jason Massor, Danny Pompeo, Peter Sandbloom, Glenn Froio, Jimmie Gallagher, Ron Massa, Derek Tonnesson, Todd Fitzpatrick, Craig Mulcahy, Peter Buckley, Donald Mulligan, Doug Bennett, David Shultz, Janice Davenport and Michael Anderson. Coach of this team is Jeff Ladd from Scituate.

Sunday games will be played at 2 p.m. All week night games will begin at 6 p.m. Rain date makeups will be played Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings.

[See schedule on page 15]

Cohasset's Week

Richard Silvia

In charge of juice

Thanks to astute citizen reporters everywhere... the Mariner oftentimes gets the scoop about far-off places such as Saudi Arabia, Washington, D.C. (thanks Line (not Link) Bloomfield) and anywhere else a Cohasset resident travels.

Sometime this month we're going to get the beat on the GOP Republican convention in Detroit...where several Cohasset residents in high-ranking Massachusetts GOP positions will be stationed as of July 12 (through 18th).

Richard Silvia, owner of Silvia's garage on South Main Street, will be at on-the-scene reporter at the GOP convention. We didn't actually send him; he was going anyway, as the Massachusetts man in charge of special projects at the convention.

The big decisions to be made at the convention will be what to do with John Anderson's delegates and the choosing of a vice presidential candidate for whomever. And of course, GOP policy will be made.

Silvia said so far his biggest problem as special projects person for the Massachusetts delegation has been rounding up the cranberry juice to take to Detroit. Obviously, Ocean Spray is going to be a big helper. When the Michigan delegation recently asked Silvia if he could offer any advice on a particularly New England drink, he suggested the Cape Codder (thank goodness he had the foresight to not offer Cohasset punch). No one from Michigan had every heard of a Cape Codder.

Silvia noted, in conversation, that the mayor of Plymouth, Michigan is a woman. "And the town manager makes $35,000 a year. Of course they don't have a capable board of selectmen."

Cohasset Town Moderator David Place is chairman of the Massachusetts Organizationa.

Farewell permit

The board of appeals recently granted a special permit to Richard Farwell of 40 Hill Street, to alter a portion of the flood plain at 389 Beechwood Street by filling and constructing a driveway across a portion of the flood plain area.

The permit is subject to the following conditions and to any other conditions imposed by the conservation commission:

Before filling all top-soil, mud, muck, and peat shall be removed from the fill site.

A concrete pipe of suitable size, with tight joints and head walls at each end shall be installed, with the bottom of the pipe at brook-bed leve, to carry the brook through the fill.

All fill is to be clean gravel with enough clay binder to hold the slopes.

In addition, all work must conform to the Perkins Plan dated February 19, 1980, with addendum March 14, 1980 and only one house can be built, now or in the future, on the 6.1 acres.

Presently, a cease and desist order of the state is still in effect on the property, as the owner, Scott Steeves, had started to fill for a subdivision without property permits. Permissions from the conservation commission and board of appeals would effectively quash the state's cease and desist order.

25 lb. bet

Cohasset Harbormaster Harry Ritter is "on" again. The eggs, sausages, strawberry shortcake, cherrystone clams, prime rib and more shortcake last Tuesday was just in honor of a plateau he had reached in weight loss.

After loosing 133-lbs. in six months time, trimming his body to a good-looking 234-lbs., Harry is going for broke and trying for another 25-lbs. His reward will be another feast at a gourmet Italian restaurant in Boston.

Harry's daughter, Lynn, placed the new bet. And she's planning to lose the same 25 lbs. Bet Marge is really saving on the grocery bill these days!

Congratulations to all the Ritters, especially Marge, who has been enduring Harry's liquid protein diet for six months now.

The Register thinks police report a riot

High readership column

The Mariner is getting around these days...lots more in and out-of-town subscriptions. For a while we just figured those subscribers were relatives of Cohasset residents, students attending colleges out-of-state, transferees, new friends, etc. Then we were recently told at least two (known) New Jersey police departments received the Mariner. And a police department somewhere in the mid-west is getting the Mariner...not for its significant editorial stands, features, commentary...no, not for any of that. For the police report.

Editorial Columnist of The Register, Ellis Morris, recently wrote a column about the Mariner police report. He said:

"One of the high readership columns of any weekly hereabouts must be the police report for the week in the Cohasset Mariner. Apparently taken verbatim and undiluted from the police blotter, its content is therefore most always lively and intriguing. A reader must assume some of the residents of that otherwise seemingly quiet town are a belligerent sort. For example:

"May 27 — complaint of person cutting hedges possibly on property of town land; officer had person cutting hedges stopped until determination of boundary lines made. Resident said hedge is on his property and he is going to cut it down and if we do not like it, arrest him.

"Resident calls, individual has boat on his pier, wants same removed. Also said if anything happened to his property he'll break boat-owner's legs.

"June 11 — auxilliary officer and resident in re threats made to burn resident's lobster boat if boat should bump another boat again."

And so on. Remember all that?

All we can say, Ellis, is just wait until your police chiefs (The Register services Barnstable, Dennis and Yarmouth) make their police reports public. Just about now they're public document.

All in the family

Caroline Wampole, a senior at Cohasset High School, was recently informed that she was one of 12 students selected from the greater metropolitan area to write for the Globe's high school focus page.

In 1978 her sister, Miriam, then a student at Hingham High School, presently a sophomore at Smith, also wrote for the Globe focus page.

Caroline is a co-editor of the CHS 1981 yearbook, and last year served as a co-editor of the CHS Lamplighter — a student newspaper.

Health rules moving into the future

By Bernie Quigley

Last week in a local newspaper the surprising news was reported that Cohasset horse owners who keep their horses stabled out of town will have to have them licensed in Cohasset.

That story began with what we in the trade call a catchy lead. A catchy lead is meant to capture the imagination of the reader, to trick him into what might be a dull news story. Unfortunately, with the catchy lead we reporters sometimes lose the spirit of things.

Yes, a member of the board of health did mention something to that affect at a workshop for new horse regulations on June 30. Yes, the board did vote on new proposals for horse registration, and no, that is not the new regulation.

News commentary

The news at the board of health was fairly dull, especially if you didn't understand the dynamics of what was going on. Most of the talk revolved around the distance a horse should be from the owner's house, the neighbors's property line or the nearest swamp. Pretty esoteric material, and if you hadn't thought much about horses since My Friend Flicka moved you as a kid, it could have put you to sleep.

But what was actually going on at the workshop last week and at board meetings for months past is something a little different. It involves the creaking and groaning of a centuries old community moving into the future. The heart of the matter is the masterful stroke Thomas Jefferson added to the Constitution, stating that the pursuit of happiness is the inalienable rights of all Americans.

To Lawrence Mitchell of 271 N. Main St. the pursuit of happiness means riding horses and keeping them close by on his property for care and convenient riding. To Brad Pierce who lives next door it means something different. To him and his wife it means inviting over a few friends and having a cookout.

If Mitchell gets permission to stablehis horse from the Board of Health, then the Pierces won't have their cookouts. They say the horses will be too close, and the smell too intense. It will destroy what they consider to be their "Quality of life," and undermine their whole reason by buying their house and setting up a home in Cohasset. The Pierces and the Mitchells attend all of the Board of Health meetings and take close notes.

Now the board of health has to decide what is a reasonable policy to protect the rights and safety of all. They have to measure in their own minds with judicial prudence what constitutes a fair and reasonable judgment that, in this matter, involves the rights of the individual as much as it does the problem of a health hazard.

They do this by thinking out loud. They were thinking out loud on June 30 when they decided that a horse must have a five dollar license and a stable must have a permit. If you have ten horses they all need licenses even if you keep them in someone else's stable. "Stabled anywhere?" someone asked, and Dr. C. Michael Bliss, a Board Member, waved his hand and replied, "...anywhere...even in another state." The idea was that the Board wanted to keep track of the horse population for health reasons, and the old laws didn't provide for a simple, correct count.

Later, on the phone, Bliss said he didn't mind if someone kept a horse say, in New Hampshire, and what they voted on is not now the regulation. What they voted on was a rough outline, to be reviewed at the next meeting before it goes to the lawyers. After that the new proposals will be printed up and distributed, so that the residents will have 30 days to protest them or make new suggestions. Then, sometime in September most likely, some of the proposals will become the new regulations.

So what went on at the workshop was speculation and investigation in these nebulous areas of horse codes, in which none of the board members are experts, but all reasonable people and elected officials.

Reasonable people

It is best that we don't have experts on the board of health. It is good that we have reasonable people. Experts often know only their own expertise and little else. Reasonable people can adjust their thinking to pigs, cows, goats or horses, and if a specific problem comes up they can take the advice of experts under consideration.

And there have been a few experts on horses on hand at recent board meetings to offer their advice. In some cases the experts are lobbyists for their own vision of the pursuit of happiness, and their interests and expertise has been well received by the board.

Mitchell, who likes horses, enlightened the board on recent studies by the University of Pennsylvania on their recommendation of asphalt floors for stables, but Sally Davenport, familiar with those studies, claimed that the asphalt hurt the horses hooves. Diane Sullivan, who hates horses, advised the board of potential squalor in one square inch of horse manure.

Herb Jason on his boat, the Blue Heather.

In some cases the information of the experts was added to the proposals for the new regulations regarding the stabling of horses. In all cases the board considered the divergent views of the participants and made their own judgments...judgments that seemed quite rational to this kid from Brooklyn, where there are no pigs, cows, goats or horses and far too many people.

In Brooklyn there didn't seem to be any collective voice of reason, elected to express the desires of the group as a whole, there were only special interests. In Brooklyn, the group as a whole always seemed to lose.

Jefferson, the visionary, predicted this state of affairs a long time ago. When America gets as crowded as Europe, he said, it will become as corrupt as Europe. Cohasset is not so crowded, and if you go to a board of health meeting you can still see democracy at work as it was intended to work. Not with experts, but with the fair view of citizens making sense.

But Cohasset is getting crowded. That's why the Planning Board has asked the board of health to toughen up on the proximity of horse and people, and that's why the board of health is holding these workshops.

Mosquito control

By Gilbert Tower

It was distressing to recently learn that mosquito control work was not carried out this year in 10 communities from Quincy to Duxbury, including Cohasset, due to lack of funds from Quincy.

It was the first time in 25 years that the South Shore Mosquito Control Project did not spray mosquito breeding grounds in April. It is gratifying that Cohasset made its contribution promptly after town meeting to the control project.

The writer has sometimes been urged to write reminiscences about what living was like in Cohasset seventy years ago. That article about mosquitoes suggests writing something on that subject. People today who are not bothered by mosquitoes and flies have no conception of what they used to be.

It was impossible for people to sit out on their porches unless they were protected by screens. It is gratifying that Cohasset has always willingly contributed to the South Shore Mosquito Control Project.

Flies were another pest. There were numerous cow barns in town which were prolific breeders of flies. They would get into houses and stick to everything. Sticky fly paper was one defense against them and another control was by paper with poison to it which was placed in a dish of water.

People today can be very thankful that we now have few flies except near where horses are kept. However there are not many horses now and the streets are not very much fouled with horse manure. Automobiles are now much cleaner than animals used to be.

In early colonial days pigs, cows and bulls used to roam freely the same as dogs do now. Living conditions have greatly improved in respect to waste from animals but further improvement is possible.

You're welcome

To the Editor:

Thank you for sending me the courtesy copy of your newspaper.

We are pleased to read about our grand-niece graduating with honors and a scholarship given by the Cohasset Rotary Club — a very generous scholarship.

Your paper was enjoyed by us — it resembles our own Chatham Chronicle, to which we subscribe. The articles and ads are all in good taste.

SRO for Arts Festival's Godspell

By Tanna Kasperowicz

All year long town government officials worked to keep taxes at a minimum (we think), residents installed wood stoves to keep warm and save on the heating bills. People read about the impending recession and figured they were in it, wondering what was so impending about it.

But the artists of the town...the thespians and the artists of brush and pen...were gathering their colors and ideas and musical notes to bring us this past July 4th weekend...where the culmination of the arts EXPLODED in the guise of the South Shore Arts Festival and the Cohasset Drama Workshop production of Godspell.

It is apparent from reading my past play reviews that I will have to write something a whole lot better than any of those if I am to continue in this game.

Ok. So I loved it.

I bawled at the end...because the cast was so young and beautiful...and because they did us a moral service by making us face our own moral imperatives. Sunday night I wondered why Godspell couldn't go on forever. The cast is one of the hottest tickets in town. Hopefully, you can still get tickets for the fourth and fifth run this weekend. As of Sunday there were only 30 tickets left.

Ron Emmons runs his workshop productions like a successful football team. From all evidences of expended energy, the Godspell cast could well have played two football games Sunday. Thank goodness they supplied us with cranberry juice drinks during intermission...the audience was exhausted!

Although Emmons always seems to have a winning cast, he hardly does it alone. The result of such an attempt could leave chaos. He's smarter than that. He had Alexandra Mullen, a CHS '80 grad, serve as musical director and choreographer for the 17-member cast which was always moving, grinding, swirling, singing, kicking, mimeing. Such an endeavor could be criticized for an excess of cleverness. But there were no excesses. Mullen's a pro — with 11 years experience to her credit.

No, I'm not going to try to name all the 17 good performances in the production. Jim Vivian, a CHS '79 grad, presently at Boston University, was Christ. His was a leadership wise enough to surmount all the odds. His performance was the doctrine of the possible, the attainable.

Every member of the audience takes home something personal from any production. And I can only tell you what I took home.

I had quite forgotten that Jesus was not only the son of God. He was also human, with human frailities. I had also, over the years, forgotten that Christ's mission was a teaching mission. And his disciples were frustrating to say the least.

I had forgotten how frightened Jesus must have been of dying, to have known the time and place of his end.

Jesus called his disciples into combat and gave them a reason to stay when the hell began to break loose around them, when the sphincter began to flutter, when every natural instinct was to cut and run. Even Jesus thought of cutting and running, but couldn't because he was the kingpin.

He gave us all amnesty.

And I had forgotten that, too.

Says she didn't threaten School Committee

To the Editor:

I would be most grateful if you would convey to the school committee and all present, the following clarification.

Letters

Being no orator, I fear my words of June 30th have confused at least one reporter, who quotes me as having "threatened the committee by telling them they could be replaced." By no means!

My words were: "I'm afraid I'm offering a personal vote of no confidence in the abilities, attitudes and actions of this committee regarding music, at least."

I had prefaced this by observing that where traditional or parliamentarian practices are in force, democratically-elected governments incurring votes of no confidence, topple and must be replaced.

Since I have noticed nothing democratic in the handling of Mr. Hyde's case (Anthony Hyde, former CHS Music Director), it is fortunate for our school's government, that such procedures are not followed in spite of its having inspired in me and obviously in so many others, a vote of no confidence.

I also offer a vote of no confidence in the committees allowing music in 7th and 8th Grades to be completely voluntary.

Town shouldn't rush into 3-A purchase

To the Editor:

The writer has just read that the town is considering buying the Cohasset Motors property on Rte. 3A for $650,000.

Owner Howard Schramm has give the town six weeks to consider the idea so that there will have to be some thinking done to decided what to do about the proposal.

Off hand the writer's reaction is that instead of the town acquiring the property for some uses for which the needs have not hitherto been recognizd, it would be better if the property could be continued for some profitable enterprise, so that it would continue to have consideralbe assessed value and pay taxes to the town.

That raises the question as to what income-producing business the property would be suitable for. It has not been on the market very long so that more time is needed for some prospective purchaser.

If some purchaser could pay Mr. Schramm more than $650,000 it would seem better for the town to continue it as taxable property. There are already other town needs. The first need will be for money to pay for the town's share of the wastewater disposal system. How much that will be is not yet known but no doubt it will be a fairly large amount of money.

Also, it is not known how much money will be needed to buy the railroad property from the Penn Central Railroad Trustees. To determine how much the town should pay when the trustees are ready to

Advisory Comm. recommends efficiency study for town

To the Editor:

A list of 18 concerns about various aspects of town operations has been drawn up by the Cohasset Advisory Committee and submitted to the selectmen with the intention of discussing these matters with the selectmen and other town and committee officials in the hope that some solutions can be found.

The list of concerns is contained in a letter to the Selectmen from advisory committee chairman Jean Cotton, who notes that these matters have come to the attention of the committee through its required review of department budgets during the past two years.

The Advisory Committee is charged with reviewing the departmental and committee budgets and other proposed town expenditures and making recommendations for action at regular and special town meetings.

"During the past two years as the Advisory Committee was reviewing the budgets and talking to Department and Committee Chairmen, there were certain areas that seemed to require more research to improve not only the efficiency of some operations but also the services that were rendered," Mrs. Cotton said. "It is our intention to discuss these with you and other departments involved in the hope that ways may be found to implement some solutions."

Mrs. Cotton said the committee found that the pressure of meeting deadlines made it difficult to look into the matters in detail as town meeting time approached, and it was hoped that discussions might be held in the summer and fall to get more information. The Committee, she said, had no preconceived solutions and wanted first to consult with officials and get more information. The list of "concerns" follows:

A new schedule of fees for cemetery lots and the digging of graves; improvement of the town's telephone system or service; a more efficient schedule for the assignment of secretarial work; a study of centralized communication for the fire and police departments.

Alos, a method to legally increase financing recreation programs through the revolving fund; a study and possible implementation of a fee schedule for faulty private alarm systems; an improved schedule for the maintenance ofGovernment Island property; a definite program and a method of checking the maintenance of all town vehicles.

And, an evaluation of the feasibility of rustproofing town vehicles; a study of street lighting — an evaluation in respect to rising cost; the certification of the water dept. laboratory, and a study of its possible use for the sewer dept. to avoid duplication; the possible implementation of a central purchasing department.

Also, a yearly inventory of all town equipment and supplies — including the school dept; a review by the selectmen of all budgets under their jurisdiction before submission to the advisory committee; a study of a new format for the town meeting warrant in order to be more informative to the voters; a study or review of the present town meeting quorum requirement.

And the possible legalization of longer term town contracts; and a more efficient use of personnel in the reading of water meters.

Cohasset Advisory Committe

3-A purchase

sell, a report will be needed to consider who much money some new house lots can be sold for and what new roads can be built.

The filling that was done to make the railroad bed will be worth compensating for if it becomes a part of a new road. If undertaken at once, a study of that problem will take two, or more, years to figure it out.

Some mention has been made of a proposal to buy the pipes of the Hingham Water Co. in the estern part of the town on the Hingham side of Forest Ave. That is another possibility that might come ahead of any uses that the town might make of the Schramm property. It may take two or three years for Mr. Schramm to sell his Ford Motor Sales and Service property.

How much has been paid off to date for the Cohasset Water Co. acquisition by the town of Cohasset? The writer has not looked in the town report to see what other indebtedness the town is paying off. Keep in mind that the federal government has requested going slow on public expenditures in order to prevent increasing inflation.

The vacated property will be well suited for another automobile company if there is another automobile company that can use it, which seems doubtful at the present time. Otherwise some alterations may be required to make it suitable for a different use.

Those are some thoughts that occur off hand to the writer. Hopefully they may be of some help to the selectmen or to some other person who may contribute some thinking. In any event it is hoped that the additional fire station idea will not be taken up seriously.

The town has already voted twice that a second fire station is not needed for our little town. Every house in town can be reached within ten minutes from the present fire station on Elm Street. The cost for operating the fire department is already too high and another letter has been prepared on that subject.

Teach them to listen

(ED.'S NOTE: the following letter was sent to the Cohasset School Committee June 16. An addendum was added to the letter July 5 and submitted to the Mariner for publication).

Dear Mr. England and school committee friends:

Just a note with a very strong plea. I urge you, please to reinstate music as a requirement in the 7th and 8th grades and thereafter I urge you to support and build on a worthwhile program.

If this is not done, I fear the school committee will indeed have achieved the distinction of having dealt a mortal blow to the cultural developement of our children.

When I see AP music offered at Cohasset High, then I will know that there is indeed a strong music program in our school. Until then, please give our youngsters a chance to look back with gratitude to their schools music program, even if it were to teach them no more than just how to listen.

I constantly hear teachers complain — and have discovered myself that children do not listen — it's easier to look!

In addition, proper exposure to music education in secondary school can open up new avenues of fruitful employment, i.e. the ever-expanding field of music therapy.

Finally, this "ten students per class or no class" policy simply does not work in the music setting, especially in a small system likes ours, with its many scheduling problems.

Yet, "The few" also pay taxes and are no less deserving of opportunity. How can you fail in your responsibilities to implement the declared philosophy of education for "the whole child?"

Addendum

The school committee has responded it has not eliminated music. But realistically, it's a rare musically non-performing youngster who will voluntarily attend a music class. These are the students

Bill Morgan

☐Bill Morgan of Bow Street will play one of the leading male roles in the Plymouth Old Colony Theatre's production of Not Now Darling which will run from July 14 to 19th with performances at 8 p.m.

Bill, who will assume the name of Harry McMichael for that week, becomes a successful gambler in this spicey British comedy. Always well received wherever it plays, Not Now Darling was first produced in 1970 by George Steinbrenner in New York City.

After graduating from Boston College, Bill gave the Big Apple a go. He was an NBC page and studied under opera star, John Mace, but after a year in the melting pot of actors and singers, he came home to Cohasset (our gain!). He's been a fervent amateur actor for twenty years, spending approximately 10 with the Cohasset Dramatic Club and 10 with the Hinghan Civic Chorus Group. He recently did South Pacific with the Curtain Call Theatre, Braintree.

☐The July 6 Sunday New York Times Travel Section led off with an article about Cohasset and our South Shore neighbors titled "Exploring the Coast Between Boston and Cape Cod."

Jane Condon, a reporter for Life Magazine, who grew up here, was married here two years ago and still has family in town (unfortunately, I was not able to identify her family), captured my rapt attention when she writes in her lead paragraph.

"When I hear people call the South Shore the North Shore's poor cousin or when guidebooks completely forget that there are 50 miles — fascinating ones, too — between Boston and Cape Cod, I Bristle" (me too!).

The "history, food and sunshine" still draw her back frequently and she writes about the highlights of those 50 miles from the Quincy Mansion to Hingham's Historic Square, to our own museums, restaurants and Music Circus, to Scituate's bustling harbor, to Duxbury's public beach and on down to Plymouth Rock, the Mayflower and Plimouth Plantation, in detail.

Thank you, Jane Condon!

☐Vacation day suggestion: Follow the historic/scenic route described in Jane Condon's New York Times article and take in a performance of Not Now Darling, starring Cohasset's own Bill Morgan!

☐The Lawrence and Edmond clans, who you read about last week, had another reason to celebrate: Dutchy (Leonard) and Adele (one set of grandparents) celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary on Friday, July 4th! The Edmonds (May and Bruce of Pond Street, the other set of grandparents) are, like the Lawrences, getting to be old hands at partying.

Last week glasses were raised for the visiting offspring, Joan and Paul Lawrence from Golden, Colorado, on their 12th wedding anniversary, an event they shared with brother Peter and Leslie Lawrence of Duxbury.

The Lawrence's sons, Peter, 7, and David, 8, couldn't be happier! They're here for three weeks with four grandparents!

Bill O'Brien thinks he'd better go back to jogging with his Irish walking stick. He was defenseless last week when two hungary-looking canines came loping after him. (See this week's police report).

Take care to put away your hammock (if you have one);backyard theives are after them.

Congratulations to Peter and Michelle Laney of Jerusalem Road, who became the parents of their first child, a son, Andrew Onwood Laney, who was born on June 2 at South Shore Hospital. Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm Onwood and Mr. and Mrs. Robert Laney are grandparents.

☐Juan and Plann Kling also became the parents of their first born, a daughter, Lena Kling, born on June 17 at South Shore Hospital. Lena will have lots of playmates within the family; her grandparents, Vath and Chabeth Khlee of Hill Street, are the parents of her six cousins: Vanny, Phafly, Phalla, Bun-ny, Et and Chien.

The Klings, who like the Khlee's are native Cambodians who took refuge in Thailand, were recently reunited here with their family.

☐August 16-30 Steven Ralff, a Deer Hill School student, will attend two weeks of baseball camp at Lakeville, Massachusetts. Steven is the son of Mr. And Mrs. David Ralff of Lantern Lane — and he's a pretty fine ball player, we hear.

☐Christopher (Chris) MacKenzie, a freshman at Holy Cross College, was named to the Dean's list for the second semester of the 1979-80 academic year. Chris is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James MacKenzie of Wilton, Connecticut — formerly of Cohasset. He's majoring in economics.

☐Twenty-two is the magic number at the Ripley Road Nursing Home, although the date you want to remember is the 19th.

On Saturday, July 19, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., the 22 residents, 22 families and 22 staff members of the Home will hold their 5th Annual Fair.

Residents have been busy making silk flowers, stuffed dolls and toys, lollypop dolls, crocheted items and Christmas decorations that will be for sale, along with baked goods and white elephants donated by their families.

For the first time, this year there will also be games for children and pony rides. Muffins, doughnuts, fried dough and coffee will be on sale for breakfast and homemade clam chowder (a la Don Harrold), hot dogs, hamburgers, baked beans, salad and desserts will be available for lunch from 11:30 a.m. onward. Chances for merchant-donated items will be sold.

"We hope this will be a community project," says Thelma Harrold, administrator of the home for, coming up in August, 22 years!

Proceeds from the Annual Fair will be used for outings and entertainment for residents.

There promises to be something for everyone and plenty to eat (take your kid sister out to breakfast, or treat the family to lunch), so save the date — July 19th — and stop by at the corner of Ripley Road and Sohier Street.

☐The Ripley Road Nursing Home will celebrate two of its residents' birthdays on Wednesday, July 9th:

Mrs. Welton, who's actual birthday was on Independence Day, and Faith Cook, born July 21.

Cake, ice cream, piano music and singing are party fare for the afternoon.

☐Turning six, also on July 9th, was Chris Bartow who has invited a few friends and his cousins, Matt and Adam Pennewell, visting from Mt. Pleasant, Michigan, for sweets and miniature golf.

☐The "ladies" match birthday club, however, has gained a lot of interest. Joan Bravo's birthday will be celebrated on August 9th, high noon at The Greenhouse. If you are old enough to order a drink, come join; and if you share the same zodiac sign, you may bask in the candlelight, too.

most affected by having music made voluntary. To them, music until now has been a once-a-week activity, so how can they themselves really understand its importance? At least please give the non-performing student an opportunity to emerge from high school, less woefully ignorant of great music and its creators.

It is also important to note that small numbers per class are more often indicative of scheduling problems than lack of interest on the part of students.

Dental Dialogue
DENTAL SLEUTH NEEDS X-RAYS
Q. I go to the dentist every six months to have my teeth cleaned and X-rayed. Why does the dentist X-ray my teeth so often, and is it harmful?
A. X-rays are invaluable in detecting dental problems not visible to the naked eye. They are one of the dentists most valuable diagnostic aids. Among many things they show early decay, diseases of the gum, and certain kinds of bone cancer — problems that can arise suddenly. With modern methods and safeguards there is no reason for you to be concerned about periodic X-rays. As Sherlock Holmes would say, "Elementary my dear Watson!"

A.J. Antone sells car no. 3,000

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Do people buy the car or the man? Twenty years ago a Ford-buying family remained a Ford-buying family all its life...people who bought Chevrolets stuck with their brand religiously. Now it seems things have changed...or at least things changed for A.J. Antone when he made a change from the former Cohasset Motors to Spensley Chevrolet.

When Cohasset Motors closed its doors a few months ago, Antone took his Ford customers with him to Spensley Chevrolet — just down the street. After 19 years selling Fords — how does it feel to be selling Chevrolets? "It feels good. It's a fine product."

Antone said his customers have always bought service from him — a product he stands behind. And because of his widely-known reputation for service, after the sale, he does over 75 per cent repeat business and has a large referral and transferee business. "Over one half of my sales at Spensley are from customers I formerly sold Fords to.

"Where once I sold to the mothers and fathers, I'm now selling to their children. And I suppose in a few years I'll be selling to their children and grandchildren

Last week Antone sold car No. 3,000 to Mrs. Grace Russell. "I sold her a 1967 Ford Falcon before."

Selling 3,000 cars over an 18-yr. period is like selling a car every other day. And it's a pretty fine average for a car salesman from a small town to have achieved.

A.J. Antone of Spensley Chevrolet presents flowers to Grace Russell of Nichols Road — his 3,000th car sale in an 18 year period. (Derr photo)

Angler's Corner

Several questions have come in concerning the various salt water licenses required by sportsmen to sell fish, especially tuna.

The National Marine Fisheries are separate and entirely different from the Mass. Division of Marine Fisheries. National Fisheries are part of the U.S. Dept. of Commerce, National Oceanic & Atmospheric Administration. They issude tuna permits and set seasonal catch limits. Mass. Fisheries come under the Dept. of Natural Resources and issue Commercial Fishing License.

You may legally have one without the other, but to have a tuna permit you can not sell your tuna. To have a commercial fishing license you cannot catch a tuna. To catch and sell a tuna you must have both a permit (issued to your boat) and a Commercial Fishing License (issued to you).

Commercial Fishing Licenses come in a variety of prices and obligations.

You may legally catch and sell daily up to 100 pounds of fish without any type license. A $5 Rod and Reel License covers you for any fish caught exceeding 100 pounds, including tuna (if caught on Rod & Reel. A $25 individual commercial license covers you for all types of fishing including gill net seining, long line, etc. This includes rod & reel for stripers, mackerel, blues etc.

The catch is you alone must do all the work. You must gaff or harpoon all fish alone with no help except for a co-pilot (allowed to maneuver the boat only). That can become difficult with large stripers and tuna.

A $50 license covers you and everyone in the boat. You may sell fish caught by your friends and gain assistance gaffing and harpooning. The $50 also covers gill netting, tub trawl, seining etc. for you and any boat up to 59 feet.

From 60 feet to 99 feet the same privilege cost $75. From 100 feet on its a $100 price tag.

If you purchase a $50 plus commercial license you also get a sales tax exempt number. Most marine dealers bait shop owners, etc. honor this number so you can save the 5% sales tax. Some stores require that you fill out a form prior to acceptance. If you spend $1000 a year on repairs or tackle or bait than you pay for your license.

If you buy a new boat or motor you must pay the sales tax in order to register the boat, but then you may apply for a sales tax rebate to:

Dept. of Revenue, Leverett Saltonstall Building, 100 Cambridge St., Boston, Ma., c/o Sales Tax Bureau, P/O Box 7010.

You must submit a notorized bill of sale if from other than a dealer. Proof of sales tax payment (cancelled check or validated form ST-6 along with your commercial fishing license (copies of each will do).

Someone else said a man was shooting a gun on Bassing Beach...but if anyone was, it's not registered in the hallowed pages of the police report for the week.

A woman, who made it to Parker Avenue from Bassing Beach, was rushed to the hospital for some reason or another. Fireworks shot out from Whitehead and one large boat in the middle of the Harbor. Those flares worried tenters a little...especially when skiffs were still quietly taking passengers to and from the shore in the night. One flare on the North side of the island remained lit for sometime after it fell, causing some tenters to worry that another one might stay lit on their tent. Kids with booze up their snoots were reported everywhere.

July 5 — daylight. Tenters pick up some of the rubble...but there are hundreds of broken beer bottles and rubble on the beach and in the grasses.

On non-July 4th weekends Bassing can be a lovely place to walk, take a quick swim to...have a cookout. If you own a dinghy or can hitch a ride. Put your towel in your teeth and swim over...drag your airtight cooler behind you.

You don't need a reservation or a permit to tent on Bassing. Of course you don't get anything but some quiet. The only toilet facilities which exist are in the two cottages on the beach, which are maintained by the Bassing Beach Tenants' Association. Members of that association are assigned various times during the summer when they and their families can stay at the cottages for a small fee and a promise of doing some maintenance and clean-up work at the cottages and on the beach.

Saturday, we visited some of the tenters who had survived an overnight or two on the bustling island. Tom and Leslie Chamberlain, along with Lynn and Joe McVay (the McVays are from Scituate) were tenting for the first time, although both couples have visited Bassing Beach many times before — as day-trippers.

Estimates of the numbers of people on the island July 4 were everywhere from 500-1,000. Tom said, "They came on floats, mattresses, everything imaginable."

Lynn said she saw kids riding bikes at low tide up to their waists in the water.

In Tent #2 we found Tim Doody, from California. "I came here just for this weekend." Doddy said he's a former Ringling Brothers Circus Clown who left after four years because of the long hours. He's now with Jim Howe Productions out of Darlington, South Carolina, but he lives in Boston. Doody is one of two American clowns ever to have been invited to Monocco by Princess Grace.

Doody was tenting with Jane (Bacigalupo) and Ed Dolph. Jane's sister, May, is married to John Muncey who owns Harbor Liquors. Doody then said he had also worked for an advertising agency in New York for 18 years and had written the "You only go around once in life" advertisement for Schlitz Beer.

Tent #3 didn't want to talk to me at first...or give their names. They eventually talked, but never gave their names. They reported having come to Bassing for countless years now...as did their relatives before them. They were depressed by the underage kids drinking and leaving rubbish on the beach.

"There were 13 and 14-year old kids stumbling around in boats...heaving all over. I wonder where their parents are?" one man questioned.

They, some of them, anyway, were also concerned that any publicity about the island might just alert more vandals. We considered that plea before writing this story. But we think the vandals have already discovered Bassing Beach.

By Joan Pinkham

What treasures come my way! Last week a jewel of a spanking new cookbook from our ever-faithful Margaret Ward. I'll get to that next week, but now, I must tell you of three dog-eared, be-spattered gems, one dated 1888 which Priscilla Hall unearthed while going through her recipes. The Ladies of East Marshfield got together '150 Tested Recipes ' and had them printed by Alfred Mudge & Son of 24 Franklin St., Boston. Merchants who helped pay for the little 35-page book by taking out full-page ads included W. W. Randall of Sea Veiw who urged them to "fall in for your rations" and L. W. Cook's of North Scituate whose clothing and underclothing included horse blankets, wolf robes and newmarkets. Does anyone know what the last two items were? E. W. Hall who owned the building that now houses the Marshfield Hills Post Office was having a sale at the time on oil carpets (don't know what that was, either), corsets and "Christmas and New Year's Presents in Great Variety." George S. Randall had a factory in Sea View and advertised his violin cases, while F. N. Damon of East Marshfield told readers he was a carriage builder, painter and trimmer. There are recipes for cough medicine from H. L. Sherman, Sunflower Cake from Mrs. E. W. Hall, Baked Batter Pudding from Mrs. Clift Rodgers, Bird's Nest Pudding from Mrs. W. L. Sprague, Banberries from Miss Sarah J. Damon and A. Hatch tells us how to cure hams. Mrs. J. E. E. tells us how to make

CHILI SAUCE

Peel and chop 12 large, ripe tomatoes, add two peppers and two onions, chopped, two tablespoonfuls of salt, two of sugar, one of vinegar, one of cinnamon. Boil one hours.

In 1901, the ladies no longer called their village East Marshfield. Now they were the 'Ladies of Marshfield Hills.' Their sponsors were so generous with their support, that this book ran to 39 pages. George F. Welch of Scituate advertised kitchen utensils such as Venetian Steel Enameled Ware, Stransky Imported Ware and Rust-proof Tin Ware. W. W. Wade of Egypt tuned pianos and also suggested easy payment plans for his organs and old square pianos. James L. Rogers of Marshfield Hills was a dealer in antique furniture, while Richardson's Pharmacy in Scituate had a full line of confectionery and cigars. Edgar W. Hood was a jeweler in Marshfield Hills opposite the schoolhouse and also an agent for "The Adamant Shoe." Here is a favorite dessert of Priscilla's husband, Maurice, perfectg for this time of year. Called simply:

NICE DESSERT IN STRAWBERRY TIME
LUCY V. CARVER

3 c. flour
3 tsp. baking powder
3 tsp. shortening
a little salt
sweet milk

Put into cups, filling about half full and steam for 10 min., setting the cups in water in a kettle, covered tightly. This quantity is enough for 7 cups. Serve with the following Strawberry Sauce — 1/2 c. butter, beaten with 1 c. powdered sugar. Then add 2 T of cream or milk and 1 c. mashed strawberries.

At the turn of the century, women from all over Marshfield joined together to administer funds left for charitable works by a Mrs. Taylor of Summer St. Calling themselves 'The Taylor Fund Committee", in true neighborly fashion the women would deliver flowers to shut-ins, May baskets, Christmas gifts and little remembrances. Their cookbook runs to only 16 pages, but is packed with 'Tasty Trifles' such as Peanut Bread, Krunnel Torta which goes like this:

Beat 2 eggs until light, add 1 c. sugar, 1½2 c. breadcrumbs, 1 c. chopped dates, 1 c. chopped nuts, 1 tsp. baking powder. Mix well together, put into a shallow pan and bake 3/4 hour in a slow oven (don't forget, they were using kerosene stoves, or wood ovens). Serve with whipped cream.

Here is their

WIGGLE

Melt 3 T butter, add 2 T flour, add 1 pint milk slowly, season with salt and perrper. When thickened, add 1 c. chicken, salmon or shrimp, 2 c. peas.

What could be simpler than their

GRAPE CONSERVE

5 lbs. sugar, 1 lb. seeded raisins, 5 chopped oranges, 1 lemon, 5 lbs. grapes, slip skins and heat pulp and put through the colander. Put all together and cook 1/2 hour.

July 5 — daylight. Tenters pick up some of the rubble...but there are hundreds of broken beer bottles and rubble on the beach and in the grasses.

On non-July 4th weekends Bassing can be a lovely place to walk, take a quick swim to...have a cookout. If you own a dinghy or can hitch a ride. Put your towel in your teeth and swim over...drag your airtight cooler behind you.

You don't need a reservation or a permit to tent on Bassing. Of course you don't get anything but some quiet. The only toilet facilities which exist are in the two cottages on the beach, which are maintained by the Bassing Beach Tenants' Association. Members of that association are assigned various times during the summer when they and their families can stay at the cottages for a small fee and a promise of doing some maintenance and clean-up work at the cottages and on the beach.

Saturday, we visited some of the tenters who had survived an overnight or two on the bustling island. Tom and Leslie Chamberlain, along with Lynn and Joe McVay (the McVays are from Scituate) were tenting for the first time, although both couples have visited Bassing Beach many times before — as day-trippers.

Estimates of the numbers of people on the island July 4 were everywhere from 500-1,000. Tom said, "They came on floats, mattresses, everything imaginable."

Lynn said she saw kids riding bikes at low tide up to their waists in the water.

In Tent #2 we found Tim Doody, from California. "I came here just for this weekend." Doddy said he's a former Ringling Brothers Circus Clown who left after four years because of the long hours. He's now with Jim Howe Productions out of Darlington, South Carolina, but he lives in Boston. Doody is one of two American clowns ever to have been invited to Monocco by Princess Grace.

Doody was tenting with Jane (Bacigalupo) and Ed Dolph. Jane's sister, May, is married to John Muncey who owns Harbor Liquors. Doody then said he had also worked for an advertising agency in New York for 18 years and had written the "You only go around once in life" advertisement for Schlitz Beer.

Tent #3 didn't want to talk to me at first...or give their names. They eventually talked, but never gave their names. They reported having come to Bassing for countless years now...as did their relatives before them. They were depressed by the underage kids drinking and leaving rubbish on the beach.

"There were 13 and 14-year old kids stumbling around in boats...heaving all over. I wonder where their parents are?" one man questioned.

They, some of them, anyway, were also concerned that any publicity about the island might just alert more vandals. We considered that plea before writing this story. But we think the vandals have already discovered Bassing Beach.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

What treasures come my way! Last week a jewel of a spanking new cookbook from our ever-faithful Margaret Ward. I'll get to that next week, but now, I must tell you of three dog-eared, be-spattered gems, one dated 1888 which Priscilla Hall unearthed while going through her recipes. The Ladies of East Marshfield got together '150 Tested Recipes ' and had them printed by Alfred Mudge & Son of 24 Franklin St., Boston. Merchants who helped pay for the little 35-page book by taking out full-page ads included W. W. Randall of Sea Veiw who urged them to "fall in for your rations" and L. W. Cook's of North Scituate whose clothing and underclothing included horse blankets, wolf robes and newmarkets. Does anyone know what the last two items were? E. W. Hall who owned the building that now houses the Marshfield Hills Post Office was having a sale at the time on oil carpets (don't know what that was, either), corsets and "Christmas and New Year's Presents in Great Variety." George S. Randall had a factory in Sea View and advertised his violin cases, while F. N. Damon of East Marshfield told readers he was a carriage builder, painter and trimmer. There are recipes for cough medicine from H. L. Sherman, Sunflower Cake from Mrs. E. W. Hall, Baked Batter Pudding from Mrs. Clift Rodgers, Bird's Nest Pudding from Mrs. W. L. Sprague, Banberries from Miss Sarah J. Damon and A. Hatch tells us how to cure hams. Mrs. J. E. E. tells us how to make

CHILI SAUCE

Peel and chop 12 large, ripe tomatoes, add two peppers and two onions, chopped, two tablespoonfuls of salt, two of sugar, one of vinegar, one of cinnamon. Boil one hours.

In 1901, the ladies no longer called their village East Marshfield. Now they were the 'Ladies of Marshfield Hills.' Their sponsors were so generous with their support, that this book ran to 39 pages. George F. Welch of Scituate advertised kitchen utensils such as Venetian Steel Enameled Ware, Stransky Imported Ware and Rust-proof Tin Ware. W. W. Wade of Egypt tuned pianos and also suggested easy payment plans for his organs and old square pianos. James L. Rogers of Marshfield Hills was a dealer in antique furniture, while Richardson's Pharmacy in Scituate had a full line of confectionery and cigars. Edgar W. Hood was a jeweler in Marshfield Hills opposite the schoolhouse and also an agent for "The Adamant Shoe." Here is a favorite dessert of Priscilla's husband, Maurice, perfectg for this time of year. Called simply:

NICE DESSERT IN STRAWBERRY TIME
LUCY V. CARVER

3 c. flour
3 tsp. baking powder
3 tsp. shortening
a little salt
sweet milk

Put into cups, filling about half full and steam for 10 min., setting the cups in water in a kettle, covered tightly. This quantity is enough for 7 cups. Serve with the following Strawberry Sauce — 1/2 c. butter, beaten with 1 c. powdered sugar. Then add 2 T of cream or milk and 1 c. mashed strawberries.

At the turn of the century, women from all over Marshfield joined together to administer funds left for charitable works by a Mrs. Taylor of Summer St. Calling themselves 'The Taylor Fund Committee", in true neighborly fashion the women would deliver flowers to shut-ins, May baskets, Christmas gifts and little remembrances. Their cookbook runs to only 16 pages, but is packed with 'Tasty Trifles' such as Peanut Bread, Krunnel Torta which goes like this:

Beat 2 eggs until light, add 1 c. sugar, 1½2 c. breadcrumbs, 1 c. chopped dates, 1 c. chopped nuts, 1 tsp. baking powder. Mix well together, put into a shallow pan and bake 3/4 hour in a slow oven (don't forget, they were using kerosene stoves, or wood ovens). Serve with whipped cream.

Here is their

WIGGLE

Melt 3 T butter, add 2 T flour, add 1 pint milk slowly, season with salt and perrper. When thickened, add 1 c. chicken, salmon or shrimp, 2 c. peas.

What could be simpler than their

GRAPE CONSERVE

5 lbs. sugar, 1 lb. seeded raisins, 5 chopped oranges, 1 lemon, 5 lbs. grapes, slip skins and heat pulp and put through the colander. Put all together and cook 1/2 hour.

South Shore Arts Festival's winners

It's impossible to tell how many people gazed at three tentfuls of artistic renderings during the South Shore Art Center's four-day arts festival last week. Almost every hour of every day some new event was taking place...for children and adults alike. The grass on the common may need some revitalizing... after the thousands of feet that trampled it. But it was a good show — and it's been discovered that grass usually grows back.

For the record, the following artists were prize-winners in their catagories: Wilfred Loring got Best In Show for an etching of the Mass. Pike Extension. Victoria Chesley received First Prize in the landscape category for a pastel.

Joanne Papandrea did a lovely oil entitled "View From Simm's." for which she received an honorable mention in the Marine Category. And Iris Osterman received First Prize in the still life category for her oil — "Red Box."

In the Genre Category, Julia Shepley received First Prize for a charcoal entitled "A Board Game." Susan Rogerson got First Prize for her reclining Nude in the Figure Category. And Nancy Hanson-Connolly got First Prize in the Abstract Category for her fabric, "Landscape With Ships."

Honorable Mention #1 was received by Marianne Perrone for an abstract done with oil on paper. Ms. Perrone also got the Honorable Mention #2 award for an untitled charcoal.

In the Portrait Category, Mary Good received First Prize for an oil entitled "54." Constance Flavell Pratt got an Honorable Mention for a pastel entitled "Ned" and Dennis Kowal received First Prize in Three Dimensional work for an acrylic sculpture "Vertical Migration."

In the juried photography show, Joe Hogue got First Prize, Phillip Tarantino shared an Honorable Mention #2 with Anne Garrison.

In the Member Show, the following artists received awards for excellence: Ruth Ferrara for an acrylic called "Haitian Woman;" John Krall for a photograph called "A Window Next Door." Marianne Perrone for an oil entitled "Dock Shapes." And Chris Rifkin for a silkscreen called "Another World." Also, Claffy Williams for an acrylic called "Symphony."

Obituaries

James Doyle

James Webster Doyle, formerly of Cohasset, died in Fort Myers, Florida, July 1, at the age of 83. He served as superintendent of Cohasset Public Schools for approximately a 10-year period, officially resigning from that position in 1942, when he was recalled to active duty to serve in World War II. He also served his country in the U.S. Army during World War I. He leaves his wife, Florence Bennett (Lincoln) Doyle and a son, Lincoln Webster Doyle, of Medfield.

Funeral services were held Monday at the Cohasset Central Cemetery.

Around Town

The A. J. Antones had their son Richard, his wife Brenda, and children Carol, 9, Jennifer, 4, and Melisa, two and a half, visiting from Warner-Robbins, Georgia during the week of the fourth. Daughter Patty, 23, from California flew in too — to partake of the town's annual July 4th arts show and festivities...not to mention the family's annual tenting expedition to Bassing Beach.

the equipment to find out what went wrong. For the sake of safety Blackdar and his team of volunteer men and women assist the police in these matters throughout the South Shore area. They work on the beach, in the water and on the rescue boat with the efficiency of a SWAT team, with up to eleven divers, if necessary, acting as one body.

As a Marine Corps Reservist he had undergone airbourne training, mountain warfare training and cold weather training. He was waiting for an opening to attend Navy diving school in Groton, Conn.

Yalowchuk worked as a tree surgeon for Carter Tree Service in Milton, and was a 1977 graduate of the Norfolk County Agricultural School in Walpole.

Lots of car companies offer cash rebates. Only Saab gives you one on a car worth owning.

Saab 99.....$750 rebate
Saab GLE, GLi, EMS..$500 rebate
Saab Turbo.....$250 rebate

Make your best deal on any Saab now through July 31, 1980 and you'll be eligible for these cash rebates directly from Saab.

If your purchase of a Saab is being delayed by the state of the economy, you ought to take a look at our rebates.

If your purchase of a Saab is being delayed by skepticism, you ought to take a look at the facts.

Against the clock in separate trials conducted by an independent testing service, the Saab 900 GLE proved faster than the BMW 528i through a 700-foot slalom course.

And stopped faster than the Volvo GLE in 60 to 0 mph braking tests.

And was proven more comfortable than a Mercedes 280E in 24 of 36 separate ways of judging comfort.

While providing more interior room and cargo space than any of them; and, in the case of the Saab 900 GLE 5-speed, getting better gas mileage than all of them.

Equal or better gas mileage, in fact, than 10 Datsuns, 7 Toyotas, 2 VWs and one Subaru: EPA estimated mpg, 33 estimated highway mpg. (Remember, of course, to use estimated mpg for comparison only, because mileage varies with speed, trip length and weather. Your actual highway mileage will probably be less.)

Feola retirement date still unclear

By Tanna Kasperowicz

Will friends hold a birthday party for Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr. on July 28 — his birthday and the date on which Civil Service states he must retire from his position? Will they hold a retirement party? Or will the town be required to hire special counsel to explore the many questions surrounding his pending retirement in the courts?

Feola has told some people, confidentially, that he's still checking out the statute with regard to retirement.

In a day and age when a 70-year old man could well become the country's chief executive officer, when a man "six dozen" years old is chairman of the board of selectmen . . . when Federal law has stipulated that administrative department heads at the Federal level need not retire until the age of 70 . . the possibility of Feola's claiming the position for five more years may not be so far-fetched.

According to Feola, he has never officially told selectmen he would retire when he is 65. A year ago he did remind selectmen that he would be reaching retirement age this year. Selectmen took that letter as tantamount to a letter of retirement.

Although Feola, as of early this week, had decided on no course of action . . . he has talked to various members of the press about his situation and has made an inquiry to the Attorney General's office on the same.

In 1952 under Article #43 of a town meeting warrant, Cohasset residents voted in favor of optional provisions regarding pensions for policemen and firemen reaching the age of retirement. However, under a grandfather clause, none of the following applies to the chief:

The town voted that any permanent member of police or fire departments on attaining the age of 65, shall without request on his part, remain in service after having attained the age of 65.

Two years ago the town voted to take the police chief out of Civil Service upon the retirement of Feola. Over the past several months a citizens' screening committee narrowed a large field of candidates for police chief down to three men, one of which withdrew his name from consideration last week (Wenham Police Chief Edward Haraden).

Clock tocks again...

Noel Ripley, President of the Cohasset Historical Commission, personally replaces the hands and numbers of the face of the 1865 clock in the Unitarian Church, bringing the Commission's three year refurbishing project to completion.

Greg Wall, of the Wooden Nickel, made the new aluminum hands and brass numbers, coated in gold leaf for beauty and preservation. Ripley says that Wall "went above and beyond the call of duty" in his work. Ripley, apparently, is not a man to be outdone in working above the call, too!

Mechanical and electrical work was completed last year with help from Ripley, a clock maker and restorer by trade, and the South Shore Vocational Technical High School. The clock is now in such good shape, says Ripley, that it can go for two to three months without adjustment. He winds it weekly, as faithfully as its hourly chime.

The historic commission's next project, a memorial walk around the perimeter of the harbor, also got a boost from Ripley. He donated the last $100 of the clock project funds to help begin the late Francis Hagerty's idea to "love the harbor as much as the common."

Town dump plagued by cone-shaped junk

By Bernie Quigley

Arthur Clark, chairman of the board of selectmen, raised his hands in a circle above his head. "It keeps going up there like a haystack," he said. Jim Tyeryar of the dump study committee had raised his hands in the same way at the board of health three weeks before and described it as an "ice cream cone."

The "ice cream cone" came up a few times and hands went up in a circle when anyone tried to describe to someone else where the junk was going in the town dump. "It keeps going up in the air," said Arthur Clark, and up went the hands again.

On July 14, the board of health, the board of selectmen and the dump study committee held a joint meeting and raised their hands in despair trying to figure out what to do with the town's refuse. "Something has to happen within a week or two," said Skinny Laugelle, dump manager. "I have to have somewhere to put the rubbish."

The only place to put it now is on top of the existing heap. The rest of the dump creates pollution and has been cited by William St. Hilaire of the Department of Environmental Quality Engineering.

At the end of the meeting the group decided to send out to five engineering firms to bid for new proposals for hydrological studies, to end their relationship with the Sanitary Engineers Associates, and to send a joint letter to St. Hilaire. The letter will indicate that the town is acting in good faith, and ask that the DEQE allow a waiver to dump in the immediate future. If that doesn't work they will write to the Commissioner of the DEQE.

No one knows for sure the nature of the DEQE's complaint. Skinny Laugelle thinks St. Hilaire just has it in for Cohasset. John Ridge of the dump committee says there is a personality conflict between St. Hilaire and the representative of SEA.

Board of Health Chairman Marilyn Sweeney says the Governor wants dumps to be privately run, and is determined to shut down publicly owned dumps.

Arthur Clark says we are now alone; only one town in 73 has so far met the tough requirements of the DEQE.

In June, 1977, the town paid $14,000 to the SEA for a report that was not accepted by the DEQE. The contract with SEA is up and "we are back to square one," said Ridge.

The town still needs underground hydrological

Cohasset's Week

Variance sought

At the Board of Health meeting on July 14, Lawrence Mitchell, 271 N. Main St., was granted a variance of the 50 ft. setback ruling to two abutters, but denied the variance to a third. Mitchell was also requested by the board to build a six foot stockade fence between his property and his next door neighbor, Brad Pierce, and to erect a de-bugging light to their specifications.

Appointments

Eight residents were appointed to one of the five town boards at a recent meeting of Moderator David Place, Selectman Arthur Clark and Mrs. Daniel Cotton, chairman of the Advisory Board.

The appointments include:

— Terrance White of Jerusalem Road, to a three-year term on the Advisory Committee.

— Robert Appleyard of Resevoir Road, to a three-year term on the Drainage Advisory Committee.

— Thomas Atkinson of Highland Avenue and Mary Gainor of Sohair Street, to three-year terms on the Committee to Study Town Government Structure.

— Mrs. Bruce McLean of Elm Street, to a one-year term on the Design Review Board, succeeding Laurence Fone Jr., who resigned.

— Barbara Power of Beach Street, Edmund Steimle of Woodway and Richard Tibbetts Jr. of Howard Gleason Road, to three, two and one-year terms respectively on the Capital Budget Committee.

Tennis court

The board of appeals is still out on the question of Lowry and Diana Bell's tennis court. They are trying to decide if a tennis court is a structure or not, and if it is subject to the town's by-laws.

The Bells, 90 Gammons Road, brought their case to the board on July 8, when several abutters showed up to protest. Michael Keating, attorney for the abutters, argued that a tennis court had to be built to building regulations, with side setbacks of 20 feet, rear setbacks of 30 feet, and 30 foot frontage.

Charles Humphreys, attorney for the Bells said it may be six feet from the side and rear property lines if it is less than 15 feet tall.

Keating also asked the board to reject a building permit issued earlier to build a 36 by 78 foot tennis court with no fence. Both matters were taken under advisement.

Doyle remembered

The flag that draped the coffin of Jimmie Doyle, former School Superintendent of Cohasset will be flown from the flagpole in the Town Common at the request of his widow.

Henry Ainslie remembered Doyle at the Selectmen's meeting on July 9 as an important figure to him and to the town, whom he held in deep regard.

Murray request

State Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray has asked the Cohasset Selectmen to meet with the Selectmen of Hingham, Hull and Scituate to discuss the noise pollution, plane levels and number of airplanes over the South Shore area.

In a letter to the Selectmen, Rep. Murray said she has been in contact with the FAA for over a year regarding air noise pollution. She said she suggested to the FAA that they rotate routes so that we would only have aircraft flying overhead one or two days a week.

"The FAA feels we do not have numbers enough for so-called political clout," said Rep. Murray, "with four towns banding together, we could effect some changes for the better for our citizens."

License approved

Carol Rhilenger, 244 Cedar St., has had an application approved by the Board of Selectmen for a wine and malt license. Mrs. Rhilenger will open a new wine and cheese shop on September 1 at Cushing Plaza.

The location was previously held by the Wine and Cheese Importers who left in a huff. The Alcoholic Beverage Commission must first revoke the old license issued to Richard Daly before they approve the new application.

Nazarenes bid farewell to Pope Memorial

The 6 p.m. Sunday service of the Nazarenes was their farewell worship in The Pope Memorial Churchwhich has beentheir home for the past year. Reverend Scott Newell led the group of thirty in song and prayer. They sang "He Keeps Me Singing....as I go" to get in the spirit of moving their seven pews, piano, hymnbooks and a few other odds and ends to the Nantasket Library. The move only took a half hour.

Their committment to their church is strong and Rev. Newell asked in prayer that wherever they worship, whether it be in the library or in another building, that "God help us better serve our fellow man."

The Cohasset Community Church of the Nazarenes was evicted from the Pope Memorial Church on Jerusalem Road by the Methodists, who occupied the church before them last year. The Methodists signed a purchase and sale agreement in the spring with the South Shore Hellenic Church and Cultural Association.

The Nazarenes plan to legally question the right of the Methodists to evict them.

The church was built in memory of Colonel and Mrs. Albert Pope's son who died at the age of 17. Rev. Newell claims the spirit of the original charge given to the church's trustees has been violated by the Methodists. The Popes sold the building for $1.00 to the trustees and asked that it be maintained for Protestant worship for the people of North Cohasset. The only other stipulation, explains Newell, "was to maintain the name of The Pope Memorial Church."

For the first twenty years it was used primarily by a Unitarian group and was eventually passed along to the Methodists in the same manner, for $1.00. Newell feels "the same procedure ought to be followed for our group."

It is the precedent of Protestant worship and also of passing the deed to the building along for $1.00 that the Nazarenes feel are being violated by the Methodists. Whether or not they have a legal right to the church under the original Pope family charge, remains to be resolved.

"We knew when we moved in that it might not be permanent," says Nellie Weiss, but she, like the others, is sorry to leave.

During the Sunday servcice Rev. Newell prayed, "We've been happy worshiping here....if it is your will for us to come back, then let it be so..." and the small band of Nazarenes quietly, but not sorrowfully, replied "Amen...Amen."

Cohasset sculptors at the Copley

The works of Cohasset sculptors Dennis Kowal, Michael McNabb and Richardson White, who will be represented by the David Sharpe Gallery, will be on exhibit at the Second International Sculpture Fair in Boston, August 8-10 in the Copley Plaza Hotel.

From the private, business and institutional world of art, patrons will gather to buy, commission, discover and meet the 100 distinguished sculptors from the United States, Canada and from three continents who will display over 1000 pieces of original sculpture in a unique show and sell exhibit, representing various media, size and form.

Galleries, curators, architects, designers and agents may send their letterhead for complimentary admissions.

Feola retirement

Selectmen are aware that the chief might attempt to put a cog in the wheel . . . but at this late date it appears they are waiting, like the rest of the town, to see what if any action Feola will take July 28 through August 1. It might also explain selectmen's lengthy delay in choosing Feola's successor.

The Norfolk County Retirement Association has assured selectmen there's no question that Feola has to retire at age 65. However, at least one state house official allegedly told Feola it appears from all legal writings on the subject, that he doesn't have to retire.

Legally, Feola may or may not have a leg to stand on. Some of his friends say he's definitely interested in staying on the job, others feel he's just jabbing the selectmen.

However, his apparent interest in the matter, and veiled threat of possible action on his part to retain the job — could have the effect of scaring off the two finalists for the job: Pittsfield Captain Stanley Stankiewicz and Brockton Police Sergeant John DeBassio.

In the meantime, Cohasset Police Lieutenant Charles Stockbridge can't make vacation plans for August until he knows what's happening with the pending retirement, and appointment.

Right now only the chief knows what he may or may not do.

More All Stars

It has been brought to our attention that the names of Kevin Dunn, Mike Teintile and Sean Corkery were missing from the 12-Yr. old Little League All-Star listing last week.

Corkery, a left-handed pitcher, was named to both the 10 and 12-Yr. old team.

Selectmen in softball challenge

Scituate Selectmen have challenged Cohasset Selectmen to a series of softball games to benefit the Jimmy Fund. Tentative dates are July 22, August 3 and August 10. The teams will include men and women elected officials or appointees, heads of departments or supervisors, said Jack Worley of the recreation department. Henry Ainslie of the Cohasset Selectmen says they intend to win this one.

Around Town t'ain't gossip

Commentary

By Karin Bartow

The Cohasset Police Report is probably the best read column in the Mariner. Not probably, it is. Next to it, Around Town holds second place. You might say they balance each other. The Police Report chronicles the seedier, more belligerent acts of our citizenry; Around Town crows about good deeds and accomplishments.

Since we feel Around Town is an important part of the paper (it's a whole lot of small feature stories), it smarts when we hear someone refer to it as a "gossip" column. It's happened a few times and while we don't want to appear to overreact, it's time to respond.

Gossip can mean "light familar talk or writing," according to Webster, but it rarely has that positive connotation. To most of us, gossip means small, idle talk, rumoring if you like, about people's private affairs. Around Town has never gossiped.

There have been a few occasions when we've exaggerated slightly for the sake of humor. Otherwise, we have offered news — people news — in light, familar writing style, but news.

Every effort is made to talk to the star of the story; we may have to settle for a parent, a sibling or a spouse, but with very few exceptions, a phone call is made. That way we are more accurate and we get a better story because you give us more information about yourself, your little prodigies or interesting little facets about your family.

We are only interested in the people who live here. If you've been far away on a business or pleasure trip, we want to hear about it, but we're ruthless when it comes to someone else who isn't connected with Cohasset. We're pretty snobby that way, but only for your sake. You can read the Globe, the New York Times, or even the local competition to find outside of Cohasset people news.

The array of events that are reported in Around Town is impressive. About the only thing you can't do in Around Town is die.

We have welcomed people to town, said farewell; announced births, birthdays, anniversaries, promotions, new jobs, awards, citations, appointments; shared vacations, parties, good fortunes; wished people get well; told you about their careers, studies, philanthropies, businesses, hobbies, talents; we have talked about hostages and refugees, inflation, overeating; we've sometimes been silly, always sincere.

Your news is welcome and will always get printed, as long as it's not gossip!

The retirement

Today's front page may just be another clipping for Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr. to add to his news portfolio. His friends may chuckle, selectmen-haters will blame selectmen for having not securely tied-down Feola's retirement. Feola will blame the Mariner for having violated his confidence . . . a confidence he has himself violated all over town.

For the past six months Feola has been suggesting he might not retire. When he first began talking in that vein he got a chuckle from most of us. We thought it was just Randy provoking "the mice" (Feola's term of endearment for the selectmen). However, at this late date, his statements have the effect of holding the town, the townspeople and the candidates for the position of Cohasset Police Chief hostage.

If Feola can legally stay on the job for another five years, outside of Civil Service, then of course that's his legal right. The fact that he stood and watched the town go through an expensive interviewing process for his replacement . . . saw the screening committee narrow down the choices to three candidates . . . has no bearing on his legal rights, whatever they are.

But if this is just another Feola joke . . . then we feel the joke has begun to wear thin. Nobody's laughing anymore, Chief.

On selling wood

To the Editor:

We are writing to inform you about a recently amended Massachusetts law which governs the advertising and sale of firewood and cordwood. We enclose of copy of this statute, G. L. c.94, sec. 298, for your reference.

This law requires that the volume of wood being advertised and sold be described only in terms of cubic feet or cubic meters. Since September, 1979 terms such as "cord, face cords, pile, truckload and terms of similar import" are prohibited. Use of such terms in advertisements or otherwise in the sale of wood constitutes a violation of c.94 as well as the Consumer Protection Act, G.L. c.93A.

This office has commenced 15 legal actions since September to enforce the laws relative to the sale of wood to consumers. We will continue to enforce these laws to insure compliance and fair dealing for consumers.

Sincerely,
Donna Sorgi

The county dividing line

By Gilbert Tower

If you look at a map of the town of Cohasset you will see a heavy black line running through the middle of Cohasset Harbor, dividing the harbor into two parts of almost equal area. The esterly area on the left towards the Cox estate belongs to Cohasset and the easterly area on the right towards Bassing Beach is Scituate.

If you have never before been aware that half of Cohasset Harbor is in Scituate and is under Scituate jurisdiction you may be shocked to learn that to be a fact.

The situation dates from about 1640 to 1645 approximately. At that time early settlers needed to raise cattle and the salt hay in the back of Bassing Beach satisfied the young cattle. A controversy developed between the Plymouth colony and that of Massachusetts Bay. Committees had to decide upon a line of division. Bound Brook and Cohasset Harbor provided a convenient dividing line. The whole matter is related in Bigelow's Narrative History of Cohasset.

For years there was no complaint about the dividing line until Cohasset Harbor became filled with yachts and fishing boats. They required moorings under the jurisdiction of a harbor master and boatowners pay for those moorings on the Cohasset side of the dividing line and the town of Scituate presumably received X dollars upto 1979 for moorings on the Scituate side. However the Cohasset harbormaster has to supervise all the moorings.

Of course the situation does not look right to Cohasset. If Cohasset were to control half of Scituate Harbor, that would not look right to Scituate. However, it is natural that the Scituate selectmen should oppose relinquishing the town income from moorings in Cohasset Harbor. The dividing line is not only between two towns but also between Norfolk County and Plymouth County.

It has just been learned that the legislature enacted a new law relating to property taxes on yachts and boats. The new law is General Law Chaper 60B entitled Excise on Boats, Ships and Vessels in liew of Local Property Tax.

It is unusual that the water area of what we think as Cohasset Harbor is actually divided between two towns. The new law does not specify which town is meant. When referring to yachts and boats habitually moored or docked in that part of Cohasset Harbor which is the town of Scituate, the law probably means the Scituate tax collector and the Scituate assessors. To quote the law, General Law 60B Section (i)..."All sums received from the excise imposed under this chapter shall be paid into the treasury of...the town, and fifty percent of said excise shall be credited to the municipal waterways improvement and maintenance fund established under the provisions of clause (72) of section five of chapter forty."

It appears that the town of Scituate receives 50 % of the excise tax, or property tax, on yachts and boats habitually moored in Cohasset Habor on the easterly side towards Bassing Beach.

However, it is natural that the Scituate selectmen should oppose relinquishing the town income from moorings in Cohasset Harbor. The dividing line is not only between two towns but also between Norfolk County and Plymouth County as said before.

The question now is how to go about correcting this wrong situation. If a Scituate town meeting should vote willingness to relinquish the town's ownership of about half of Cohasset Harbor it is probable that the Commissioners of Norfolk County would ask the state of Massachusetts to change the county line.

If a Cohasset town meeting should vote to indemnify Scituate for its loss of income that might be an answer, although unlikely.

Many Cohasset people have friends in Scituate. It has been suggested by the writer that every Cohasset resident having a friend in Scituate discuss the situation with him and appeal to a sense of fairness on the part of Scituate.

As the writer sees the situation it is simply not right for Scituate to control part of Cohasset's harbor. If we should talk about it enough perhaps we could induce Scituate to see it that way. Is there anyone who can suggest a better solution to the problem?

Little league & the ice cream truck

To the Editor:

The July 3, 1980 issue of the Cohasset Mariner contained an article which was read by me and many other people in Cohasset concerned and involved with our Cohasset youth, with amazement. We all hope that the article headlined "Ice Cream Truck" is an example of the Mariner's incorrect reporting rather than a factual reflection of the concerns and comments of our elected selectmen.

The facts are that this year's administration of the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association inherited a $5,000 deficit. We are trying to pay off this debt, meet this year's expenses, and keep the price of youth atheltics within the means of every one of the 800 involved Cohasset families.

The mentioned Little League concession stand, renovated, opened and run by concerned volunteers, plays an important role in our finances. In May we applied for a common victualler's license, filled out the proper papers, and filed them with the Cohasset authorities.

I am not as much amazed that the Mariner's reporting staff failed to look into the facts, specifically if indeed the Cohasset Youth Athletic

(turn to page 5)

The ice cream truck

Association filed for a victualler's license, as I am amazed that our elected selectmen expressed concern without checking into the facts of this matter.

Furthermore, we are deeply concerned about our elected selectmen's reported directions of local values. The ice cream truck companies and individual operators have not made financial contributions to the Sandy Beach Association or the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association or even attempted to clean up the litter and mess they leave behind.

I would like to take this opportunity to point out that it might be a national decadent trend to favor out-of-town companies, profits for individuals, littered beaches, dirty ballparks and boys on girls' softball teams; but somehow, we have faith in our locally elected Cohasset selectmen to continue the values of youths, clean beaches, Little League baseball, motherhood and apple pie.

Uve F. Hublitz, M.D.
President, Cohasset Youth Athletic Association
(Copies of this letter were sent to: the Cohasset Mariner, Patriot Ledger, Mary Jeanette Murray, Sandy Beach Assoc., Log and Line, Pat's Barber Shop.

Ice cream response

Dear Mr. Dr. Hublitz:

Under Town Bylaws selectmen are responsible for issuing common victualer licenses. They have not, to their knowledge, issued one to the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association for the concession stand at The Little League field. Neither, to your knowledge, have you received a common victualer license.

The ice cream truck in question does have a common victualer license. The two local young men who lease that ice cream truck are raising money for their college tuition. They may or may not have contributed to the Sandy Beach Association. But adults do not usually expect students to make charitable contributions.

Ice cream men Lance Norris and Bob Gunville have, over the past two weeks, performed in the Cohasset Dramatic Club's production of Godspell at the Town Hall. They received no pay for this effort. They delighted the entire community.

Something else. When they recently had a problem regarding where they could and could not sell ice cream they immediately made an appointment with the selectmen to discuss the matter. When the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association was unable for whatever reason to receive a common victualer license, it opened anyway.

In addition, Gunville and Norris don't sell litter. They sell ice cream. Packaging becomes litter when beach-goers do not use Rotary-donated receptacles at the beach. While Gunville and Norris do not follow their customers on the beach to pick up that ice cream packaging, neither have we noticed Schlitz or Miller or package store owners picking up bottles at Sandy Beach.

Gunville and Norris are Cohasset businessmen. They lease an ice cream truck. Similarly, most merchants in town lease their shops.

If the selectmen outlawed litter-producing businesses, there would be no Cohasset merchants. The same federal law which allows boys to play on girls' softball teams, allows girls to play Little League baseball.

The only error selectmen made several weeks ago was in the assumption that you had never applied for a common victualer license.

Regarding our having not checked out the facts...if we attempted to document every statement every public official made during every week...it would take us 10,000 years to produce one issue of the Mariner. At the time, we didn't feel the issue merited any great research.

We still don't.

Yours in Little League,
Tanna Kasperowicz

☐Elisa Fulciniti has surely grown beyond her birth weight of 8 lbs. 10 ozs. since her arrival on May 9th! Sorry it's taken us so long to catch up with her parent's happy news. They are Mario and Maria Fulciniti of Hull Street; Antonio and Giovanna Marcella and Domenico and Maria Fulciniti are grandparents. Elisa also has six grandparents: Mr. and Mrs. Pasquale Barbuto, Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Marcella and Mr. and Mrs. Agazio Colacelli!

☐Barry and Margaret Tufts of Jerusalem Road became the parents of their first child, Kelly Margaret Tufts, at 7:10 p.m. and July 2 at South Shore Hospital. She weighed 8 lbs. 6 ozs.

Her grandparents are William and Nancy Signorelli of Cohasset (Granddad is Cohasset's Town Accountant) and Mrs. Marjorie Tufts of Hingham. Mrs. Ann Signorelli, also of Cohasset, is great grandmother.

☐The Young clan of Hammond Avenue is beaming over their newest member, second son and 10th child for Wally and Maureen — John Paul Dmitri — born on June 27 at South Shore Hospital. He has a brother, Wally Joe, 18, and eight sisters: Ann Marie, 17, Kathy, 16, Diane, 23, Jennifer, 10, Susan, 9, Maura, 8, Amy, 5, and Meghan, 2.

The Youngs named John after Wally's brother, John, Pope John Paul II and a friend of the family's, the late Dmitri Boyette, former Houston Oiler football player.

Grandparents are Floyd and Frances Young of Hingham and Lestler Stuart of Malden. Wally has his own packaging business and says the family raises a few chickens and grows its own vegetables.

☐Sue and Jack McNamara moved here a month ago from Chicago, Illinois with Mike, 11, Mary Beth, 10, Katie, 7, and Megan, 2.

Arthur Clark's outdoor air-conditioning machine.
[Derr photo]

Although they are not strangers to the East, Sue attended Newton College and Jack, Boston College, the South Shore is new territory for them. We're very happy to welcome them to town!

☐The June 25 Deer Hill graduation story mentioned two special award recipients, Virginia Nussdorfer and Kristaan Hublitz. We felt they deserved more exposure.

Each year Deer Hill teachers choose a boy and a girl as the most all-around in three areas: athletics, scholastics and citizenship and present them an award in that name. Barbara Conte, school secretary, designed the placques in calligraphy.

"Ginni" Nussdorfer, 12, was involved in many school activities during her three years at Deer Hill. She has been a serious piano student for six years and is continuing her lessons at the South Shore Conservatory over the summer. She was a member of the chorus, played soccer and is looking forward to junior high.

"Kris" Hublitz, 12, is very interested in sports. He plays ice hockey during the winter with the Sea Hawk Team and is presently playing on the 12 year old All-Star Little League Team. He also sails at the Cohasset Yacht Club (he is one of the youngest members to be working on the Admiral's flag) and is interested in stamp collecting. He was part of the PET (Pupil Enrichment Program) at Deer Hill and will be attending Milton Academy in the fall.

Congratulations to both of them!

☐More graduation news:

Matthew Robert Delaney, Beechwood Street, and Michael Joseph Walls of Fair Oaks Lane, both received a bachelor of science degree in business administration marketing from Bryant College in Smithfield, Rhode Island.

Patrick Farren received a bachelor's degree in biiology from Assumption College, Worcester.

Catherine McArthur was graduated with a bachelor of science degree in dental hygiene from the University of Rhode Island; she is a member of the staff of Dr. John Messina of Norwell.

☐John Linsley was indulging himself in a new timepiece last Saturday and, why shouldn't he on his birthday? Many happy returns, John!

If you should see Tanna K. around town this week, don't talk to her — she's on vacation this week.

Legionaires topple Independents in benefit

By Bernie Quigley

The Independents played in their best form against the American Legion Post 118 of Cohasset on June 12, in a benefit softball game for the Jimmy Fund.

But with Gold Star Mothers Flossie Cogill and Shirley Laidlaw playing the field, they just couldn't get anything out there. By the end of the afternoon the official score was Legionaires 19, Independents five.

Mary Grassie hit a single that knocked in one run in the sixth inning, and that really took the fighting spirit out of the Independents.

The Legionaires, who played without errors or cardiac arrest, balanced the difference in age between themselves and the Independents by putting in Danny Cuddify, 7, who immediately batted a single out past the first baseman.

But the undefeated 1979 champions of the Scituate Men's Softball League were further disheartened when Kevin Mulcahy, came in in the seventh and drove in a few more runs for the Legionaires. Sports experts and handicappers had been speculating that Kevin might not yet be at peak form at the plate, since he is smaller than the bat, but he proved their predictions wrong.

Next time up Kevin's ego must have deflated a bit when his mother tagged him out at first.

Leo Kurtz wore a tee shirt that read, "I may be old, but I'm still swinging," and that said it all for the Legionaires. Many of the Independents actually took to the field without gloves after the Legionaires' first powerful innings, but then it's hard to hold a beer can in a baseball glove.

The final score could be debatable, as the Legionaires were keeping score and more people crossed home plate than were on both teams together, but it was acknowledged all around that Dean Williams pitched three shutout innings and went five for five at the plate.

"Leo Kurtz only pitched a third of an inning because he was hit so hard," said Bernie Mulcahy, spokesman for the Legionaires, indicating that next year with Leo in even better form the Legionaires should win by a bigger margin.

By the end of the afternoon the Legionaires, who partially sponsor the Independents in the Scituate Men's Softball League, had raised $200 for the Jimmy Fund at the gathering which featured hot dogs and beer for all.

The Osgood School gets a library

Quietly, steadily, gradually there is a classroom in the Osgood School that is being transformed from ordinary to spectacular. It is going to be a library.

There hasn't been a permanent one since the school was built in 1927, but what's being launched for the opening of school in September is going to be worth the 53 year wait!

All books will be removed from the circulating carts that have carried them from classroom to classroom over the years. They are being dusted off, catalogued and will move soon to stationary shelves.

The metamorphosis in the Ripley Road/Sohier Street corner room is taking place because of the reduced number of students in the school and because of the dedication to a library by staff and parents.

Ronna Bingham, who tends to the high school library, has taken Osgood's under her wing. She is coordinating the whole project, from obtaining materials and funds for paint and paneling to ordering new books, even to pitching in with the painting.

Pat Plante, industrial arts teacher, constructed a beautiful three-piece circulation desk, and with Don Ainslie's help, is working on eight bookcases and other storage pieces.

Liz Glasfeld, a professional librarian who gives a great deal of her time, voluntarily, to the Paul Pratt and other school libraries, is organizing the books. "I always said I'd help out when Osgood got its own library, so here I am." she explains. Kathy Haase has been helping her, as well as three students working under the CETA program, Ron Bergenheim and John and James Burke. The three have also been rennovating the room and assisting in any needed way on the project.

She moved to Cohasset five years ago after living most of her life in Fall River where she was born.She is survived by her husband, Thomas F. Meagher; two daughters, Kathleen McPhee of Scituate and Maureen Souza of Orlando; and five grandchildren.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in Florida.

Edward Davis

Edward W. Davis, Jr., a retired electrician, died at his home on July 8 at the age of 62.

Born in Worcester, he was the son of Mrs. Hazel M. (MacLellan) Davis of Hopkinton and the late Edward W. Davis Sr. He had lived in Hopkinton and Weymouth before moving to Cohasset 34 years ago.

He attended Northeastern University and received training at the Boston Navy Yard; he was also a member of the International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Boston.

He is survived by his wife, Mary T. (Cronin) Davis; five sons, Paul J. Davis of Craftsbury, Vermont, Thomas D. Davis of Evanston, Illinois, Mark E. Davis of Cohasset, Daniel Davis of Chicago and Donald Davis of Cohasset, and two daughters, Mary Ann Davis of South Boston and Catherine E. Davis of Cohasset. He was also the father of the late Edward W. Davis III. Also surviving are two brothers and six sisters.

A funeral Mass was celebrated in St. Anthony's Church and burial was in Cohasset Central Cemetery.

The homeleaving

By Lois Martin

It is done and we've lived through it. Our first pink slip as parents. One gone, really gone, all the way to California...to work, to stay, to live, not to come home with dirty clothes now and then.

His father has survived it well, better than the female counterpart in that there's been no visible personal ambiguity or anguish at having been fired. Of his brothers, one went away to work for the summer, a lesser insult, another's still home, rejoicing with open audacity at having everything to himself, including the parents, shamelessly happy as an only child.

PATCHES

And I, having felt lost at being less of a mother because of the dismissal, have worked through an astounding maze of human emotions, frailities all of them, many embarrassing, all surprising.

I had no idea I'd be so silly about his leaving, take it so personally. And what nonsense these conflicting feelings. On one hand I couldn't wait to have him gone. And on the other I couldn't stand the thought of his going.

It's symbolic, I guess. On the surface, at least, that's all it seems to be. For years you work together to get them grown and then they have done it and they long to leave the nest and you urge them to do so. But while it's all right and proper and natural, it all feels dreadful to a mother who took it for granted she'd always be just that.

Oh, it was an amusing month, between his graduation and his moving. He was to go out to a big company, a young man heading west, the typical eager new Californian. He began packing. I'd stashed dishes he could take. He also got old chairs, a table, his bed and he would have had the new ice bucket and thermos if I hadn't retrieved them from the cardboard box. The company would move him so he could apparently take a lot with him.

He seemed disorganized and that annoyed me. A lot of other things did too. And he was annoyed, by me I'm sure and by his other parent now and then as we filled the remaining days with all the warnings, reminders, helpful hints for living we could think of. Don't get in debt; buy only what you can afford; be careful about a roommate; eat plenty of fresh fruits and vegetables; get a few more short-sleeved shirts for work.

I sneezed one morning and reached for the Kleenex. They'd been packed, headed for California. So I began to possessively and suspiciously check my belongings to see if anything would be left. One son, the summer worker, took the food. The other, the person moving out, leaving a pink slip and no forwarding address yet, took allocated furniture. I never dreamed anything I had would ever get to California, especially my son.

The moving vans, two of them though I don't know why, came on a Tuesday, a busy day, when the mover wasn't home. They packed a lot and the boy's father and I sat on remaining furniture and looked at one another. I had a feeling I should keep my feet up...no telling what else was going but I'd keep an eye on the other parent.

We were anxious, fractious now and then, all of us wanting to make the final days pleasant yet none of us ever getting too far from the importance of the time. And when the big day came I planned carefully for no waiting-together-time at Logan...couldn't take that. Small talk has its place. We'd talked all we could. We parted, all of us glad to delete extra moments of strained goodbyes. We all knew we wished one another the best and that there'd be some missing on both sides...but it was understood "Everything'll be wonderful."

And that afternoon it felt wonderful. He was headed for a brave new venture, exciting. And so long as I didn't think what it meant, I was thrilled for him. We, the few remaining family members, headed directly from the airport to a huge pancake breakfast. And then we went home to paint the ceiling of the room which had been emptied and abandoned. We refilled the room with other furniture. It was important to shift everything, because now everything was different. His leaving changed everything.

That next week was a puzzlement. How can you be proud of a child, thrilled with his prospects, delighted to have him get settled, and absolutely miserable about all of it.

Even though others are still not grown and gone, I got the message. They plan to leave, not just for school, but forever.

The significance came home. I could be unemployed. It's all I've ever known, being a mother. Yes, I've been and seemed to be other things but I've never been so much as I've been a mother.

I've been a mother when I was deep asleep, under anesthetic even. I've been a mother when I was most happy and when I was most despairing. It is my way of life, my lifeblood. Without motherhood, I could be a foreigner in a strange land. I'd have to learn another lifestyle without the language of children. If my existance has been a concerto, the motherhood has been the theme, the harmony of any solo work I've done.

I was poured into this motherhood body at 21. If I get out of it at 43 what do I look like and what do I do now? So ran the muse. And then I'd remember I hadn't been deserted, others still were growing, eating the neverfail chocolate cake. Sometimes in desperation to adjust at the first pink slip, you presume they've all said they were finished with your services.

I had discovered during the packing month, I'd have small moments of goodness when I wanted the mover to have everything. Then I'd have the other kind when I'd figure if that was his attitude, if he intended to leave, well, he could just forget it and leave my stuff alone! Lack of rationale I've decided, is part of the reaction to graduation from motherhood.

People said wasn't it nice he could go out there. And, my goodness, wasn't he nearly the age to marry. I could plan to be a grandmother, they quipped. And I blanched. What kind of girls do they bring home from California. Do I have a Las Vegas showgirl to look forward to, sitting at my kitchen table, watching me make bread. I'm not sure she could learn to make bread and I'm not sure I can adapt to being a mother-in-law, let alone to a showgirl.

But I borrow trouble, don't I? Mothers do that. The boy doesn't even have a permanent apartment yet, let alone a permanent woman. Besides I have faith in his choice and my adaptability.

In fact much of my spirit was revived the following week. He was safely there and communication was established often. My sister and family had verified his existence.

He liked his job; he had temporary quarters; he missed his brother. What more could a Mother ask?

Still I'm scrambling. I'm thinking about the words to "The Rose," you know, bawdy Bette Midler's song..."Just remember in the winter, far beneath the bitter snows...lies a seed that with the sun's love, in the spring becomes the Rose..."

There are seeds yet for all of us at any age. Who knows what we'll become with the sun's love in the spring. I know what I've become with the son's love.

But there will come a time all the Adidas tee shirts will have been moved out of the house along with opened boxes of Kleenex. I'll have to admit to being Cycle 3 and I want to view it as being a bright new adventure.

I admire fathers. They don't have the complexity of emotion. They have a simplistic reaction, sad at the parting, yet openly proud of the parter. Mothers have the problem of cursing the one who's leaving us while telling him to go.

But we get over it. I'm getting better. Pretty soon I'll be able to tell jokes about young men in California. But not yet. For a while I was wondering if there was life after children. I believe there is. And it'll be what ever we make it I guess, just like motherhood.

The deed of separation, the pink slip, is better done than anticipated. And now I view graduate mothers with a fresh respect. I know what it took for them to attend the "ceremonies" of separation.

And one thing that really brought me out of my sentimental, nostalgia soaked reverie was the thought of his moving home to stay. No way. We'll look forward to visiting him instead. Meanwhile, for insurance, I'll plant a rose bush out back.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

After the Fourth, it always seems as though July just whizzes by and "summer has a date elsewhere ere long." As the idyllic days multiply, we want to enjoy all the summer food we can, such as gelatine dishes, cold soups, salads and fruits. Fruit cocktail garnished with a few sprigs of mint from the garden, little new potatoes served with a dollop of sour cream, a dash of chopped, fresh dill in your potato salad and cool cucumbers just off the vine, are taste treats all. Ruth Tucker's welcome dish is

COLD CUCUMBER SOUP

1 medium onion, sliced thin
1 T butter or margarine
2 8" cucumbers, peeled and sliced thin
3 c. chicken broth, [or 4 chicken bouillon cubes dissolved in 3 c. hot water]
3 T farina
1 T wine vinegar
1/2 tsp. dill
1 c. sour cream or yogurt
Salt and pepper to taste

Cook onions in butter; add cucumbers, broth, farina, vinegar and dill. Cook for 20 min. Let cool and put in a blender. Add sour cream or yogurt to the blended mixture and add seasonings. Refrigerate and serve cold.

I wonder if anyone ever lolls in a hammock any more, or did they go out of fashion along with men's straw boaters and women's rubber swimming shoes? These days, most of us stretch out in a chaise by the pool and between dips, try to concentrate on finishing that heavy, dull book that was set aside last winter. The book that I've been enjoying was sent to me by Margaret Ward and is called "The Trinity Church Cookbook" chock full of recipes so good one is almost tempted to desert the cool shade of the backyard oak for the confines of the kitchen and the heat of one's oven. This is but one of over three hundred pages of recipes in this book, now in its second printing. Heidi A. Woodworth is a member of the church whose history stretches back to 1733 when established in Copley Squre. Here is her contribution to the book:

RASPBERRY COFFEE CAKE

1/2 c. butter
1 c. brown sugar
1 egg
1 tsp. vanilla
2 c. flour
1 tsp. baking soda
1/2 tsp. baking powder
1/4 tsp. salt
1 8 oz. carton raspberry yogurt
Powdered sugar

Cream together the butter and brown sugar. Mix in egg and vanilla. Sift together flour, baking soda, baking powder and salt. Add to the butter mixture alternately with the yogurt, beginning and ending with yogurt, mixing well between additions. Pour into 9" tube pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 50 min. Remove from pan and sprinkle with powdered sugar. Serve warm or cold.

* * *

Then, there's another cookbook called "Americana Cookery" by Josephine DiCenso who coaxed 50 politicians to part with their favorite recipes. Included are Sen. Edward Kennedy's beef stroganoff, Maine Gov. Joseph Brannan's coq au vin; New Hampshire Gov. Hugh Gallen's whoopie pies; Kentucky Gov. John Brown Jr.'s Derby pie; Connecticut Gov. Ella Grasso's spicy raisin cake; Wyoming Gov. Ed Herschler's brown elk in beer and, of course, Mass. Gov. Edward King's lobster newburg. For those with simpler tastes and skimpier food budgets, here is Cathy Dauler's

ELEGANT MEATLOAF

2 pds. fairly lean ground meat
2 eggs, slightly beaten
1 c. fresh bread crumbs
1/2 c. tomato juice
1 1/2 T Worcestershire sauce
Chopped onion or chives
Salt and pepper to taste
1 can consomme, undiluted

Mix all together except consomme. Bake at 400 degrees for 1 1/2 hrs. Baste with consomme after top has browned. Cathy says the secret is the consomme and fresh bread crumbs.

Village shop talk

By Larry Fone

The Cohasset Village & Harbor Association recently held its monthly meeting at the Red Lion Inn where it reviewed numerous town projects.

Merchants who wish to be included in the walk/drive map of the village and harbor should let me know by July 14th. Merchants will be charged $25.00. That includes copy designation, map designation and a 1,000 self-mailer maps. Merchants who wish designations and no maps will be charged $10. The artwork is complete and we'll go to press July 15th.

Good news on trees to be planted in the village. The merchant's association is sponsoring three trees and two families in town are sponsoring trees in commemoration of relatives.

The men at the Tree and Park Department are cooperating in this effort and soon we'll have some greenery in the village and harbor areas. Anyone wanting a tree planted can call Gene Price at 383-1117. The cost will be $135 and will include appropriate identification.

More good news . . . the Parkingway #14 has a new tenant, The Tides Inn, near the Greenhouse Restaurant. Open daily, from noon until dusk, the inn features fine occasional pieces by Bombay, super silver serving pieces and other unique giftware at affordable prices. Ellen Morrisey and her dad invite you to see their fine offerings.

Dump plagued

studies. "The drain goes by Rattlesnake Run, which we all know," said Clark, but engineers must put it to the DEQE. Selectman Henry Ainslie said, "I think the SEA owes an explanation to the town of Cohasset." The town will either have to reach into the reserve fund to finance the new studies, or hold a special town meeting to raise the funds.

Mrs. Sweeney questioned the wisdom of spending more money on engineers if, in the end, the DEQE will not approve. She said the board of health may ask for an intensified period of recycling, until the dump crisis is past, but no one knows when that will be. Skinny Laugelle said that the DEQE will not budge at all.

Arts appointments

Selectmen have named three local residents to the Massachusetts Arts Lottery Council: Denise Ripley, 63 Sohier St., Barbara Gurnis, 50 Reservoir Road and Jeanne Armin, 12 Tupelo Road.

The Council was recently created when a new Massachusetts law mandated that the State Lottery Commission conduct a new lottery with a ticket price not less than $5 for the exclusive benefit of the arts.

New flag

Selectman Rocco Laugelle has requested a new flag for Cohasset, claiming at the Selectman's meeting on July 9 that the old flag doesn't fit in the clips. "The time has come to buy a flag that fits the flagpole," said Laugelle, and he recommended that Henry Ainslie pay for it. Ainsley suggested it be put into next year's budget.

vol. II, no. 42 | thursday, july 24, 1980 | 25 cents

Local housing market is alive and thriving

By Tanna Kasperowicz

According to unofficial records, every year approximately 400 families move into and move out of Cohasset.

Candidates for town, state and county election know these figures and can in some years practically pinpoint the areas of any town in which the houses change hands frequently.

But it appears this year (or at least in the past two months) almost anything goes. The rhyme is perhaps, the abnormal, almost threatening-to-stabilize-at 12 or 12.5 per cent prime interest rate. The reason...buy and sell now or who knows when you will?

Through all this challenge and flux, a magnificent constancy of character and purpose is apparent among local realtors, most of whom now avail themselves of various international exchange referral services.

But even without any referral services, there are more than enough customers to satisfy the local market. And houses are moving. Welcome Wagon Lady Pat O'Connor said she's averaging 10 calls a month now. Whereas before that she was averaging four or five calls, mostly rentals. "Houses are definitely moving faster."

In just a two month period, the prime interest rate went from an artificial high of 16 per cent to 12.5 per cent this month, and an expected stabilization of 12 per cent before the end of the month. Although some New York banks are now offering 11 per cent, it's not expected to get that low in Massachusetts.

Wayne Sawchuk of Century 21 said his company is dealing, like most real estate firms, with the transferred executive. "But there are also homes moving within the town again...from water addresses to smaller, inland homes and vice versa."

Sawchuk said, "The executive market continues to be strong...but we still don't have enough listings to satisfy the market. There are very few new homes being built...and almost all new home listings have been sold long ago."

With only 20-25 Cohasset homes on the market, Bob Mullin of Dwyer and Mullin Real Estate stated emphatically that the interest rate has bottomed out. Dwyer and Mullin is getting more than its share of the activity, Mullin said, due to a new program by which the company promises to sell a home within a 90-day period or forfeit its commission. "We're the only realtor in the area bold enough to put this guarantee in writing."

While the bulk of Dwyer and Mullin business is transferred executives, he too sees some in-town activity.

We were unable to reach Jack Conway before press deadline this week, but from accounts of all realtors, Conway topped its sales records just last week in just about every area.

Dean and Hamilton's Realtor Marjorie Dougherty said her firm is getting a lot of wrap-around mortgages and second mortgage business..." "Houses in the $60-$70,000 range are selling like hot potatoes. From Saturday to Monday six of 10 homes we had listed were under agreement. But there's not too much moving up in the community (Cohasset homes sold for Cohasset homes)."

Unlike their realtor peers in California, Marjorie said so far nobody's tried to negotiate a diamond ring or a condo in Florida as a down payment for a home in Cohasset. But she fully expects that in the

Two Cohasset women lost off Cape Cod

The body of 25 year-old Mary C. O'Hayre was discovered next to her family's capsized sailboat 15 miles east of Wellfleet, Monday. Her sister, Elizabeth M. O'Hayre, 32, is missing and presumed drowned.

The Coast Guard began the search for the two women Sunday, nearly 24 hours after the girls were scheduled to have arrived in Provincetown. Shortly after the search began, the women's swamped boat, the "Outrageous" was found floating aimlessly, with only a few feet of the stern above water. The body of Mary O'Hayre was found near the boat. She wore no lifejacket.

Tuesday morning the Coast Guard called off the search for Elizabeth. Officials said they felt there was no chance for survival. Also missing is the family dog, a poodle named Sailor.

The sailboat was towed in by the Coast Guard Cutter "Cape Horn." Officials say they will investigate why the 21-foot vessel capsized. Provincetown officials said the weekend weather on the Cape was hazy with 10 to 20 knot winds and thunderstorms in the area which could have given the sailboat some play. Another official said the two women, considered experienced sailors, could have overshot Provincetown and then turned their vessel into the wind upon realizing their mistake.

A series of mistaken identities was responsible for the Coast Guard having delayed its search for the girls. The women were last heard from Saturday afternoon when a friend contacted them by walkie-talkie. Over the weekend, two other boats were mistakenly reported as being the O'Hayre girls' boat. One boat was similarily named, "The Outrageous."

The women are the daughters of Mr. and Mrs.

Draft registration slow and peaceful

As of early Tuesday morning, ten 19-year-old Cohasset men had signed up for the draft at the Cohasset Post Office.

Somebody's mother, getting a book of stamps at the Ripley Road Post Office said casually to a postal worker. . . "Is it ok if I send Jim in later this week to register? We're going to be away until Thursday."

It was fine.

Nobody's picketing, young men are not lying in the streets protesting . . . the letters to the editor and the news is about development, real estate on the upswing, ice cream trucks and Little League.

Cohasset represented at GOP convention

By Candace Perry
Special to the Mariner

It's the eve of the Republican convention and Polly Logan, Republican National Committeewoman and former Cohasset resident is breathlessly keeping the excitement ticking. The place is at the Mayflower Inn in Plymouth, Michigan, and she is not alone in her attempts.

The entire town is decked out with banners, signs, imported elephants, music, and cannons all blasting the same message: "WELCOME G.O.P.s FROM MASSACHUSETTS". The result is one and the same for everyone — success at its best.

Logan (who's called Polly by everyone) is not the only one at the party with Cohasset roots. Her daughter, Martha, is her right-hand aid in helping with the details. "She keeps me organized," says Polly. "That's why I'm for the E.R.A."

Later, at a George Bush party, Martha says that she is only getting a few hours sleep each night. She looks exhausted, but there is a feeling of accomplishment in the air. "This is my third convention...but this time I feel more in tune with things," she says.

Other Cohasset natives are attending the G.O.P. Convention for different reasons, but all are being treated to a first-rate welcome. Brunches, pool parties, tours to beer breweries, and interviews with the media are all a part of it, and the hardest decision to make is probably how best to fit everything in.

For Patricia Buckley, Coordinator for the Reagan for President Committee in Cohasset, the convention

Cohasset's week

Advisory reappoints

At a recent meeting of the appointing authority, the following individuals were reappointed to three-year terms on the advisory committee: Mary Jane MacArthur and Jean Cotton.

CS to hear appeal

Late last week former patrolman Douglas Smith of Scituate received notification from Civil Service that it had accepted his request for an appeal to the C.S. ruling that upheld Smith's dismissal from the Cohasset Police Department.

Alexander Matulewicz, Smith's Boston attorney, said he had also appealed to Boston Municipal Court. Civil Service commissioners had agreed to hear oral arguments on behalf of Smith last Tuesday afternoon.

Smith, a patrolman for three years, was dismissed in March 1978 by selectmen after a hearing on two charges against Smith of assault with a dangerous weapon, two charges of being a disorderly person, failing to work a regular shift and calling in sick when the department alleged he was not sick.

3 supt. finalists

Last week the school committee selected three finalists for the position of Cohasset School Supt. The finalists are as follows:

Philip Devaux of South Orange, N.J., superintendent of the Tewksbury, N.J. township schools; Eugene C. Crowell of West Peabody, superintendent of Danvers schools for 10 years and a guidance director and assistant superintendent there for 11 years before that. Also, Nick F. Muto of East Orleans, superintendent of the Nauset Regional School District on Cape Cod for five years and previously an associate superintendent in the Wellesley schools.

Crowell was named as a finalist to be interviewed by all six committeemen. While Muto and Deavaux were on four of six lists. Today, school committeemen were expected to be in New Jersey for a one-day visit in South Orange, visit Danvers on July 29 and the Nauset School District next week in order to conduct background interviews on the home grounds of the candidates.

Yet another round of interviews has been proposed for the second week in August.

Little League title

Little League Coaches Dick Ainslie and Dave Campbell won the Cohasset Little League Title with their Red Sox team in a two out of three series against Bruce Dalrymple's Giants — the first half winners.

Members of the Red Sox team were: Dave Stover, Timmy Campbell, Mike Gentile, Rick Ainslie, Kurt Weisenfluh, Bob Brukin, Kevin Henry, Bill McKenna, Craig Mulcahy, Greg Ferriera, Donald Mulligan, Chris Drinkwater and David Lord.

Police log public

As of Tuesday, July 29, the Cohasset police report for the week will be, unless otherwise provided by law, a public record available without charge to the public during regular business hours and at all other reasonable times.

The police department must keep and maintain daily logs outlining all responses to valid complaints, written in a form which can be easily understood. The log must record, in chronological order, crimes reported, names, addresses of persons arrested and the charges against such person arrested.

Persons needing further information regarding the same should contact Daniel Jaffe, assistant attorney general, at the John McCormack State Office Building in Boston. In a phone interview Friday Jaffee said the right to publish the police report is uninfringeable.

Jet drone rerouted

Senator Allan McKinnon (D-Norfolk and Plymouth) recently met with Robert Whittington, N.E. Regional Director for FAA, and David Davis, executive director of Massport regarding noise impact of the new route on Hull, Scituate, Cohasset and Hingham.

McKinnon said both men agreed to continue efforts to improve impact from new departure procedures. He added: "The FAA outlined a flight path that was to send jets one and a half miles north of Hull. The way the route is currently being flown, planes are often three and four miles off course. They are flying directly over Hull, inflicting loud, disturbing noise. Sometimes planes fly back over Hull again, surrounding the town with a steady jet drone."

Planners look at future Forest Ave. development

Planners and water commissioners are showing concern about potential new subdivisions in all areas of the town. Over the past few days members of both town boards have made their concerns known in particular with a development proposed by Robert Hawker off Forest Avenue.

Hawker, a member of the HMS Development Corporation, proposes to construct a 19-lot subdivision off Forest Avenue adjacent to Cedar Acres Lane. HMS has not yet purchased the land.

The planning board appeared to be fairly well satisfied with plans (revised) submitted by Hawker and his engineer, Neil Murphy, as submitted. The question it took to town counsel Friday, was over a drainage easement for two of the lots Hawker proposes to build upon.

Hawker said at the planner's meeting that he was well aware that present drainage on Cedar Acres is not adequate, but proposed a method by which a new development abutting the same would not add greatly to the problem.

Planning board engineer John Modzelewski advised the board to require Hawker to retain drainage on one or two of the lots, rather than shooting excess drainage down the pipes, which could conceivably cause problems elsewhere.

Hawker's plans show an 18,000 gallon capacity, with an insignificant over-run of 2,000 gallons. "So we're talking about 2,000 gallons storage," Murphy said.

Modzelewski disagreed. "As soon as you start to develop, the conventional (proposed drainage time) will get lower. So right now I think your plan's reasonable."

At the suggestion of Modzelewski, planners said they would ask Town Counsel about the legality of requiring drainage easements on two of the proposed HMS lots. At planners' session, Hawker said he would be against the town's requiring such an easement, saying it would be illegal to require the same of HMS.

Hawker added he wanted some control over the two lots in question, "Should we need those lots for a retention area or to meet further requirements."

Planners will meet with Hawker and HMS regarding the proposal again at 7:45 p.m. Monday, August 4.

Water commissions met with Hawker Monday regarding the same proposal. They also took the matter of water pipe size and hydrants under advisement.

According to Water Commissioner Chairman William Montouri, commissioners requested two hydrants, and a 12-inch pipe as opposed to one hydrant and an 8-inch pipe requested by HMS. Again Montouri said commissioners are concerned over future development in the area.

near future, "Anything costing over $300,000 will require creative financing. The days of cash are gone forever" (in certain price ranges).

Peter Wood of Petersen Realty agrees the housing market has turned 180 degrees from two months ago. While his concern is seeing no creative financing (it's all conventional), "We're tremendously busy. Petersen is experiencing both transferred executive types and local activity. There are buyers in all price ranges."

Wood noted as typical of the new buyer, the executive who flew into Logan, walked off the plane, saw a Petersen ad in the Globe, called Petersen, and bought the house a day later.

Gene Price of Eugene K. Price Realtors said in spite of the fact "They're all walking around like zombies (heat wave) in Boston" (he was in Boston Monday for a closing), houses are definitely moving in Cohasset. "Many people feel the interest prime is bottoming out now. Rates might go up again. So people are realizing that today's market has some of the only bargains which may be around for awhile."

In spite of the fact that things are expected to level off come August and September, Price said he predicts a very optimistic future for the area.

Draft

Whether a tennis court on an abutter's land is a structure or not . . . and the endless police report for the week.

One gentleman who would not be quoted by name said: "I'll tell you why we need wars . . . to occupy the unemployed youth of all nations!"

Another person who would not be quoted by name:"Did you see the Newsweek articles on Russia's youth — the Russians are setting up government-sponsored disco halls to keep them off the streets. Now they're in trouble too!"

Because of the heat, the streets of Cohasset are mostly deserted during the middle of the days, with people doing their banking and shopping in the early hours of the morning.

All men born in 1960 and 1961 must register for the draft this year. Those born after will register next year. Anyone who missed their day to register this week can register tomorrow (Friday).

Those who don't register face up to five years in jail and a $10,000 fine. There will be a 30-day grace period for those failing to register before criminal penalties are considered.

Exceptions to the draft registration are:men already in active military service, foreign students, women and non-permanent residents.

Chief appointment expected

Selectmen were expected to announce the appointment of one of two finalists for the position of Cohasset Police Chief as of Wednesday, July 23 (the day after the Mariner went to press).

Candidates for the position are Pittsfield Police Captain Stanley Stankiewicz and Brockton Police Sergeant John DeBassio.

Although Police Chief Randolph Feola, Sr. has yet to give selectmen a formal announcement regarding retirement, selectmen recently notified Feola via certified mail they expect him to retire at the end of this month.

Feola, who turns 65 July 28, told the Mariner Friday that he had decided against any action with regard to challenging retirement at this time. When asked what all the fuss was about last week, Feola said he'd still like to be able to be reimbursed for 120 unpaid sick days which he accumulated while he was a Cohasset patrolman and before his appointment as chief in June, 1967.

If Feola were to be paid by the town for his accumulated unpaid sick leave days, the sum total of that payment would be approximately $13,000. However, Feola never served under a collective bargaining contract calling for the town to pay the total sum of accumulated sick leave at an individual's retirement.

Over the past 13 years some contracts have been ratified which called for the same. But new men coming into the department are no longer able to accumulate sick days for a bonus at retirement.

Corrections

In two recent articles in the Mariner a spokesman for the dump study committee was incorrectly identified as Jim Tyeryar. The spokesman mentioned was actually Arthur ("Hap") Pompeo. Jim Tyeryar is not a member of the dump study committee.

Last week we inadvertently mentioned the name of a Beechwood resident in the police report for the week. That resident had nothing whatsoever to do with a "lover's dispute" taking place in her neighborhood. But the way in which we wrote it in the Mariner police report made it appear that the dispute took place at the resident's home.

We are sorry for any embarrassment the resident may have been caused by our having incorrectly published the same.

Good by to a friend

All men come to life in their paradoxes.

In particular, those individuals who have both the delight and the despair of serving their communities and town governments learn to deal with a super abundance of conflicting causes and contending circumstances.

Against that kind of practicality, Ed Young of Reservoir Road posed his own belief in an unintimidated ability to deal with abstractions and to engage in "the civilization of the dialogue."

In other words, he got the things done the media, for all of its words and pearly wisdom, can only ventilate about.

Ed had one of the least ambiguous minds of anyone involved in town government. He was also a master of irony and humor. In his own mind and person (and ours) he provided a good example of a man who came into full possession of all his powers early-on and had put his life and even his retirement to an exceptional use.

He provided all of us not with just a reference tool, but with an extended liberal education.

One didn't sit down and have a mindless, friendly, cup-a at the Log with Ed. Hardly. One discussed significant challenges, ideas in town, county and federal government.

Even after the Mariner one day indirectly accused Ed of holding a "cell" meeting, as chairman of the citizens' advisory committee on the sewerage plant site, Ed hailed the reporter and bought her a cup of coffee.

"I did not hold a communist cell meeting."

"You did too. You talked in code."

"Well, I did it for various reasons."

"So write a nasty letter."

"No, I won't. You'll always have the last word, anyway."

Just this time.

This week the empire has been vastly reduced.

Ed's death, Sunday, stands as a symbol of not just a town's but of a nation's loss . . . and of the great contribution just one person can make.

His imprint was wide and deep.

FAA problems meeting July 30

State Representative Mary Jeanette Murray, (R), representing Cohasset, Hingham and Hull has set up a meeting with the Selectmen of Cohasset, Hingham, Hull and Scituate to discuss the problems these towns are having with the Federal Aeronautics Agency.

The meeting is set for the Cohasset Town Hall on Wednesday, July 30 at 8 p.m., in the selectmens' office.

Letters

New health regulations concerns

To the Editor:

I read with interest Bernie Quigley's article entitled, "Health rules moving into the future," on page three of your Thursday, July 10, edition.

Mr. Quigley's interpretation of my interest in attending Board of Health hearings is that I hate horses. Not true, Mr. Quigley. The fact is I care very much what direction our new health regulations will take.

I believe the Board is attempting to clarify the livestock regulations we presently have and to be more specific as to what is expected of horse owners in care and management.

My contention is that no matter how clean a stabling facility or a corral may be kept, the presence of horses may be a nuisance to their human neighbors. I never read, Mr. Quigley, where horses' rights take precedence over human rights.

The Town's regulations regarding setbacks are 50 feet from the corral or stable to lot lines and human habitation. Mr. Quigley states that the Planning Board asked the Board of Health to toughen up on the proximity of horse and people. If that is so, that's not what the Board of Health has proposed to do.

While the Board presently feels setbacks of corral and stable to human habitation of others should remain at 50 feet, it feels that the setback of the corral from lot lines should be reduced to 25 feet. No one can understand fully what this means until it happens to him, and then it will be too late.

The Board has repeatedly asked residents to tell them how they feel about livestock regulations...the residents are not there to be heard. The residents of Cohasset seem to be afflicted with apathy. I believe apathy is a curable disease. Board members are not elected to serve just themselves, but all the people of Cohasset.

When the new hearing is scheduled to review proposed regulations, I would urge everyone to attend the hearing, speak up with his name and address, and express his viewpoint. If a person cannot attend the hearing, or if he doesn't want to wait that long to be heard, address correspondence to the Board of Health at 43 Elm Street.

Fish Fry Association appreciates support

To The Editor:

I would like to thank Tanna Kasperowicz for sticking up for us in the July 17, 1980 issue of the Cohasset Mariner. She did a very good job of it.

But there are a few points I would like to make. About the litter: it would be impossible for us to clean the beach after each day. We tell all of our customers to throw their trash away, the rest is up to them. We have never received a complaint about litter on the beach.

As far as the Little League field is concerned, we park near the left field fence to sell ice cream to the kids at the pool.

If Dr. Hublitz had done some research on his own, before writing his letter, he would have found out (by asking the kids or a life guard) that while one of us is selling ice cream the other is walking around outside the truck, with a box, picking up litter. Once again, we have never received a complaint about litter there either.

It would be impossible to blame us for the litter at the ball field, we have only been to the games twice. The first time, we were asked "nicely" by a lady connected with the Little League to leave. We left. We returned for another game.

This time we were met by the President of the Cohasset Youth Athletic Association, himself. He was flanked by two other men, as if he were expecting violence. I hope he wasn't because the two men looked more like Laurel and Hardy than Mafia strong arms.

Uve F. Hublitz, M.D. told me a story then, and I could have sworn his nose had grown by the time he was through. It was a good fairy tale, all about how the police and the selectmen had forbidden ice cream trucks in the Little League park. He even tried to convince me that he was a policeman himself. I would have loved to have waited for the part where the cow jumps over the moon, but Mr. Gunville and myself were late for play rehearsal.

I read Uve's July 17th letter "with amazement." I was amazed that anyone could draw a parallel between "dirty ballparks" and "boys' and girls' softball teams." It must have been this same logical thinking that prompted him to send copies of his letter to the Log and Line and Pat's Barber Shop. I can see how an ice cream truck would be of interest to them.

I am surprised that the good doctor didn't say anything about the rock and roll music we play on the truck, because it is a well known medical fact that rock and roll music can curve your spine, grow hair on your palms, and make you wheeze and cough a lot. How could anyone expose children, let alone young athletes, to this?

I'd like to say that all of this is pointless, because after examining the contract that Circus Man Ice Cream wanted us to sign, we found that it was both unfair and illegal. Mr. Gunville and myself are no longer "ice cream men." But I wanted to clear the air on this matter.

So Uve, keep up the good work, and keep this country safe for "clean beaches, Little League baseball, motherhood, and apple pie," ok?

Lance R. Norris
President of the Cohasset Chapter of the Fish Fry Association

P.S. I noticed when Uve listed the values of America, he left out truth, I wonder why?

Osgood Library a long-held dream

To The Editor:

I would like to thank the Mariner for the article published last week concerning the new Osgood Library. This on-going metamorphosis of an ordinary classroom into a library has been a long-held dream of many.

Perhaps I have been the catalyst in the change, but the credit for the work should go to others, including those you mentioned in your article: Pat Plante, Dick Ainslie, Liz Glasfeld, Kathy Haas and Ron Bergenheim.

Also, acknowledgement of those omitted is important because the project could not nor will not be completed without their efforts: John Raftery, acting superintendent; Jack Creamer, Osgood principal; Marilyn Pope, children's librarian at Paul Pratt; and the following members of the Osgood Communications Council who have spent many hours planning and painting; Carol Martin, Susan DeMichaels, Korrine Leung, Latisha Jordan, Margie Izeo and Linda Henderson.

At the completion of this project, in late August, we will have an open house for the community. Please watch for announcement of this event.

Cohasset 12-yr-olds beat Plymouth

The Cohasset All Stars put on an amazing performance on July 16 when the 12-yr.-olds beat the Plymouth All-Stars by 11-1 in the first round of the All-Star League playoffs.

David Stover of Cohasset pitched a 5 hitter with 5 strike outs when Cohasset won it in the first inning.

Rep. Mary Jeanette Murray was on hand to throw out the first ball in the game that marked the end of the 33rd season of Little League baseball in Cohasset.

David Bernstein, Cohasset's manager, said the odds of a town of 7,000 were pretty high against towns like Plymouth with 20,000 or more. "I don't know what to say," said Bernstein, "I'm so proud of them."

Cohasset brought in four runs in the first inning to set a big edge that Plymouth couldn't get past.

Kevin Quilty and James Roy each hit home runs and Timothy Campbell, David Stover and Chris Hublitz had two hits apiece for Cohasset. Quilty had another hit to knock in the winning run in the first inning and Jeff O'Neil, Robert Schultz and John Hill had one hit apiece.

Politicians at work—proceed with caution!

By Eric Pearson

WARNING: The next 90 days may be injurious to your health.

The politicians are at it again. Jimmy and his Georgia peaches are playing musical chairs with the Republicans and Democrats alike. They pop up everywhere just like the weeds in my garden and contribute just about as much value with their useless promises.

Then we have "Teddy" and his boys running around like the Keystone Cops of the 20's, shooting off their mouths and missing the target every time.

Alas! There's also John Anderson. The only problem there is that the majority of both parties have already made it absolutely clear that they've had it with liberals — the liberals who put us where we are today.

You haven't been listening, Jim.

Commentary

In the wings we have Ed Muskie. "Them boys" in the smoke-filled rooms of the Senate are hoping Muskie will come up with the marbles at the convention. You really didn't think Jimmy picked him for Secretary of State, did you? The pols know full well Carter is absolutely useless and probably unelectable.

The American people have made it clear that Kennedy's liberal record and questionable morals are not their cup of tea.

John Anderson is flying around in the clouds and seems to be blind to the basic problems we are all facing, as well as the actions that are necessary to correct the problems.

There is hope. You thought there wasn't any hope? Jimmy may fall into a gopher hole on his peanut farm and be gone forever.

Teddy may lose his glasses and then not know what to say. And John may come down out of the clouds and realize that you need money to fund flakey liberal programs and nobody has any.

I'm also hoping that the media stops its distorted coverage and reporting and gets back to telling us both sides of every story and not just what it believes we should know.

As for Congress and its fence-riding actions this year, I am absolutely fed up. The time has come for each and every one of us to tell these politicians to get rid of the give-away programs that don't work.

Voting for every ding-a-ling program won't get anyone elected anymore. Sojourning around the world won't get the job done at home.

Let's remind our pols and would-be pols that the money they run their campaigns with comes not from the minority they always seem to support, but from those of us who have to work for a living. We're not only sick of supporting people who aren't willing to do their share — we won't elect people to public office whose only answer to a new problem is a new program.

Some say life is the thing...but she prefers reading

By Tanna Kasperowicz

She's working as a housekeeper for a family on South Main Street this summer...the Mullen family. But she forgot to ask about the pay.

She doesn't have a suntan yet...it's not important to her. Besides, she's been too busy to spend her days frolicking at the beach.

Alexandra Mullen is into philosophy, linguistics, music, dance, choreography. She plays the violin and the flute. Chris Williams, her mentor, competitor and friend beat her out of first place in a South Shore Music Conservatory competition. She'll always remember that, Chris.

Smile for a camera — come-on, give us your best, West coaster — our photographer (he's got to find a new line, I think) tells her. "This is my best smile... I always look stiff!" Alexandra has a nice giggle... she's a fun interviewee because she likes to talk about everything, although she sometimes goes so quickly we end up missing a lot of her comments.

In spite of her being a National Merit Scholar, a member of the National Honor Society, and having been accepted by Brown University...an acceptance she refused when she fell in love with the curriculum at St. John's in Annapolis, Maryland...she's always amazed that she did quite that well.

She won one of two dramatic awards for her performance in Cagebirds, a CHS competition play. "Cagebirds was the first play I had ever been in not counting The Boy Friend (another CHS production) and Girl Scout productions."

She took the most advanced placement tests at CHS...then found out that St. John's doesn't accept

Dental Dialogue
TAKES TWO TEETH TO TANGO
Q. I am told that if you can avoid it, you should never lose any teeth in your mouth. Why?
A. Each tooth plays a very important role with the other teeth. A tooth below needs a tooth above to chew properly, and vice versa. Each tooth interacts with its neighbor to help support the other, and to create a "contact" to prevent food from lodging against the gums. The loss of one tooth, can cause the breakdown of an entire mouth. Just as in all relationships, it takes two to tango, in this case it takes thirty-two.

This column is presented in the interest of better dental health. From the office of

around town

☐Rainbows, sea creatures and coastal fantasies will soon find their way to the fresh, white walls of the new Osgood library. Parent-painters Carol Martin, Susan DeMichele, Marge Izzo, Letitia Jordan, Corrine Leung, and Linda Henderson, have been working away at school and extend an invitation to anyone who likes to paint to join them over the summer. Call 383-6577.

☐Jim Hoy will stop smoking on August 4!

☐Peter Chapman of Old Coach Road was named director of accounting and auditing at Livingston Haynes in Wellesley, a regional New England firm of CPA's. He also continues as director of management advisory services. Nice going, Peter!

☐"Captain" is presently at the Concord Reformatory and he's sorry. Apologies or not, if he doesn't behave after his current rehabilitation, he's going into cans!

("Captain" is Kathy Morgan's horse who is getting his last chance to learn better manners (he likes to throw his riders off). Horsemeat comes in cans, but we don't believe Kathy's that horseless!)

☐St. Anthony's sopranos and altos gathered at Rita and Tom Burke's home a week ago Saturday for their end-of-year pot luck supper. As expected, they gathered round the piano for some vocal exercise, but they harmonized to popular tunes (mostly Irish ones) which is not their usual fare; Sunday morning hymns, accompanied by Tom Bunting, their choir director.

☐Bob Davenport says he does not take tranquilizers before teaching his adult sailing classes at the Cohasset Sailing Club.

☐Happy Birthday, Barry Bronstein — July 22!!

☐His playmates are sad, but now that the coupons are all gone (we're joking), he's off to Danvers to his new job. If you've missed Chet Ellis around town, it's because he is very busy as the marketing manager of E.P.C. Labs, manufacturer of graphic recorders for the off-shore oil exploration industry. Their other market is oceanographic research and also the display of processed information from Navy sonar. Congratulations to a guy who deserves to work!

☐In the good old days, Music Circus stars slept in Cohasset homes and folks got to know the celebrities off-stage. Things are different now; bigger stars travel with a larger entourage and are more easily accommodated by motels.

Mark Lavange, your mother told you not to do that ever again! [Derr photo]

Playtime for the singers and comedians who entertain under the big tent still provides an occasional opportunity for the old familiarity.

☐Lowry and Diana Bell of Gammons Road and Lou Von Karl, a Music Circus employee from Scituate, hosted a few sets of tennis for Bill Cosby two weeks ago. Cosby, who is fun on the court, but takes his tennis seriously, is quite relaxed about showtime. He arrived at Mrs. William Cox's tennis court at 2:45 p.m., played until close to 4 p.m., and casually arrived on stage in his tennis clothes! After a very funny and entertaining show, he went back out for more tennis with the Hill family and again kept them laughing for the 8 p.m. performance.

Diana Bell described Cosby as "a very nice player with some beautiful shots; in all, a delightful man."

☐The Bells seem to have a knack for being in the right place at the right time. During the Tall Ships celebration, they met the Captain of the Christian Radich, Jon Hanson, and invited him to Cohasset for a visit. Captain Hanson, some of his officers and two people from a Norwegian T.V. crew had lunch at the Bell's, along with Charlie and Marilyn Humphreys and their son, Chuck. The visitors from Norway particularly enjoyed the ride, by boat, back to their tall ship! (The Christian Radich won the race to Oslo!)

☐There's no lack of talent in Cohasset! Wayne Barcomb began his role of Nathan Detroit, the comic male lead in "Guys and Dolls" which opened Monday at the Old Colony Theatre in Plymouth.

A fifteen year pro at amateur and community theatre, Wayne knows this show well. He has performed in it for the Hingham Civic Chorus and he and his wife, Ginny, starred in it a few years back at the Cohasset Community Center. His specialty is comedy and he's done 20 such shows with the Cohasset Drama Club; he's also worked with the Curtain Call Theatre in Braintree.

In addition to the plays that Wayne and Ginny have done together, they both also worked recently on a television documentary on alcoholism for Channel 6 which will be aired in September. "Nobody Says Hello Anymore" also features Chet Ellis and Ube DiBenedetto.

Wayne is taking a week's vacation from his job as president of the Kent Publishing Company to lend his experience and talent to the Old Colony Theatre, a resident summer repertory company in Plymouth. He will be on stage amusing the audiences every evening at 8:30 p.m. through Saturday, July 26.

☐Happy birthday to Chief Feola — July 28!

☐Bobbie Cox, and her birthday present, Patrick, celebrate together on July 28 — have a great day!

WHEN BLOOD DOES NOT CLOT!
Hemophilia is a hereditary disease in which the blood will not clot. This can frequently be controlled by giving blood plasma or special agents that counteract bleeding. A minor scratch or bruise may be very serious if this is not done.
Often in emergency situations, blood transfusions save lives. However, a person may die if the wrong type of blood is given. Persons having a blood problem or a very rare blood type should wear some sort of tag to make this information known in an emergency.

Bates Wharf restored to former stature

By Chet Ellis

As you may have noticed, the rebuilding of Bates Wharf, the stone structure located between Hugos Lighthouse and the town landing is complete.

After four months of piling stone upon stone, mixing and pouring bag after bag of concrete, and placing cobblestone next to cobblestone, the marine abutment affectionately known as "Bates Wharf," "Salt House Pier," or "Cox's Dock," has been restored to its former stature among the harbor's prominent structures.

The project was carried out by the Cohasset Conservation Trust, a private, non-profit organization set up under Massachusetts state law to protect and administer property of historical or esthetic value donated to the trust for the benefit of the community.

The work was financed by a generous contribution from Jessie Cox, who donated the property to the trust in 1976, and carried out by Anthony "Scout" Barbuto of Hingham, the excavation and masonary contractor. Kudos for both are in order.

Two local men, Lee Jenkins of Forest Avenue and Herb Towle of South Main Street installed the fuel service and electrical service respectively.

Ray Gaffey, owner of Mill River Marine has rented the property from the Conservation Trust and will provide complete marine services starting, he estimates, by the end of the first week in August, 1980.

The first floor of the Salt House will contain a complete marine hardware store and ship chandlery. The second floor will be utilized as offices for Gaffey's yacht brokerage business.

Fuel (gasoline and diesel), water, and general light marine services will be available from the wharf.

Upon completion of the project, the Conservation Trust, owners of the property, asked Mr. Robert Fraser, curator of the Cohasset Maritime Museum, to dig out what he could of the history of the ancient structure. Herein lies the story.

Japanese Beetles.

Bait 'em.
Bag 'em.
Throw 'em away!
An incredibly effective answer to Japanese Beetle infestation. BAG-A-BUG™ Japanese Beetle Trap eliminates the hazard and mess of chemical sprays and is demonstrably more effective than other traps in attracting beetles.
- Proven effective dual-lure bait system combines floral scent with a unique sexual attractant to draw up to five times as many beetles as single-lure traps.
- Beetles fly into the BAG-A-BUG trap collecting vanes—fall into the bag and die.
- When full, you replace the disposable bag.

All-Star swim team beats Hanson 325-150

By Bernie Quigley

The agony of defeat, says Abbie White, is okay for college, but not for six year olds. And with that philosophy Cohasset's all-star swim team beat Hanson 325 to 150 last Friday afternoon.

Even the 6-yr. olds were impressive. Some ran off between their events and came back from the refreshment stand with cookies, but breaks in training aside, they were more at home in the water than on land. Or on the diving board. Eight-yr.-old Greg Delaney could give lessons in the full twist to well-coordinated grown ups.

Abbie White, who coaches the Cohasset Swim Team, and Brenda Birman, assistant coach, are as pleased with their loss to Boston College's summer team last week as they are with this victory.

Abbie is a junior at Boston College, and knows some of the competition. They lost that meet 309 to 204, but Cohasset's 16 yr. olds swam against some 18 yr. olds. Good ones; some of whom are headed for the nationals. So such a fine defeat brings little agony.

This year the Cohasset Swim Team has withdrawn from their usual league, a small league that includes only two other teams: Hanover and Aqueduct. They are on a leave of absence to play other clubs for the experience, and so everyone will get a chance to swim.

Most swim teams have 70 people, but Cohasset, with 170 has divided it's group into three intramural teams; the blues, the whites and the greens, who swim against one another throughout the summer. From the three intramural teams the all-stars are picked who are swimming against a variety of teams this summer.

Steven Camardo, captain of the greens who swims with the 14 and unders, is a whirlwind. He's already broken three pool records. Missy Barcomb is captain of the blues and Christine Birmann is captain of the whites. They both swim with the 16 and unders.

The competitive swims are divided into boys and girls, and then in age groups 16 and under, 14 and under, 10 and under and 8 and under.

Some of the 16 and unders who reach the magic age make a comeback in a different capacity. Coach Birman was among the ace 16 yr. olds last year, and diving coach Erin O'Brien is also a veteran.

"What do you do to teach that very hard looking dive where you flip out in front, spin up and fall forward?" Erin was asked.

She shrugged her shoulders: "Where your head goes, your body follows," she said.

"That's all it takes?"

"Guts," said Abbie.

Then Erin stood backwards on the board, and with an imperceptible spring defied gravity and touched her toes in a perfect jackknife, upside down, and cut the water without a splash, without a sound. Guts . . and practice.

When Cohasset's swimmers are not working on their turns, practicing their starts and "legalizing their kicks" (keeping the feet under water) they will be preparing a stage production of Mary Poppins.

They are trying to raise money to cover the new lane markers bought this year and other expenses. They are also selling McDonald's tickets for the same benefit.

The play will take place on August 15 to 17 and will have a cast of 70, out of the water and onto the stage. These kids not only swim, they sing and dance! And have fun, win, lose or draw.

Diving Coach Erin O'Brien shows the Cohasset Swim Team how it's done...Missy Barcomb shows off a back dive in layout position.

Convention

is "an exciting experience". A Reagan Alternate, the convention offers her a chance to root for her favorite candidate and look forward to the selection of the Vice Presidential running mate.

"I hope it's Kemp," she says. There is nothing subtle about her preference and others surrounding her. She wears a Reagan — Kemp button and is shortly afterward holding a Reagan — Kemp sign which is seen everywhere in the convention hall.

"This is my first convention, and I'm following every session closely. We've had a wonderful reception from Plymouth and Detroit," she adds.

David E. Place, Chairman of the Arrangements Committee and an attorney at Gaston Snow and Ely Bartlett, thinks that the 1980 convention is one that "seeks intelligent harmony." A long-time supporter of the Republican Party, beginning in 1940 as National Chairman at Harvard for Wilkie, Place says that this particular convention is well-run and a good example of American politics in action.

"Because there is no contest, it isn't as exciting or tense as it might be. There is however a conciliation that brings Republicans working together much more than in 1976."

Place is optimistic that Reagan can appeal to voters of different ranges. "Reagan appears to be a moderate," he says. "In fact people are misreading him in thinking him to be a conservative. The people around him are so vocal and extreme that the impression is that he's an arch conservative. This is wrong."

"The top men speaking for him are very impressive," he concludes. Men such as Rumsfeld, Kissinger, Simon and Connally are very competent and are not extreme nuts."

Heading the special public relations projects for the Massachusetts Delegation, Richard Silvia is keeping extremely busy arranging television and radio interviews. He's lined up interviews with Channel 4 (WBZ-TV) and Massachusetts natives Polly Logan, Sheriff John Buckley, and Rep. Silvio Conte, and is finding no time for leisure but is enjoying the work.

"I don't sleep, and I'm getting ideas cooking all of the time," says Silvia, a Cohasset resident and owner of Silvia's Garage. "The most exciting part of this convention is seeing all of these young energetic people working."

Silvia, who works as an engineer for I.B.M. and also works part-time in public relations, is hopeful about the convention's outcome. "The nation's in trouble, and we're trying to save the country. We're putting a team together and we're taking the best players," he says. There is a hard-line platform, but that's not as important as the candidates and the philosophies of the candidates, he concludes.

For Eleanor Bleakie, who is helping with the housing of the Massachusetts Delegation, the convention is too cut and dry. "I'd like to see a nice floor fight," she says and one where there's more choice."

More interesting was the E.R.A. march, she says. "I marched in it with Sheriff John Buckley (Anderson Delegate) and Rep. Margaret Heckler (Bush Delegate)...Reagan's meeting with the E.R.A. people, and I hope that it will be positive," she adds.

Susan Crocker, a student and Cohasset resident who is working as a page, is enjoying the sensation of being close to all of the action. As a messenger for the Massachusetts Delegation, she enjoys the pomp and circumstance of the bands, applause, and presentations.

Having access to the floor of the convention hall for a few hours each day has been a good learning experience, she says. "I love to be a part of it," she adds.

Attending the convention also are Rita Strong, Vice Chairman of the Cohasset Republican Town Committee, and Kenneth Ralff, a member of the Youth for Reagan organization. Add their experiences, and it's bound to be a convention that will be talked about for a long time to come among the people in Cohasset.

advanced placements. "Even if you transfer in, you have to start out as a freshman. Even people with doctorates start out as freshmen."

At St. John's she'll start out with philosophy, math, science, art literature...starting with the Greeks through Einstein. A lot of her friends thought she was crazy to reject Brown...especially with her musical background. But she's really very booky. When she went down for her on-campus interview she sat in on a freshman philosophy class. "Here was this long-haired person, really druggy person, who flipped in his quiz paper first...and I thought, what's he doing in this school? It turned out he was the smartest one in the class. I guess you can't tell very much of anything from appearances. That taught me something."

But she does love music. And Peabody Conservatory is just one half hour away from St. John's. Annapolis has a civic orchestra where she plans to spend not a little off-campus time. "I'll just create my own music outside the college."

St. John's trains the mind..."But I'll have to go to graduate school in order to have a profession. If after two years I decide what I want to do, maybe premed, I can transfer out. There's no problem transferring out. I'll probably go into teaching. But I don't know how I'll stand up at the college level."

She enjoys ideas...theory, but not the practice, of any mathematical problem. "I cannot do a computer program to save my life. But I like the mental side of anything...medicine in particular."

She recently read that the difference between hysterical paralysis and a real paraplegic is that "A really paralyzed person gets really hysterical when he finds out he is paralyzed." According to Alexandra ...a group of doctors testing out that theory threw several paralyzed persons into a deep water-filled tank. The ones who didn't surface were really paralyzed.

She loved being in and working with the Godspell cast..."A lot of the play was ad-libbed. Mr. Emmons said we could ad-lib anything we wanted up until the last week. She practiced all the movements on her younger sisters.

And she's happy now, that years ago when she had a tantrum in the car over going to dance lessons her mother didn't let her quit. "My mother kept prompting me not to give up."

Alexandra is the first-born of Dr. and Mrs. James Mullen. Dr. Mullen has played trombone with the Brockton Symphony Orchestra for over 30 years. He is a research physicist. Olive Mullen is a teacher of piano, a graduate of Wheaton and Skidmore Colleges.

from the kitchen

By Joan Pinkham

Men are flocking to the hitchen these days, learning their way with pots and pans in what was once strictly female territory. That they are taking over is cause for delight for most wives and they relinquish their post at the stove with amazing grace. Because they are both fully involved in the family concern selling medical instruments, Ann and Dick Kolar share meal preparations, while their five children aged 11 to 16 do the housework. Here is Dick's way with a most pleasing addition to a beef roast or sirloin called

BERNAISE SAUCE

2 T white wine
1 T tarragon vinegar
2 tsp. chopped tarragon
2 tsp. chopped shallots or onions
1/4 tsp. ground black pepper
1/2 c. butter
3 egg yolks
2 T lemon juice
1/4 tsp. salt
Pinch cayenne pepper

1. Combine wine, vinegar, tarragon, shallots and pepper in a skillet. Bring to a boil and cook rapidly until most of liquid disappears.

2. In small saucepan heat the butter to bubbling, but do not brown.

3. Place egg yolks, lemon juice, salt and cayenne in container of electric blender. Cover container and flick the motor on and off at high speed. Remove cover. Turn motor on high and gradually add hot butter.

4. Add the herb mixture. Cover and blend on high speed four seconds.

Three or four times a week, John Burchill takes over the kitchen to prepare the evening meal. "If I had to do it, I probably wouldn't enjoy it that much," says the former president of the Neptune Skin Diving Club. Clams and lobster were steaming the other night, bounty of the sea that he had brought home from his latest dive at the mouth of the North River. As with most men, he is very casual about his cooking skills, doing it effortlessly and enjoying the creativity involved while preparing such dishes as

OYSTERS ROCKEFELLER

2 doz. oysters — split
2c. frozen spinach
4 T minced onion, or to taste
Fresh minced parsley
Celery salt and salt and pepper, also to taste
Tabasco sauce, approx. 4 or 5 drops on each oyster
Mix together onion, parsley and spinach and fill each shell. Top with bread crumbs and dot with butter. Place on tray. Bake at 375 degrees for approx. 10 min.

Also at home on the range is Vin Gilarde whose wife, Eva, often arrives home to find dinner preparations well under way. Men who like to cook as a hobby are often more likely to produce better meals than those wives who just go through the motions three times a day. Not that this is so with Eva, a good cook in her own right, but perhaps coming home to the security of one's own kitchen is a great way for a man to unwind. The following dish is Vin's adaption of a dish they both enjoyed at Lily's in Fanuel Market and is called

CHICKEN WITH RICOTTA CHEESE

4 boneless chicken breasts
1 lb. ricotta cheese
4 slices ham, sliced thin
1 can artichoke hearts, sliced
1/4 lb. fresh mushrooms, sliced thin
Bread crumbs
1 egg
Flour

Pound chicken breasts until thin. Dredge with flour. Layer each breast with a slice of ham. On top of ham spread a generous amount of ricotta. Then spread on a layer of mushrooms and sliced artichokes. Fold chicken and secure with toothpicks. Soak folded breasts in egg and dredge in breadcrumbs. Bake at 350 degrees for 30 to 45 min. Serves four.

Angler's Corner

By Lindy Blaisdell

DREAM TRIP

Picture yourself camping under the stars surrounded by laughing loons. Fishing daily to an audience of deer, moose, beaver, muskrat, raccoons, bald eagles, raven, king fishers and nesting ducks and geese.

Cursing brook trout and white perch for taking your lure whale for small mouth bass and land lock salmon up to four pounds.

Arm weary at day's end from paddling, casting and catching you save just enough energy to cook a stream-side fish supper. Then retire only to do it all over again next day.

John Strunk of Scituate along with Bob Sarios and Jim Scace did all that and more for 10 days in Maine's Washington County a few weeks ago.

The trio made the long trip to Forest City (next to the New Brunswick border) and float-fished down Spednik Lake in two canoes to Vanceboro. They portaged at Vanceboro over into the St. Croix River. Continuing on for another 40 miles through the Lambert Lakes Region they hit upon white water at Tyler and Rocky Rips.

The trip went on into the Township of Dyer. More white water at Meetinghouse Rips then a rest at Grassy Islands which marked the halfway point of their trip. Some more fast water at Hancock Rips, then open water with lots of bass and perch.

Canoose Rips led to Dog Falls and into Fowler Township. Many small streams and brooks feed the St. Croix in Fowler making that section low and boggy. Nearing the end of their trip they paddled into Grand Falls Flowage where pickerel were added to the fish list.

Washington County is known for its pickerel. It is the only county in the nation you can legally catch and sell the scrappy critters.

John estimates they caught over 400 fish, keeping only enough to eat. The white perch were large (not surprising since the world record white perch came out of Maine's Massalonski Lake. It weighed four and a half pounds.)

Rapala's, Mepp's and streamer flys accounted for 90% of the fish.

The black flys were present but not as bad as the mosquitoes.

As I talked to John he was making plans to return to Maine and fish Scraggly Lake. Scraggly has the reputation of tops in the U.S. for smallmouth bass.

Wonder if he is taking applications?

BIG FISH

Tim Farrell of Scituate landed and released an eight and a half pound large mouth bass last week in the Agawam River.

LOTS OF FISH

The heat wave has not only put lots of MARINER residents in the ocean. It has also brought the bluefish over from P. Town. Blues up to 12 pounds are from the power plant in Plymouth to Hull Gut. Lots of mackerel around and pogeys fill all the harbors daily.

The blues came just in time. Flounder have moved out. A few small ones still being caught off Duxbury Bridge.

Tuna are starting to take bait

Politics irresistible , volatile topic

By Lois Martin

Last week two people met for a pleasant evening together. But long before the mellow glow of 10 p.m the gentleman left in a huff, a tiff having evolved because of a discussion.

Politics. They should have known better. But some find the topic irrestible. Certainly during the week of the Republican Convention, it's been irrespressible. Yet there's not an American among us who hasn't been forwarned about the inherent loss of friendship with political repartee. In the above mentioned case, it is reported the man spoke disparagingly of Ronald Reagan's foreign policies. Though no mention was said to have been made about his hair pigment, the man's presidential timber was challenged. And the woman, upholding Reagan's point of view, took umbrage.

PATCHES

Ah well. Who among us hasn't had a few extreme political persuasions. I've come to believe most of us feel better about ourselves, a part of the flow, if we're on somebody's bandwagon. You can take the most conservative person in the world (from any party) and send him to a political convention. Then watch him show up on the Wednesday night broadcast with a foolish campaign hat topped by a pink elephant playing a drum.

That's somebody's delegate. Last week I watched the delegates, those entrusted with nominating the party's candidate and forming the platform on which he'll run. By Wednesday they have become part of another world. Grandmothers in tee shirts wave little tin horns, buttons, and everything on top of that hat that'll balance while she jumps up and down during a demonstration.

The men seem to dedicate themselves to pronosticating. They keep those cigars going and work to sustain evasive, nonetheless effusive, spouting of sagacious political insight.

Most of us would like an explanation from all the major television networks as to why they have to show us everything that happened in Detroit Bad enough we were all privy to Nancy's falling down (may we all arise from life's falls with such grace).

It was in 1952 I first became aware of political conventions. I turned on my radio, which spoke of people like Robert Taft, Harold Stassen and Tom Dewey. Even then there was a certain magneticism about the hoopla, which has redrawn our attention every four years.

Something, I guess, about the subject. Everyone can play. No qualifications are set on having political opinions and favorites. Each one of us is the expert on our persuasions. There's a joke about an old woman who went down to Town Hall in her waning years to change her voter registration. The clerk was distraught that the dear soul would switch from her lifelong Republicanism. But the reason behind the switch, said the voter, was "When I die, I'd rather the Democrats lose one of them, than that the Republicans lost one of us."

Amazing to me that political candidates who unleased vitriolic charges against one another in March, can embrace at a podium in July. They've called each other nincompoops in their own inimitable style. But come convention time for the party, past differences are forgotten, repressed and usually denied.

But that seldom happens with the common people who broke up an evening over a candidate's qualifications. The voter isn't nearly so quick to forgive another person unkind or differing opinions swapped in conversation.

We aren't happy until we've dissected the candidates' families. Surely we've been told everything there is to be known about Nancy Reagan. Some meanmouths say she makes Pat Nixon look vivacious. And when there was talk about Jerry Ford running alongside, not two paces behind, Ronnie, I was taken aback. I just knew it was only a matter of time before a cartoonist would draw a picture of the Fords and Reagans in Lincoln's big bed in the White House with Jerry saying he preferred the other side.

But I'm heartened to learn Nancy Reagan does a lot of her thinking in the bathtub. That's telling . . . in more ways than one. Because I've always considered the tub a place for gaining the best of one's own counsel.

Still the convention outdid all previous efforts at show biz. For a while I thought we'd tuned into a program called "Hollywood and how its glory faded." But when Donnie and Marie came on I knew how the ERA and abortion issues would be settled.

In many ways it's like the Olympics with only a few sports surviving. Or maybe it's more reminiscent of the Miss America contest with Walter Cronkite taking the role of Bert Parks. The primaries are kind of the bathing suit and evening gown competitions. And the final hours are the personality part with only one to wear the crown.

But the explosive nature of political conversations has not changed. Years ago, during the 1968 campaign, I argued with the person on the other side of the breakfast table about the validity of the Humphrey/Muskie ticket. By the time his carpool arrived, we were deadlocked on several domestic issues.

So by suppertime I was ready to picket more effectively. I put a big graphic poster right over his place in the kitchen with my own opinions about his campaign platform. We enjoyed the minor convention foray and haven't been that revved up about a national election since.

So it seems we can't help ourselves. We're bound to talk about politics. But be careful. Few of the men running would want you to lose your friends in their behalf. (The rest of them would expect you to do so.) Protect your relationships. Don't talk politics all the time this summer. Switch to religion now and then.
